foreword

Early in the summer of 1835, William Wilson and his family, together with three of his married daughters and their families, formed a colony of about twenty-five persons that moved from Bedford County, Virginia, to Hendricks County, Indiana, and settled in what is known as the White Lick neighborhood. Here they purchased land, established their home, and became a part of the community life of the neighborhood. Today many of the descendants of this family live in Hendricks County or adjoining ones.

That these descendants may have a permanent and authentic record of the early history and the genealogy of the family, we have prepared this short history and we hand you herewith the following facts and information, which, we trust, will be preserved.

We desire to express to the Wa-pe-ke-way Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution our appreciation of the courtesy and co-operation shown by the local chapter in officially recognizing and marking the grave of Nancy Mitchell Wilson as a daughter of a Revolutionary soldier and for the beautiful marker placed upon her grave.

The Wilson Family in Indiana

WILLIAM WILSON

Little authentic information is available concerning the early life of William Wilson or his family. He lived in Bedford County, Virginia, and the records show that on July 24, 1802, he was married to Nancy Mitchell, and that to this union were born eleven children. All of these children except Kittrah, the oldest child, came with the family to Indiana in 1835.

In 1837, two years after coming to Hendricks County, William Wilson purchased the eighty acres of land lying just east of the present site of the White Lick church; Stephen Hytton, who had married Elizabeth Wilson, purchased the eighty acres lying immediately south of the church; and Nathaniel Hytton, who had married Polly Wilson, purchased the eighty acres west of and adjoining that of his brother, Stephen Hytton. William Worrell, who had married Patsy Wilson, purchased a farm about one mile south, where he operated a grist mill for many years. Thus we have the Wilson family entrenched permanently as a Virginia colony in the White Lick neighborhood.

They were pioneers in the county and lived the life common to the early settlers of any new country. The monuments in the White Lick cemetery, which was originally the Wilson cemetery, have recorded in stone the tragedies of this little colony. The tombstones are mute evidence of the effects of the cholera plague, and other diseases that swept this part of the country in 1840 to 1842. Records in this cemetery show that John Wilson died July 10, 1840; Alexander Wilson died July 22, 1840; Samuel Hylton died December 31, 1841, and his brother, Nathaniel, died January 15, 1842, just fifteen days later, leaving two young widows and their orphan children. These two widows, Aunt Betsy and Aunt Polly as they were universally called, continued to live on their adjoining farms until their children were grown. William Worrell and his wife lived on their farm until their death, and this farm is owned by his descendants at the present time.

William Wilson and Nancy, his wife, William Worrell and Patsy, his wife, Samuel Hylton and Elizabeth, his wife, and Nathaniel Hylton and Polly, his wife, with many of their children and their grandchildren, are buried in the White Lick cemetery near the scene of their labors. As in life they lived and labored, together they sleep beneath the same sod.

The younger children of William and Nancy Wilson married after the family moved to Indiana. The marriage records of Hendricks County show that on June 28, 1841, Celicia Wilson and Isaac Nash were married. They established their home on a farm a few miles north of Brownsburg, Indiana, and reared their family of five boys and three girls. Their old homestead still remains in the possession of the Nash descendants.

The marriage certificate of Eleanor Wilson and Charles Larsh is recorded in the Hendricks County records on September 30, 1842. They made their home in Hendricks County for a while but later moved to Marion County. To them one daughter was born and some of the descendants now live in Marion County.

On January 6, 1845, Lucinda Wilson and Isaiah Free were married. They moved to Iowa in an early day and no authentic information is available, although it is known that some of the descendants are living in that state.

Stephen Wilson, the only son in the family to live to manhood, married Margaret McKinzie about 1837. He died in 1838 leaving a young widow and an infant daughter, Jane Wilson, who was the last living one of the family who bore the name of Wilson. She was married, and her son, Thomas Legend Harris, to whom we are indebted for a large part of this family history, lives in Greencastle, Indiana. She died in 1916.

NANCY MITCHELL

Nancy Mitchell was born December 15, 1783. She was a daughter of Stephen Mitchell, a soldier of the Revolutionary War. The record of Stephen Mitchell in the Revolutionary War makes his descendants eligible to membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution or the Sons of the American Revolution. Both of these records have been established and can be obtained.

Following is the historical record of Stephen Mitchell in the Revolutionary War and the genealogy of his family together with a copy of such records as can be published and reference to others:

Stephen Mitchell was the son of Robert Mitchell of Bedford County, Virginia, as evidenced by the last will of Robert Mitchell dated April 23, 1781, and recorded in Will Record "B" on page 238 of the Bedford County, Virginia, records.

Stephen Mitchell enlisted on December 26, 1776, as a private in the 14th Battalion of the Continental Regulars, commanded by Captain George Lambert. Later he became a sergeant and was honorably discharged on December 26, 1777.

Captain Lambert's Company was a part of Colonel Lewis's Regiment, which was a part of Brigadier-General Weeden's Brigade, which was a part of Major-General Nathaniel Green's part of General Washington's army in 1777. See records in Virginia State Library, No. W. D. 261-12 and W. D. 261-1. Also the writings of George Washington, Volume V, Bicentennial Edition, page 170.

An affidavit of Samuel Mitchell, a brother of Stephen, is also on file in the Virginia State Library. This is an affidavit on behalf of the heirs of his brother, who, he states, was a Revolutionary soldier. In this affidavit he recites the names of the children of Stephen Mitchell, one of whom was named Nancy and was married to _____ Wilson. This affidavit was made before D. W. Quarles, a Justice of the Peace in and for Bedford County, Virginia, on July 8, 1834.

On March 13, 1783, a marriage bond was filed in the clerk's office of Bedford County, Virginia, between Stephen Mitchell and "Kitty" Wade, stating that a marriage was about to be performed. See Records in Clerk's office, Bedford County, Virginia.

The old family Bible of Stephen Mitchell is well preserved and now in possession of Mrs. David Lindsay of Allisonia, Pulaski County, Virginia. A certified copy of this record states that Stephen Mitchell and Katurah Wade were married on March 18, 1783. It also records the birth of Nancy Mitchell on December 15, 1783, and that Nancy Mitchell and William Wilson were married on July 24, 1802. The names and date of birth of all the children of Stephen Mitchell will be found on a following page.

The family Bible of William and Nancy Wilson is now in possession of William Nash of Brownsburg, Indiana, and records the names and date of birth of all the children of William and Nancy Wilson which also will be found on a following page.
