Set among the rolling hills of the Brandywine Valley, the Brinton 1704 House has been called one of the most authentic restorations in Pennsylvania and its neighboring states.

In 1684 Quaker farmer, William Brinton the Elder, arrived here from England with his wife and 14-year-old son, determined to start a new life based upon peace and freedom. Surviving an initial winter in a nearby cave, father and son built a plank cabin and began to farm the 400 acres subsequently granted by William Penn's agent. In 1704, to accommodate his wife and growing family, the younger William Brinton built this stone house based upon his recollections of medieval English architecture. What resulted was a home of uncommon grace.

Room-by-room inventories, taken at the death of the builder in 1751, provided his descendants with an unusually authentic basis upon which the restored house is furnished. There is a feeling that this is a home rather than a museum.

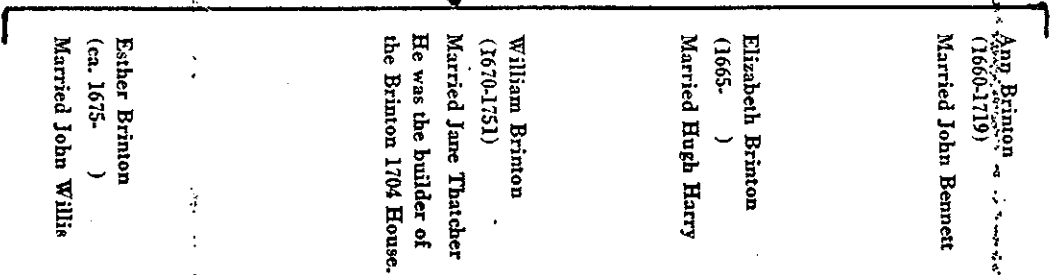

Twenty-seven leaded casement windows, plentiful closets, an indoor bake-oven, raised hearths and a colonial herb garden are among the many notable features.

His lineal descendant removed to Staffordshire about 1450." -- Dr. Daniel G. Brinton.
