LONG LIFE ENDS

Thomas P. May, of Pike County, is Dead

Member of Noted Pioneer
Kentucky Family

ANCESTORS WERE AMONG FIRST
SETTLERS IN STATE

IN NINETY-FOURTH YEAR

Pikeville, Ky., Sept. 3.-(Special.)- There passed away Sunday, August 23, 1910, at his country home, on Johns Creek in this (Pike) county, Thomas P. May, the oldest citizen of the county at the time of his death. He was born August 3, 1816, on Robinson Creek, then Floyd, now in Pike County, twelve miles south of Pikeville, where his father, Thomas May, settled in 1813, and lived until his death September 3, 1867. Thomas P. May was the third of a family of thirteen children, all of whom lived to a great age, Thomas P. being the last survivor, who died in the house where he had lived continuously for sixty-three years. He was one of those pioneers who lived in two centuries and saw the former primitive methods of travel, locomotion and transportation give place to the present perfected ingenuity of man. He lived to learn that electric messages could be sent and man could sail through the air.

Like Ancient History

Like Ancient history is 1816. This is three years before the first ship crossed the ocean with the aid of steam. It was in 1830 that work began in the United States on the first railroad built for the use of steam locomotives. The sewing machine had not been invented until long after. The tallowdip and the pine knot were the means of furnishing artificial light for the use of the people of those early times. Not even "standard" oil had made its appearance. The gas light and the electric light were many years off. The deadly automobile had not come on the stage to skid and turn turtle and kill its occupants by throwing them against a telegraph or telephone pole. People in New York could not talk to Chicago across the long stretch of country then. A wire could not be sent around the world in a few seconds. At that time the scream of the ~~wild~~ panther, the growl of the bear and the mountain lion and the whistle of the deer could be heard from the doors of the one-room log cabins as they roamed at will through the almost unbroken wilderness.

Neighborhoods Far Apart

Neighborhoods were far apart, and often people had to travel several miles to a neighbor's house to borrow fire. Yes, there were no matches in those days; only the "flint and punk", when they could be obtained, were the means or instruments resorted to for producing fire. The buffalo and the Indian had just been driven out of the country westward a few hundred miles, leaving their well-marked traces behind which could be seen for many years. The nearest store at which merchandise could be had was at the site of the present town of Louisa, seventy-nine miles away. Salt for the family use was obtained at the Goose Creek Salt Works, in what is now Clay County, Kentucky, and transported on horse-back over the mountains on roads that were mere "bridal paths", often following the Indian and buffalo trails.

Game of Every Kind Plentiful

Game of every kind was plentiful, and was the principal source of the meat eaten by the settlers. His father, Thomas May, could stand in his cabin door, and with his trusty flint-lock--a necessary adjunct to every well-regulated household in those times--kill a three-snag buck for breakfast. What a transition in the life time of Thomas P. May! He lived to read of men, like birds, flying through the air; to see perfected the steam and electric railroads; ships like palaces plowing across the ocean with almost the speed of the railroad trains, and news sent through space without a visible conductor. Few men, like him, have been permitted to witness, within a lifetime, the greatest progress and achievements in the arts, sciences, inventions, discoveries and developments, made in any age of the world.

Saw Halley's Comet Twice

He saw Halley's comet twice in its seventy-five year swing through unknown space. He saw the expansion of the territory of the United States from a few States on the Atlantic to forty-eight, extending to the Pacific, and lived under the administration of twenty Presidents, including the year and a half of President Taft. James May, the father of Thomas May and the grandfather of Thomas P. May was born in Germany, and he, with two other brothers, came to the United States before the Revolutionary War, landing at Baltimore, where they parted, never to see each other again. John ~~May~~ May, one of the brothers, seems to have settled in Kanawha County, Virginia, now West Virginia, from which he made many visits to what is now the city of Maysville, and to Mayslick, Mason County, then Bourbon County, Kentucky, where he pre-empted and patented several hundred acres of good land. He was the original owner of May's Lick (Mayslick), and also one of the original owners, by patent (Simon Kenton being the other) of the land where Maysville (originally Limestone) is now located, and from whom this city also derives its name. This town was the third established by the Virginia Legislature, in what is now Mason County, "on the lower side of Limestone Creek, in the county of Bourbon, on 100 acres, the property of John May and Simon Canton" (Kenton). Daniel Boone was one of the six trustees appointed to lay off the land into half-acre lots and sell them at public auction. He lived at Maysville in 1797 and 1798. He was at May's Lick as early as 1782. In 1797 he packed his belongings, and with pack horses set out for Missouri, then the Territory of Upper Louisiana, from ~~where~~ whence he never returned to the beautiful country of Kentucky which he had helped to wrest from the hands of the savage foes of the white man.

Killed and Scalped By Indians

John May was killed and scalped by the Indians on a boat as he, with others, were descending the Ohio, some place between Maysville and the mouth of the Scioto River, March 20, 1790. This is a matter of history and a traditional fact well known to Thomas P. May. The celebrated Judge Harry Innes, of Frankfort, who afterward became one of the Judges of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, as the agent and attorney of John May, advertised, in the Kentucky Gazette of March 22, 1788, "for sale a tract of land containing 1,400 acres on the waters on the north fork of Licking, lying on the road from Limestone to the Lower Blue Licks--being May's settlement and pre-emption, and includes May's Lick." This John May was the great-uncle of Thomas P. May.

Remarkable Family

Thomas May, the father of Thomas P., was born in the State of Virginia February 2, 1767; came to Kentucky, married Dorcas Patton, of Floyd County, and settled on a farm on Robinson Creek, then in Floyd County, as stated above. He was a poor man at the time of his marriage, but by native industry and frugality accumulated quite a landed estate before his death. In the times in which he lived it was the fashion of big families and there were born to him and his good wife thirteen children, as follows: Daniel, born May 29, 1814; Reuben, born June 23, 1815; Thomas P., born August 3, 1816; Cynthia, born October 7, 1817; William J., born January 9, 1819; Samuel, born April 1, 1820; John born June 3, 1821; Sally born December 6, 1822; Henry born March 2, 1824; Harvey, born April 27, 1825; Dorcas, born September 7, 1826; David, born February 3, 1828; Mary, born March 18, 1830. It will be noticed that, with two exceptions, only a little more than a year elapsed between the births of these children, and had Col. Roosevelt lived in that day and time no doubt he would have been "de-lighted" with the effort of Thomas May to prevent race suicide.

History of Family

Three of the sons of Thomas May fought through the late Civil War, Reuben on the Federal Side and Henry and David on the Confederate side. David was killed in the battle of Cynthiana, Kentucky, June 12, 1864, leaving another large family.. One of the daughters married James P. Murrs, a leading attorney of this place, formerly of Whitesburg, Kentucky, and who was Commonwealth's Attorney for six years in the district under the old system.

Several of the Mays were at different times members of the Senate and House of Representatives of Kentucky. The novelist, Louisa M. Alcott, of Massachusetts was a relative of the May family. Thomas P. May was a local minister of the M. E. Church, South, of which church he had been a member since his early manhood. He was made a Master Mason in Zebulon Lodge, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, in 1857, and was the last surviving charter member of Thomas C. Cecil Lodge, No. 375, of Pikeville, chartered in 1860.

He was buried in the family graveyard, on John's Creek, this county, August 29, 1910, by the Masonic order. At the time of his death Thomas P. May was living with his youngest son, William R. May, on the old homestead, which he had given to his son some years ago to care for and support him and his wife during the remainder of their lives. His wife was a Miss Lesley, a member of a leading and pioneer family of Pike County, who preceded him to the grave some 1 year, 7 months and 9 days ago. A family of eight children were born into this union, five of whom, to wit, Cynthia Williams, wife of U. K. Williams, of Pikeville; A. J. May, of Salem, Oregon; Mary Florence Denton, Elizabeth Harvey and William R. May, of Pike County, survive him.
