Plainfield High School

Plainfield, Indiana

Volume VII

Our "Silhouettes of P.H.S."

Silhouetted in our busy, clicking minds are memories of classes filled with work and worry, ballgames where we lost our voices, clubs for every interest, and fun with "The Gang."
From the first day of school
--when the seniors began exercising superiority and the wide-eyed sophomores entered the halls of P.H.S.-- to the final home room class,
the days were filled to overflowing with fun,
excitement, and work.
Some headline happenings of 1960-61 were homecoming,
the Snowflake Fantasy Ball, "Plainfield Panic" (known state-wide as "Hoosier Hysteria"), and the day the juniors got their class rings.
Student opinion still ranks pizza as the No. 1 snack, study hall as the favorite class,
and "going steady" as the ideal pastime.
Dirty white sneakers for the boys and knee-ticklers for the girls were considered a "must" in the well-dressed student's wardrobe.
The year went too fast for most of us, and soon it was graduation time.
With mixed emotions, we recalled the events of the past year.
These are our "Silhouettes of P.H.S."

HIGH SCHOOL
KNOWLEDGE POWER

We're proud of "Our building beautiful"

Plainfield High School, ending its third year of service, is the center of student life and a bustling beehive of activity from the first of September to the last of May. Throughout the year, whatever the weather outside may be, a look of summer dominates the lobby and office, which are beautifully decorated with a pleasing color scheme, simple furniture, and verdant planters. Housed in the west wing, the library was designed to lend an atmosphere of serenity for quiet study. Complete with a spacious sewing room, modernly-equipped kitchens, and model rooms of a house, the home economics department occupies the east wing. The long, long hall of the one-story, red brick structure features bright displays to interest the students as they pass from one to another of the cheerfully-colored classrooms, many of which are specially equipped to aid in both the teaching and learning of subjects such as speech, science, and commerce. The Plainfield community has good reason for being proud of its beautiful high school building, a building designed with the idea that "Knowledge is power."

Written on a plaque in the west entrance, the simple words "Knowledge is power" often cause students like Susan Oliphant and John Maurer to pause for a moment and think about the importance of an education.

Weeks of preparation and anticipation reach

Candidates for queen of Plainfield's tenth annual homecoming were Dee Heath, junior; Marcia Fields, senior; and Joan Alfred, sophomore. Their escorts were Dick Agan, Charles Greene, and Larry Leach, respectively. Each class nominated the girls to represent them, the final choice being made by the Student Council. The queen was crowned during special half-time activities of the Plainfield-Greencastle game.

"Dial 'V' for Victory" was the theme of the winning senior float. The huge pink telephone was made almost entirely of thousands of Kleenex flowers.

The junior class wanted to "Show 'em De-feet" with their barefoot ballplayer. All floats had to be built in two weeks and could cost no more than twenty dollars.

A windmill that really moved carried out the idea "Hoping for a Win-d" in the sophomore float. Final work on floats continued long into the night on homecoming eve.

"Now hear this! Now hear this! 'Our Hearts Were

(LEFT) "Cornelia Otis Skinner, you want to be an actress, don't you? Then you have to act like a well woman!" Leo and Dick are not as sure as Emily is that they can smuggle Cornelia and her measles off the boat.

Therese and Madame Elise laugh at the girls' fright over a few French fireworks celebrating Bastille Day (ABOVE).

Most of the worry and work of each play lies on the shoulders of Mrs. Niles (LEFT), who produces and directs Speech Club plays.

Young and Gay' is now in production"

When two American girls go on their first ocean voyage to Paris, there are bound to be some interesting predicaments. Cornelia Skinner and Emily Kimbrough, played by Sally Page and Mary Ross, are the two girls, and "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" is the delightful tale of their trip. The Speech Club's production of the play on November 10 featured all the costuming and gay atmosphere of the "Roaring Twenties," including a Charleston dance routine and a can-can line between acts. The play is an actual account of the two authors, Cornelia Otis Skinner and Emily Kimbrough.

David Davis, the ship's purser, was in charge of locating a stowaway on board. Between acts, the purser also performed the delightful job of introducing the dance lines.

In gay Paree at last, Cornelia and Emily demonstrate their respective acting and dancing talents for Monsieur De La Coix, a French actor. Unfortunately, Monsieur De La Coix was unimpressed.

Taking a curtain call after a performance of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" are (FRONT ROW) M. Lane, L. Walls, S. Lynch, D. Heald, G. Janz, G. Schenck, J. Kirsch, L. Leach, J. Praay, L. Corrie, D. Chitwood, J. Alfred, K. Arnold. (SECOND ROW)

"Class Ring" delights audiences of all ages

"Class Ring," from the book by Rosamond Du Jardin, was given by the Speech Club on April 8, 1960.

The story began when Tobey and Brose, the main characters in the play, decided to exchange class rings. They felt their problems were settled, but they found they had a new set to cope with.

It was a warm and satisfying comedy with particular appeal to youth, for it was filled with sensitivity and understanding of their heartaches and joys.

Members of the cast of "Class Ring" were Rita Hardin, Ronnie Rhea, Sally Lynch, Georgianna Schenck, Linda Walls, Garford Whicker, Kathy Kellum, Bob Karpel, Claudia Truax, Bill Wise, Bill Skorjanc, Karen O'Brien, Dean Cooper, Beverly Harding, and Bill Bally.

Hearts, flowers, and seniors reign at dance

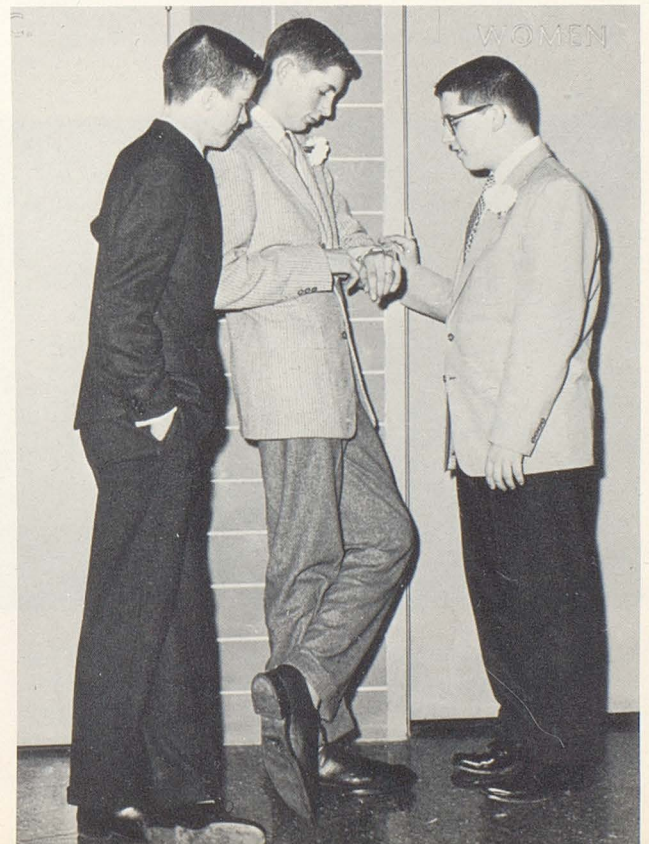

WHO: Senior king and queen with court.
WHAT: S. S. S. Sweetheart Dance.
WHEN: February 20, 1960.
WHERE: Public Service auditorium.

Refreshment time is a favorite time at dances.

Three girls plus one mirror in a powder room result in three impatient boys outside said room's door.

Girls treat boys at annual turnabout affair

After picking up crownbearer Ricky Hilligoss, who had seated himself on the royal throne, Bob Karpel, senior, was crowned king of the F.H.A. -sponsored Women Pay All Dance by his escort, Linda Walls. The annual turnabout was held April 23, 1960, in the multi-purpose room of the Van Buren building.

Representing the junior class was Danny Mills. His escort was Virginia Taylor. Frank DeLois, sophomore candidate, was escorted by Sally Page. Along with the other couples, they danced to the music of Danny McCoun and the Colonels in a carabet atmosphere complete with musty, old wine bottles holding candles.

and Chance Musgrave. The girls won prizes for their homemade corsages, which were the funniest, prettiest, and most original, respectively.

"That Old Black Magic" casts its mystic spell

Westchester Country Club was the scene of the Junior-Senior Reception on Friday, May 13, 1960. Despite the unlucky Friday 13 date and an ominous theme, "That Old Black Magic," the dinner and dance were a huge success. The guests piled their plates high at a buffet table, which offered a variety of food.

After dancing half the night away, a departing guest could not resist the temptation to slip off a shoe and rest her dancing feet. Following the dance, the juniors and seniors were treated to a double feature at Westlake Drive-in, compliments of the Optimist Club, and an early morning breakfast provided by the juniors' parents.

The guests danced to the music of the Skyliners under mood-setting red and blue lights. Between dances the couples cooled off on the club's terrace. Cold drinks were also available for the guests.

Credit for a well-planned evening went to the junior class, who spent months in preparation for the event.

Auditorium becomes winter wonderland for Snowflake Ball

Public Service auditorium became a glittering Winter Wonderland December 10 as the second Snowflake Fantasy Ball found couples dancing beneath a fall of lacy snowflakes to the music of the Electras.

Linda Leach keeps her fingers crossed as her escort, Steve Harlan, drops their vote in the junior class slot. The crossed fingers must have helped for Linda was crowned queen of the dance. Looking on are the senior candidate, Jeanne Blanton and her escort, Ken Randall, and the soph candidate, Judy Shrake and her escort, Don Templeton.

(ABOVE) Chaperones enjoy dances, too. Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Abel sit back and relax while Mr. Shore brings them some refreshments.

Crown-bearers Karen and Karol Kost were awed by so many people, such pretty dresses, and the great, big Christmas tree. Between them the twins carried the queen's crown in a snowflake-adorned basket.

Cupid picks seniors as king and queen of Sweetheart Dance

Sophomore candidates for king and queen of the Sweetheart Dance were (RIGHT) David Corrie and Jean Vickers. The sophomores at the dance found that there may be a cupid after all, or maybe the decorations and lighting just suggested such an idea.

After attending the Sweetheart Dance, the juniors claimed a belief in cupid, too. Although cupid's arrow didn't pick them as king and queen of the dance, Harris Newlin and Linda Acton (BELOW), junior candidates, agreed that there is something special about a Valentine dance.

Sunshine Society's second annual Sweetheart Dance on February 18 in the Van Buren multi-purpose room featured music by Danny McCoun and the Colonels. Highlighting the evening's festivities was the crowning of a Sweetheart king and queen. The king and queen reigned from a white garden bench in the front of the stage. Other decorations for the dance were red and white cupids and hearts.

(ABOVE) Cupid centerpieces on white cloths adorned the tables placed around the room. Between dances the couples relaxes in comfort and chatted together.

Cupid's arrow found its way straight to seniors Charles Greene and Sally Lynch (RIGHT), who reigned as Sweetheart king and queen.

Classes, assignments, homework, study

Obtaining the 16 units, or 32 credits, necessary for graduation is the ultimate goal of every P.H.S. scholar.
Sixteen of these credits must be earned in the following courses:

six in English, four in social studies,
two in math, two in science,
and one in physical education and health and safety.
Students may supplement their sixteen required credits with electives suiting their own interests.

They may choose from the six curriculum available:
college preparatory,
vocational agriculture,
industrial education, commercial, and general,
plus any of the courses in fine arts.

The sixteen units needed for graduation are arranged so that the student has three units in each of two subject fields, comprising two majors, and two units in two other subjects, making two minors.

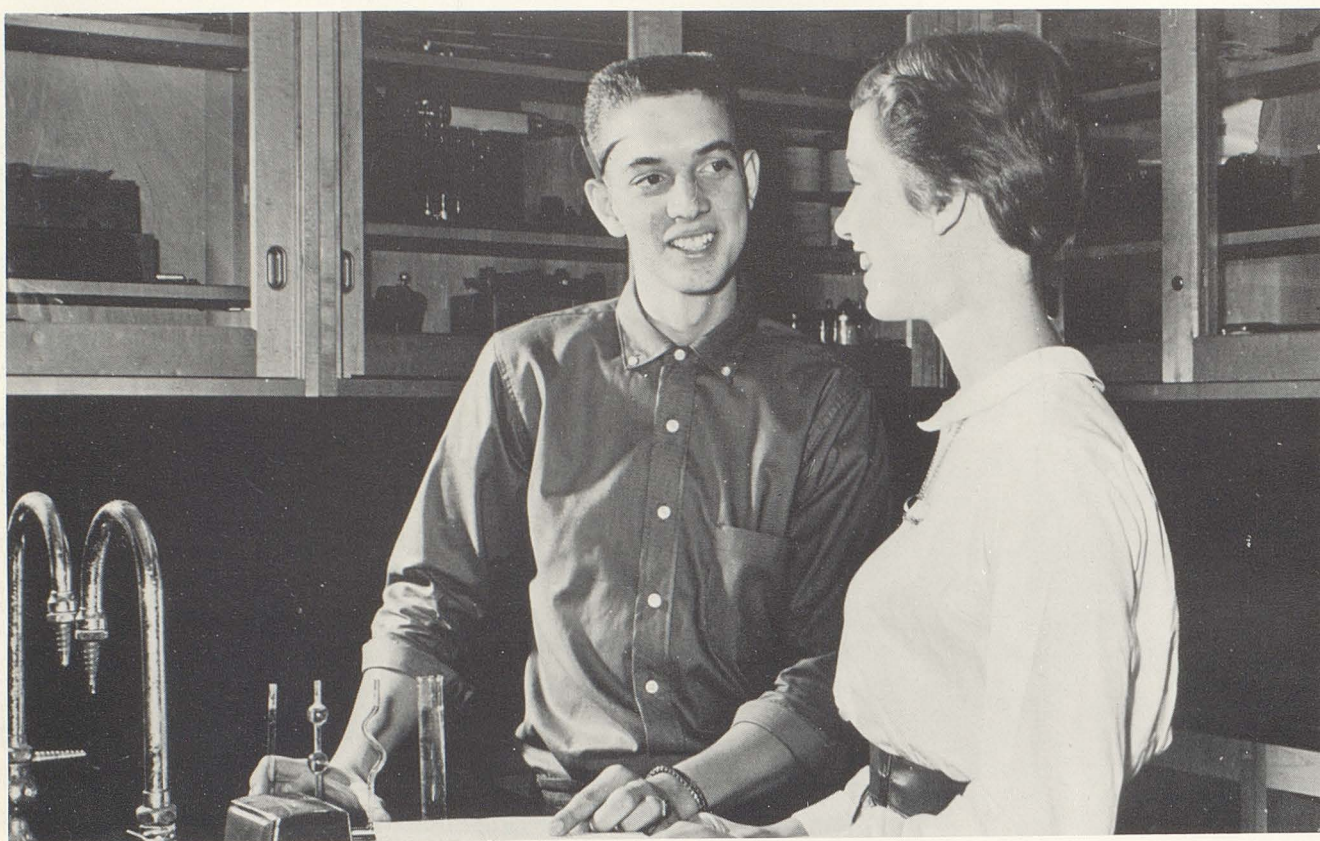

Taking these required courses plus electives assures the student of the well-rounded education needed for his future life.

While preparing for the future, students enjoy themselves, as the following pages show.

ACADEMIC

Worlds of knowledge are opened to students like Margaret Jones in their high school courses. That knowledge is the power that could open the way to world peace.

Science students delve into earth's mysteries

Bob Lacy and Ann Arden perform an experiment in physics class to prove that liquids in connecting vessels, regardless of shape or size, stand at the same height.

Leigh Lawton demonstrates the computer which won him first place in last year's Science Fair. The device adds, subtracts, divides, and multiplies.

Formulas, equations, compounds, laws --all are the tools of the science student at P.H.S. With such tools he can begin to scratch the surface of the absorbing world of science.

For example, the physics student is concerned with energy and matter and the changes in matter. Through actual experimentation, he proves the laws and equations he has learned.

In chemistry, this student learns of the composition and the changes of composition of materials. Here he can put to work his formulas, compounds, and equations.

These classes serve two purposes: to form a beginning base on which to further the study of science and to create a lasting interest in science for the student's personal use.

Mathematics: "The language of the sciences"

Mathematics, the science of our number system, is often called the "language of the sciences."

Mathematics is concerned with the expression of the relationships found in matter and the study of matter.

Here at Plainfield High, students have the opportunity to prepare both for further education or for employment immediately after graduation from high school.

Plane geometry and its projects introduce the sophomore to higher mathematics; for his first year, he is confronted with the theorms and axioms of geometry. The junior furthers his knowledge by studying and solving the problems of Algebra II. To round out his mathematic career, the senior tackles solid geometry, college algebra, and trigonometry.

Sewing is not "girl stuff" when it's for a six weeks project in plane geometry. In fact, Jerry Winstead finds threading a needle a challenge.

Leigh Lawton, Bob Watts, Don Pope, and Ken Ward begin construction of a plastic model which will help them picture depth and angles in solid geometry. Special teaching methods such as this are used in the math classes to create more interest in the subject and to explain problems more easily.

"Parlez-vous Francais?" "Oui, in ze French!"

French has been added to the roll of foreign languages offered at P.H.S. Now three languages--Latin, French, and Spanish--are available to students.

French, one of the most widely spoken languages in the world today, is also, in the opinion of many, one of the most beautiful. The present French class is concentrating mainly on conversation and pronunciation.

Spanish is one of the favorite electives of P.H.S. scholars. Besides learning grammar and pronunciation, the Spanish classes learn of the customs and ways of life that are so different from their own.

The mother of all modern languages, Latin forms a base for students interested in languages. For the history-minded student, Latin gives new insight into the history of Rome in its days of glory and grandeur.

English courses are not only practical but fun

English and its related courses are among the most important subjects we learn in our high school days. What we learn here will carry over through our whole life.

In the sophomore year, English grammar and world literature are stressed, while the junior is mainly concerned with American Literature. The senior has moved on to English composition, a college preparatory course, and English Literature.

Speech and journalism are also available at P.H.S. Speech develops the art of public speaking. In journalism, students learn the fundamentals of writing for public consumption by actual experience gained from work on the school publications.

English can be fun, as proved by Steve Housefield, who seems to be enjoying the book he's reading for a report in his sophomore English class.

Jim Taylor works the controls on the speech class's teletrainer while Rita Mabe and Sandra Starbuck practice good telephoning procedures. The teletrainer was loaned to the school by the Indiana Bell Telephone Company for use in speech training classes. Special supplementary workbooks are included with the device.

Complete commercial courses train students

Mr. Shore helps Beverly Etchason fill out an application for work after graduation. Complete business courses prepare many students for jobs immediately following high school or for further preparation in business colleges. Many business firms go directly through the school to hire new employees every year.

Although the symbols in her shorthand book were meaningless at first, Martha Stanley soon finds that she can not only read but write the abbreviated script.

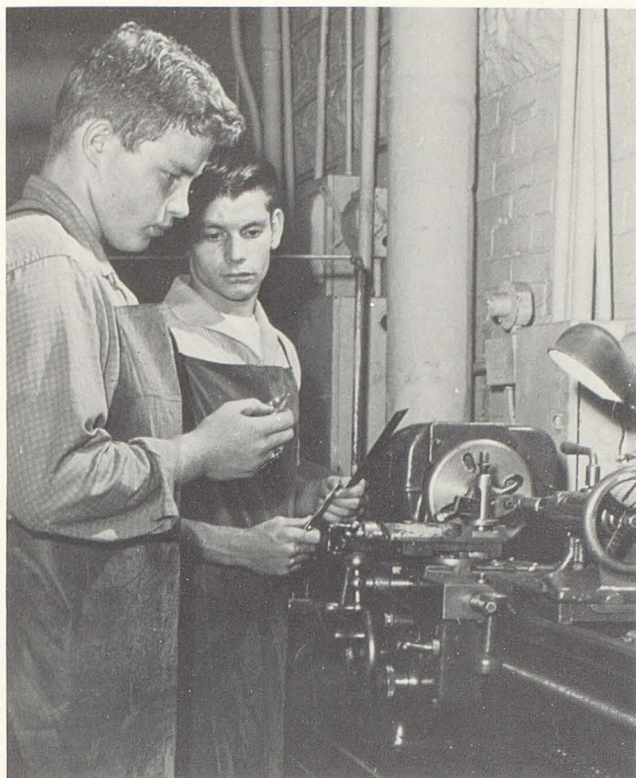

The commercial department of P.H.S. offers a wide choice of subjects appealing to both the commerce major and the college-bound student.

For example, typing is equally important for personal and school use as well as for business. Shorthand, too, is helpful for either personal use or business. Included in the advanced shorthand course is office practice for the would-be-secretaries.

Bookkeeping and sales teach the essentials of keeping accounts and the meaning of various business terms. Techniques of good selling and fundamentals of office management are also taught here.

In the office machines class, students learn the correct procedures for operating adding machines, ditto and mimeograph, calculators, and electric typewriters.

Vocational courses prepare us for the future

Harry Kern and Ronnie Copeland are concerned not only with lathe operation but with accuracy in measuring as well in their metal shop class.

Marie Cochran carefully selects the material for her clothing project in home economics. In her class the girls are taught how to choose and work with quality fabrics.

The buzz of the drill and the hum of a sewing machine introduce the vocational department. Here, students will learn profitable and applicable skills that will be of service to them throughout their lives.

For the girls, the home economics department stresses the skills of cooking, sewing, practical nursing, interior decorating, and even child care (with a real subject!).

The boys have equal opportunities in acquiring skills. The industrial arts course offers training in drafting, wood-working, metal work, welding, and electricity. Boys pursuing the agriculture course receive training in production and marketing of farm products and management of a farming business. This course offers many opportunities of acquiring practical skills useful in this so-called agricultural business.

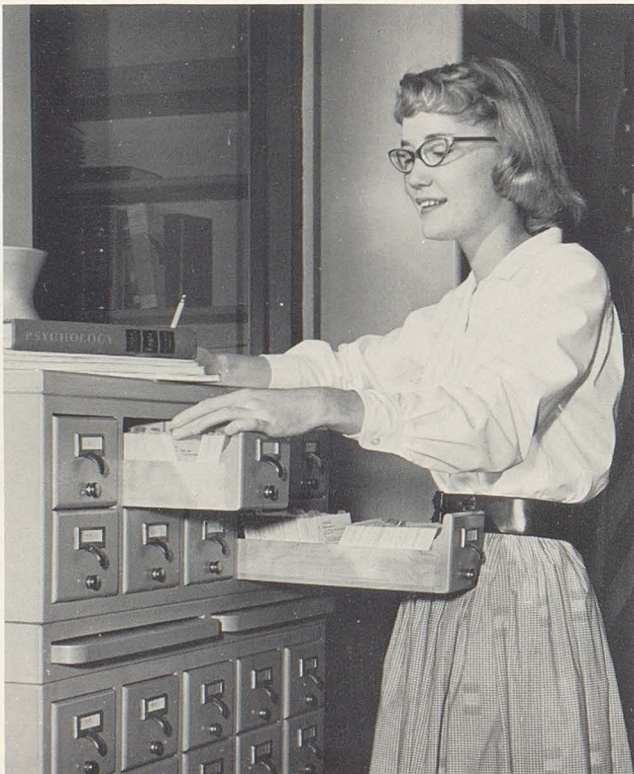

Dick Cochran, David Hunter, Bill Houston, Bob Hancock, and Bob Heald learn and practice land judging procedures in agriculture class.

Social studies students relate man's past to Mike Mechem and Judy O'Connor listen intently while Mr. Don Weathers, an election day worker, explains the operation of the voting machines used in government elections. Since 1960 was an election year, history and government classes gave special attention to voting procedures in the United States. Students were permitted to vote on the machines prior to the actual election. Many students got first-hand experience by helping in the campaigns.

Showing the relationship of the past to the modern world, American history, required for all juniors, and world history, an elective for sophomores, increase students' understanding of problems existing around the globe. State, county, and local government and the functioning of the nation and regulating of its economy are studied in government and economics, required for all seniors.

Human behavior, mental health, and problems of adjustment to life are studied in the psychology classes, helping students to find greater understanding of man and preparing them to take their place in society.

Joyce Hadley, like other psychology students, puts the card catalog in the library to good use in looking up reference material for the course.

present in classwork and outside activities

Souvenir newspapers proclaiming the end of the World Wars provide interesting material for Judy Ginn and Steve Brown's world history display.

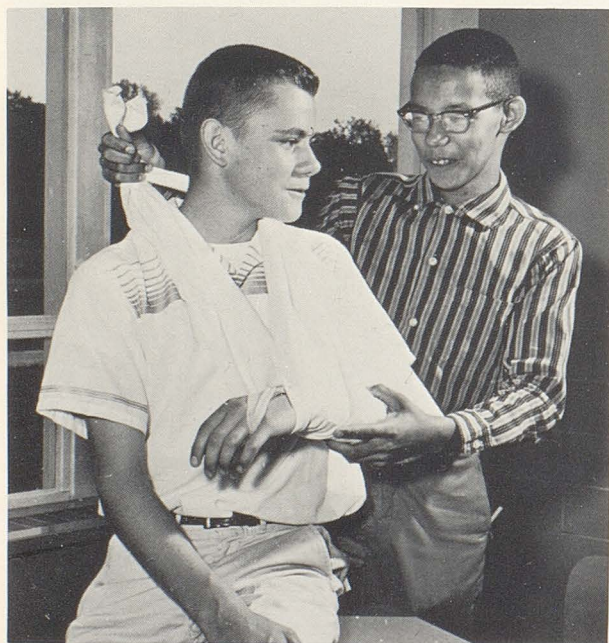

Driver's education and health are lifesavers

Changing a tire has Linda Walls completely baffled, but Karen Jenkel, a classmate in driver's education, thinks she has the solution to the problem.

Together the girls wield the crowbar to get the job done. In driver's education even the weaker sex must know how to perform such tasks as this.

Using Steve Euler as his victim, Richard Swarn fashions an arm sling as part of the first aid training in health and safety.

Health and safety classes are designed to teach the rudiments of the body's functions and the correct health habits. Included in this class is an elementary course in first aid.

The driver's education classes have become more and more important as the 16 and up age group takes to the road. All elements necessary for correct and careful driving are taught in this class by way of actual road experience.

Both of these classes offer training and experience in practical skills.

ABC's of high school are art, band, and chorus

Larry Belleville, first cornet in the high school band, spends extra time practicing scales and the many solos he plays with the band.

Steve Bayliff and Martha Getchell team up at the piano for a rousing chorus or two. Both are members of the chorus and ensemble.

To better appreciate the finer things of life, the students of P.H.S. take part in the classes of art, band, and chorus.

In art class, students paint, sculpt, draw with both charcoal and chalk, and do pencil sketching. Chorus students sing both for their own pleasure and for the pleasure of others. All kinds of music--spirituals, popular songs, religious hymns--are their material. Marches, concert music, and popular songs form the diet of the band student.

In all three of these classes, the members learn the appreciation of fine music and art and are better able to see beauty in the world around them.

Sandy Bolen, typical art student, is surrounded by cans of paint, stacks of paper, and the general confusion of a creative art class.

Meetings, projects, fun, friendship.

"Are you going to the F.H.A. meeting in the morning?"

"Not me. I can't get up that early."

"Say, what time is the Library Club meeting tonight?"

"Eight o'clock. Right after the Honor Society meeting in room 6."

This was typical hallway conversation due to a new system which omitted home room periods, the time formerly allowed for meetings of co-curricular activities.

Although the scheduling of meetings for outside of school hours or during the noon period was inconvenient in some respects, the result was generally favorable, as proved by the increases in membership of most of the organizations and the formation of several new clubs.

Such interest in activities may be attributed to the wide choice ranging in anything from future teaching, nursing, farming, or homemaking to backing the athletic teams.

These activities may be strictly for fun, or they may be planned to give students a preview of what various fields offer in the way of possible careers.

Whatever their basic purpose, co-curricular organizations are a very important part of the student's life.

ORGANIZATIONS

Bill Wise, Student Council president, holds his gavel, a symbol of the leadership which is necessary for school organizations to function effectively.

Article I. Name

Section 1. The name of this organization shall be the Student Council of Plainfield High School, Plainfield, Indiana.

Article II. Purpose

Section 1. The purpose of this organization shall be to develop attitudes of, and good practice in, good citizenship; promote harmonious relations throughout the entire school; improve student-teacher relationships; improve school morale; assist in the management of the school at the request of the administration; provide a forum for student expression; provide orderly direction of school activities; charter school clubs and other organizations; and promote the general welfare of the school.

Student Council forms student government of school

Acting under a new constitution written by the 1959-60 Council and approved by the administration, Student Council has been able to accomplish its objectives more easily this year than it has in the past.

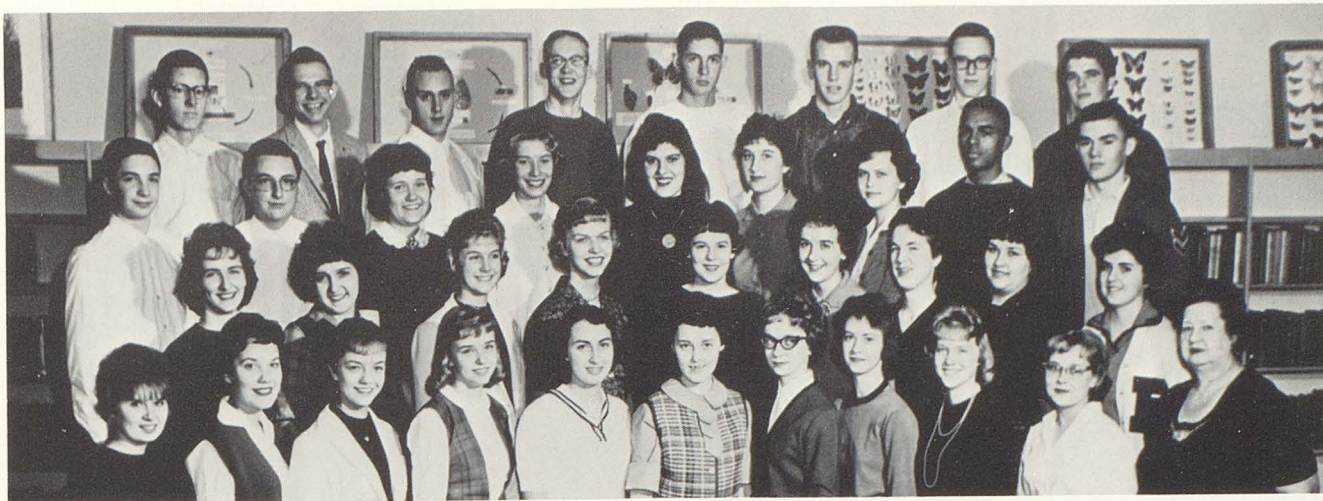

Members of the Council were appointed to assist the faculty and administration on various student-faculty committees. Other responsibilities delegated to the Student Council are the planning of homecoming festivities, decorating the school at Christmas time, and organizing the annual Career Day.

Membership of the Council consists of the three class vice-presidents, three sophomores elected for their sophomore year only, three juniors elected for their junior and senior years, and the three seniors who are serving their second year.

Officers are Bill Wise, president; Jim Edmondson, vice-president; Sharon Cooper, secretary; and Sidney Jenkel, treasurer. The sponsor is Mrs. Melba Haines.

Student Council helps spread the Christmas spirit by decorating the school for the holidays. Frank DeLois, Sidney Jenkel, and Jean Vickers dust off the ornaments.

Sample Fair supports Honor Society student loan fund

"Samples, samples everywhere!" is the cry of the Plainfield chapter of National Honor Society in the spring when it's time for the annual Sample Fair. Being the only money-making project during the year, the Sample Fair provides the source of income for the Honor Society's student loan fund. Established in 1947, the loan fund makes money available to any worthy P.H.S. graduate who is attending college.

Each fall, fifteen percent of the senior class and ten percent of the junior class are chosen for membership on the basis of their individual scholarship, character, leadership, and service. Common interests and ideals bring the group close together at their monthly dinner meetings.

Officers of the organization, sponsored by Mrs. Madge Masten, are Mason Meeks, president; Jim Edmondson, vice-president; Linda Leach, secretary; and Charles Swarn, treasurer.

Getting ready for the Sample Fair involves weeks of preparation and planning. Annamae Stanley and Virginia Taylor do their part by checking off the samples received.

Boasting the largest membership, Future Homemakers

The Future Homemakers' annual Workday finds the Janz girls--Gwendolyn, Genevieve, and Geraldine--busily raking leaves and cleaning out a bird bath. These lucky F.H.A. members can work three times as hard, three times faster, with three times as much fun.

Future Homemakers of America, one of the oldest and largest organizations at P.H.S., strives to promote interest in homemaking and to further community public relations. Any girl having taken one year of home economics is eligible for membership.

During the year, members keep busy with F.H.A. Week, two district meetings, and Workday, the annual money-making project. They also sponsor a party for the members and their dates, two all-school dances, a Christmas service project, and a Daddy Date Night.

Mrs. Mabel Truax sponsors the organization. Officers are Judy Simmons, president; Marilyn Sharp, vice-president; Sally Lynch, secretary; Janice Praay, treasurer; Rosemary Osborn, historian; Kathy Arnold, parliamentarian; Becky Colescott, recreation; Linda Corrie, editor; Carolyn Jennings, projects chairman; Claudia Truax, public relations; Susie Newlin, Mary Sweet, and Nancy Graham, class representatives.

Publications staff work

"Should we use 36 point type?"

"Ya' mean the bleed on page 9 isn't cropped yet?"

These are among the comments pouring from Room 15, haunt of all aspiring P.H.S. journalists.

If one has the persistence and perseverance, he can work up to an editor's spot. Nancy Alexander and Pam Johnson, Quaker Shaker co-editors, did; Garford "SideLine By-Lines" Whicker snagged a page four editor's slot.

Silhouettes' number one gal, Kathy Kellum, and assistant editor, Terry Bally, began planning for this book sometime last spring. Now, one year, 274 pictures, and one prematurely grey-haired editor later, it is finally completed.

Goal of all high school journalists is induction into Quill and Scroll, a national society. Forty inches of printed copy and outstanding work on either publication staff are among rigid requirements for membership.

The members of Quill and Scroll are (FRONT ROW) Mrs. Niles, sponsor; J. Simmons, C. Wierzbik, K. Kellum. (SECOND ROW) G. Schenck, S. Ingram, N. Alexander. (THIRD ROW) S. Lynch, C. Jennings, P. Johnson. (FOURTH ROW) R. Rhea, B. Wise, G. Whicker, B. Skorjanc.

Members of the publications staff are (FRONT ROW) K. Sanders, J. Simmons, M. Sweet, F. Babb, J. O'Connor, D. Stone, C. Wierzbik. (SECOND ROW) G. Schenck, S. Ingram, S. Lynch, C. Jennings, C. Truax, J. James, L.

Walls. (THIRD ROW) B. Skorjanc, D. Abell, B. Wise, M. Page, R. Rhea, N. Kellum. These people worked on both the school paper and the yearbook during the year.

year-round for first-class paper and yearbook

Burning the midnight oil was nothing unusual for the yearbook staff. Terry Bally, assistant editor; Mrs. Betty Niles, advisor; and Kathy Kellum, editor, work by candlelight until the wee hours of the morning to meet a deadline. Setting up picture schedules, planning pages, writing copy, and proofing pages was just part of their job.

Quaker Shaker editors demonstrate how a news story is created in their portrayal of "Advisor Loses Head in Journalism Class." "Actually, Pam Johnson and Nancy Alexander, co-editors; Mrs. Niles, advisor; and Garford Whicker, sports' editor, seldom had time for fun stunts like this with the responsibility of getting out the paper. (RIGHT) Tom Hartgraves became an honorary member of the yearbook staff for holding the photographer's flash. Sometimes he had to stand on tables to get the correct lighting.

At a regular meeting, Bob Hallatt and Jim Boone prepare to show films taken by a former J. C. L. member studying in Rome.

Proof that Latin is not a dead language and that high school students are interested in classics is the growth of the Junior Classical League from a membership of approximately eighty in 1960.

Since the purpose of J. C. L. is to perpetuate knowledge of classical civilization in the modern world, members must have one year's credit in Latin and have an interest in learning more of Greek and Roman culture.

Besides having monthly meetings and attending state and national conventions, J. C. L. celebrates Saturnalia in December and initiates new members at a Roman banquet in the spring.

Officers are Mary Arnold, president; Marie Cochran, secretary; Terry Bally, vice-president; George Schnakenberg, treasurer; Donna Stone, song leader; and Miss Ruth Newlin, sponsor.

Two, three-act plays are given during the year, one in the spring and one in the fall, by the Speech Club. Members of the Speech Club also tell stories to the grade school children at Christmas time and, when called upon, present programs for community groups. These activities are designed to encourage good speech habits and to create interest in drama and the theater.

Any interested student maintaining a "C" or better average may apply for membership. Applicants are then voted on by the Speech Club.

Members who earn 15 points for parts in plays or positions on committees automatically become members of the Thespian Troupe, a national honorary society which gives recognition to outstanding Speech Club members. Awards are given each spring to the outstanding boy and girl in Speech Club and Thespians.

Both organizations are sponsored by Mrs. Betty Niles. Officers are Garford Whicker, president; Linda Walls, vice-president; and Carolyn Jennings, secretary-treasurer.

Small but mighty, the F.F.A. promotes farming

Organized in the fall of 1938 and chartered on May 4, 1939, the Plainfield chapter of the Future Farmers of America is one of the oldest school organizations.

The purpose of the Future Farmers is to promote interest in farming, to discuss farming problems, and to help boys to become better farmers.

With the help of Mr. Grosskreutz, their sponsor, the members completed many activities this year, including a parent and son banquet and contests on farming, land judging, and public speaking. Two members, Bob Heald and Manford Nickerson, attended the National Convention of the Future Farmers of America in Kansas City, Missouri, last summer.

The officers for the year were Bob Heald, president; Ted McDaniels, vice-president; Burt Mills, secretary, Manford Nickerson, treasurer; Bob Hancock, reporter; and Otis Hollin, sentinel.

The Plainfield High School Science Club, which was chartered this year by the Science Clubs of America, had its beginning nearly a decade ago as a hobby club.

This year's activities centered around the club's purpose of promoting interest in the natural and applied sciences. The related activities ranged from the members' entries in the local and state science fairs to field trips and cave exploring expeditions.

Co-sponsors of the group are Mr. Rogers and Mr. Grosskreutz. Officers for the year were William Wise, president; George Schnakenberg, vice-president; Larry Gentner, secretary; and Walter Wootton, treasurer.

Sunshine girls strive to live kind, helpful lives

Wrapping gifts for their Ideal Ladies is ideal fun for Diana Thompson and Betty Andrews as they combine pretty bows and paper for a colorful package. The Sunshine girls exchange Christmas and birthday gifts with their Ideal Ladies, women they admire the most.

The Sunshine Society's main purpose is to live a life of helpfulness and kindness, to make the community a safer and more beautiful place in which to live, and to live a rich and complete life.

The annual Sweetheart Dance and an Ideal Ladies' Tea are the two main activities of the Sunshine Society. At Christmas time, the organization goes caroling, collects clothes for the needy, and clothes an orphan child as a part in helping others and spreading cheer. Sunshine Society also sponsored a sock after one of the ballgames in order to earn money for their annual contribution to the Riley Hospital Fund. This year Sunshine joined with the Future Homemakers in several service and fun projects, including a trip to Sunnyside Sanatorium.

Betty Killman gives Jon Wittorff "service with a smile," the unwritten motto of the student librarians.

Library Club has once again become an active organization at P.H.S. under the sponsorship of Mrs. Veva Spear, the teacher-librarian. The club helps sponsor students' interest in the use of books, stimulate reading interest and improve library service to the school.

Youth for Christ and

To show students and others the happy and cheerful life there is to be had in Jesus Christ is the purpose of the Plainfield Youth for Christ organization.

The club, which was organized the latter part of the 1959-60 school year, has meetings which include such activities as motion pictures, parties, speakers, and special singers.

The Indianapolis Youth for Christ has skating parties the first and third Mondays of each month and a rally every other Saturday night.

President Mike Page and vice-president Steve Sumner represent the Plainfield Youth for Christ at the city council in Indianapolis, which is composed of all of the local Youth for Christ organizations. Mr. Melvin Rogers sponsors the group.

No exceptions to the rule, Bonnie Willis and Steve Sumner enjoy the monthly skating parties which provide fun and friendship for the members of Youth for Christ.

Officers of the club are Sidney Jenkel, president; Terry Bally, vice-president; Donna Adamson, secretary; and Donna Stone, treasurer.

The purposes of the organization are to provide interested students with an insight into nursing and to help the field of nursing by insuring that any member who may enter that field will do so with full understanding of what a nursing career will mean.

This organization became nationally sponsored in 1954 by the Committee on Careers, National League for Nursing. The national policies of the club are developed by an Advisory Committee on Future Nurses Clubs, whose members include nurses, representatives of medical auxiliaries and civic organizations, guidance counselors, and other specialists in work with teen-agers.

Mrs. Carter, school nurse and sponsor of Future Nurses, takes time to talk to Mary Sue Sweet about her plans for a career in nursing.

Representative of the enthusiasm, determination, and loyalty of Plainfield athletes and fans,
the 1960 Mid-State Conference All Sports Trophy holds a proud place in the school's trophy case.

Plainfield High School has won the All Sports award five times during the thirteen years it has been given to the team earning the most points in Mid-State baseball, basketball, football, and track competition.

Besides these four major sports represented at P.H.S.,
cross country has also been added during the past year.

Girls do their part in the sports field
by yelling in the Pep Club and Traveling Quakers and backing the athletic teams, win or lose.

Girls' Athletic Association offers the fairer sex a chance to participate in sports, also.

Not to be shoved out of the picture, the faculty demonstrates its athletic ability in an annual basketball game.

All through the year, faculty and students alike enjoy sports.

and defensive tactics for winning season

Marked by several broken records, a thrilling last-second score, and a homecoming victory, the 1960 football season was exciting for the Quaker grid team and its followers.

After opening the season with a crushing victory over the Decatur Hawks, hopes ran high for an upset over Speedway, rated toughest in the Mid-State Conference. These hopes were vanquished when the Sparkplugs pulled through, defeating the Quakers, 18-6.

Instead of letting this loss bog them down, the Quakers rolled on to smash down their next four opponents-----Center Grove, Danville, Greencastle, and Mooresville. A 33-7 victory over Greencastle was the crowning glory of the tenth annual homecoming. The Quaker eleven were still riding high a week later when they smashed the Mooresville squad, 60-0. Don Pope, returning the half-time kick-off, scored on an 85 yard jaunt, longest of the season. Due to great Quaker defensive effort, the Pioneers penetrated Quaker territory only once during the game.

In a losing cause against the Brazil Red Devils, the P.H.S. gridders played perhaps their finest game of the season. Plainfield, ahead with a 20-19 count, was driving for another T.D. when Brazil intercepted a pass. Brazil then drove to the Quaker 14 yard line, where they kicked a field goal in the last minute of play, shattering the Quakers' hopes for victory.

Plainfield suffered its third defeat at the hands of Bloomington U. However, the Quakers averted their first possible shut-out in years by scoring on a last-second pass play.

The Quaker ironmen went on to fell Brownsburg and Greenfield, climaxing a winning season with 7 wins and 3 losses.

NEW RECORDS

DON POPE: Extra points for season: 19, Conference; 25, school. Extra points in game: 6, Conference; 6, school.

STEVE HARLAN: Scoring for season: 129 total points, school. Total yardage gained: 1212.

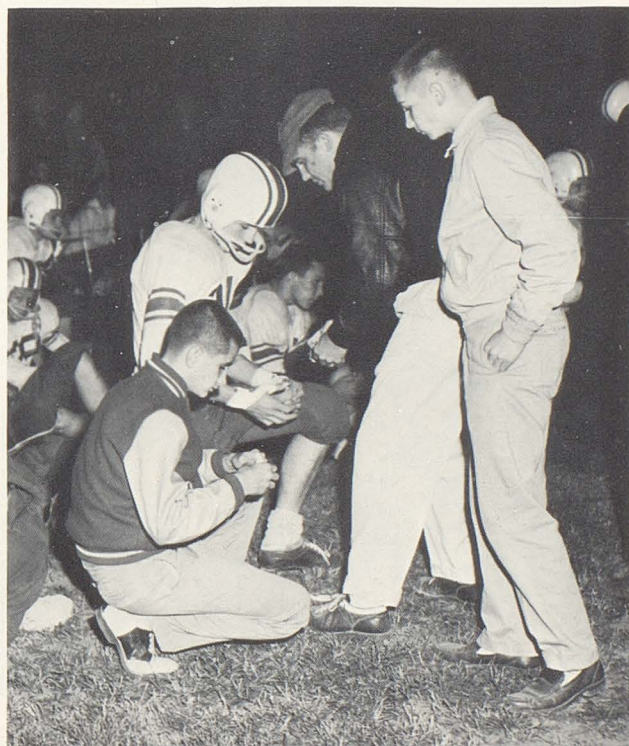

TEAM RECORD: Total points for season: 312, school.

The Plainfield Quaker "B" team football squad proved to be a powerhouse this year as they rolled over eight straight opponents without suffering a single setback to post a fine 8-0 record.

Paced by such stalwarts as Nick Kellum, Mike Harlan, Mike Dunigan, David Corrie, and Bill Sims, the Quaker Juniormen put together one of the best scoring punches a Plainfield "B" team has ever had, scoring a total of 201 points for the season.

Plainfield's opponents found the going tough as the Quaker defensive unit limited their opponents to a mere 37 points total for the season. Recognition for their defensive efforts goes to Steve Trent, Frank DeLois, Mike Dunigan, Spencer Jobst, Harry Kern, and John Thomas.

Plainfield football fans can look forward to another exciting season with such promising athletes coming up.

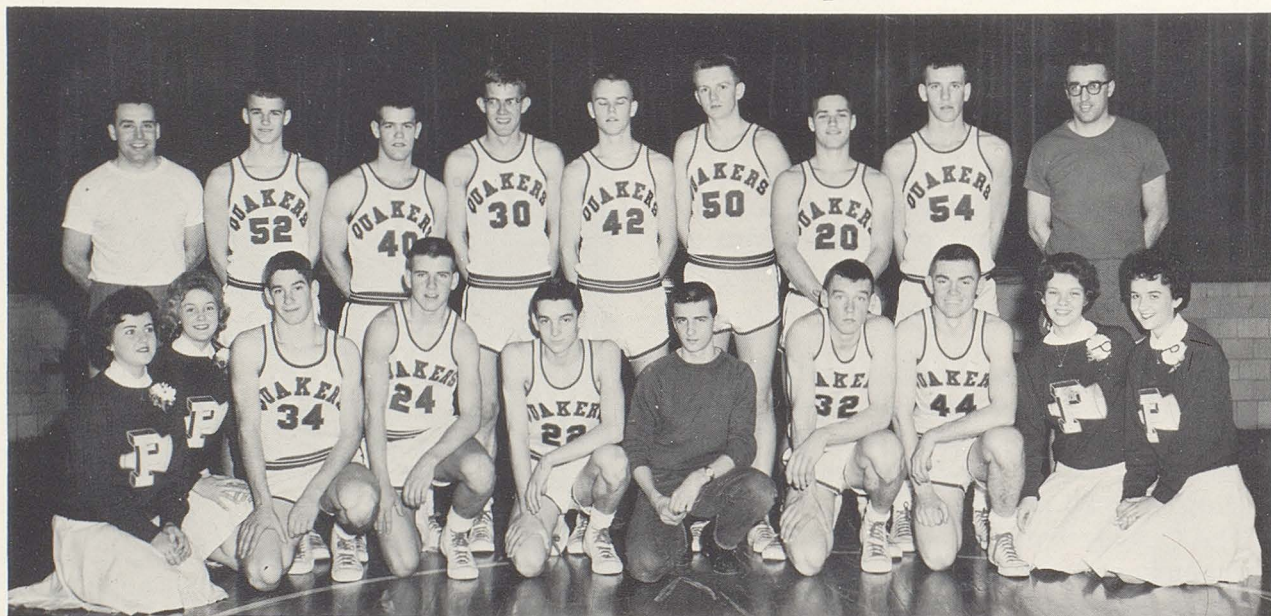

Student managers, the silent heroes of the football team, witnessed plenty of action on the sidelines. These boys were responsible for everything from washing uniforms to doctoring players' cuts and bruises.

1960 baseball season brings new conference records

"Isn't spring ever going to get here?" Todd Raper and Norman Cassell are impatient to be out on the baseball diamond again. Until the weather is warm enough to go outside, the boys practice in the gym.

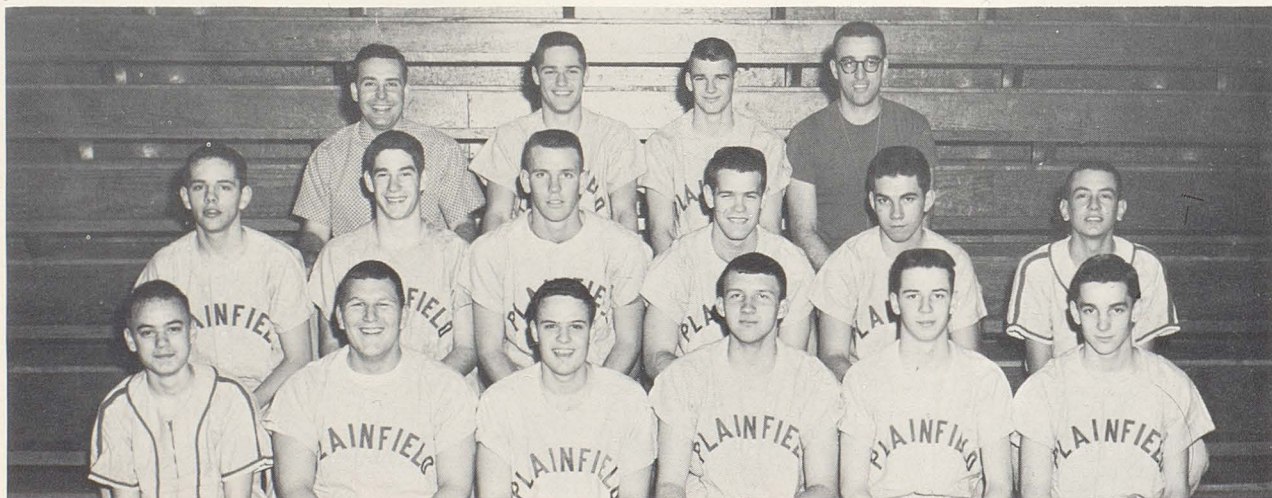

Even though the Plainfield nine didn't have a winning record, 3-6, the 1960 season had its highlights.

In the conference game with Brownsburg, the Quakers broke two and tied one Mid-State record. Plainfield established new records for the most runs by one team with 33, the most hits by one team with 24, and tied the league record for the most hits by two teams by slashing out a total of 27 combined with Brownsburg.

Catcher Don Pope and shortstop Steve Harlan were name to the Mid-State's first team, while Paul Ashworth, Mason Meeks, Jon Pope, and Dick Hardin received honorable mention.

Caravan, sectional victory, and snowstorm make up busy

Maybe the band, leading the caravan through town on the morning of Plainfield's first game in the sectionals, urged the Quakers on to a victory with their fight songs. Maybe the people who rode in the parade and offered their backing were the deciding factor. Bob Wagner and Kay Sanders certainly had the right idea in their car decorations which won first prize in the car-decorating contest. Anyway, the Quakers won. The victors in the sectionals found themselves victims of a snowstorm which closed roads throughout the state, so they did their celebrating at an all-night party in Brownsburg's gym.

Of the whole affair, all the cheerleaders could find to say was:

Satisfied
 Real satisfied
 I said satisfied
 Now we're from P.H.S.
 and we're on the ball
 Now we're from P.H.S. and we know it all Gonna' go to the left
 Gonna' go to the right
 Gonna' go down center
 And fight, fight, fight
 Gonna' give anybody
 A heck of a fight
 Satisfied
 Real satisfied
 I said satisfied
 Yeah, man, we're

and exciting weekend for "Hoosier Hysteria" followers

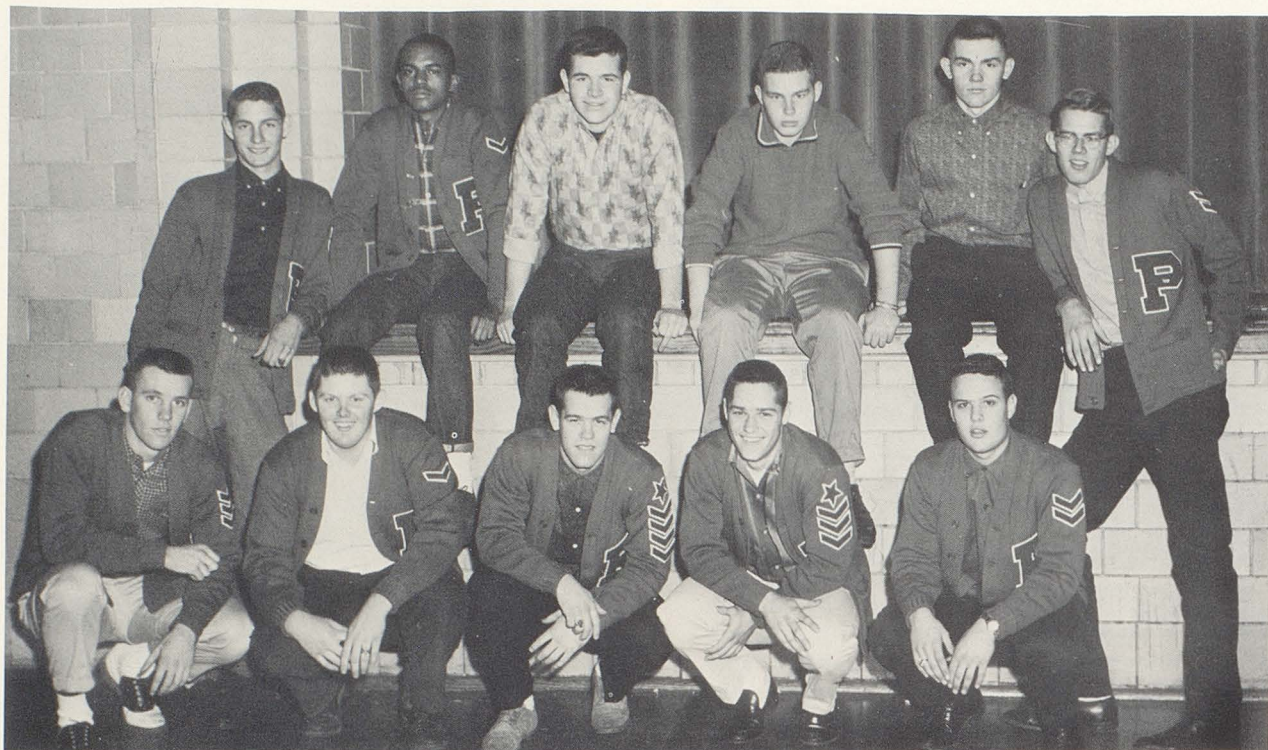

Plainfield made headlines in the newspapers all week prior to the game between the Quakers and the Redskins. (RIGHT) In the regionals, P.H.S. found themselves up against the tremendous height and ability of Manual's VanArsdale twins.

Tom VanArsdale (ABOVE) plays a game of keepaway with three Plainfield players. Although the Quakers may have been out-classed, they certainly weren't out-fought. (RIGHT) The tide went Plainfield's way several times, as in this instance when the Quakers manage to surround Dick VanArsdale. The final score showed Manual favored 66-54.

All through the year, there are sports for everyone

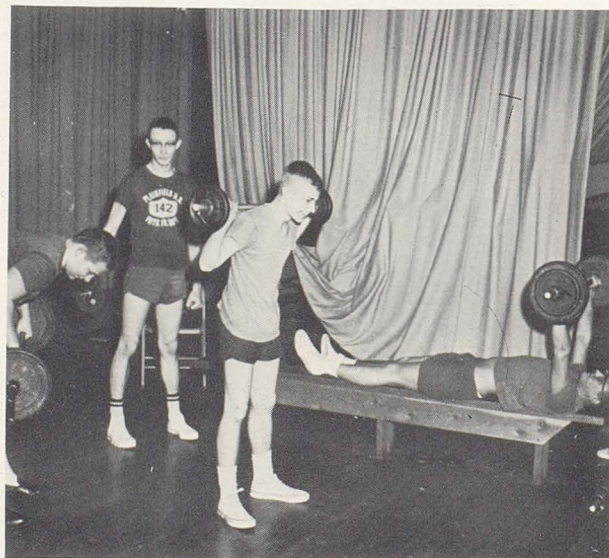

This was the last year of high school athletics for the seniors. Some of the seniors who participated in football, basketball, baseball and track during their four years in high school are (FRONT ROW) Mason Meeks, Mike Storms, Don Pope, Steve Harlan, Todd Raper. (SECOND ROW) Danny Mills, Chuck Swarn, John Lynch, Harry Kern, Jim Edmondson, Mike Earhart. The boys are wearing the sweaters which were awarded to senior football players.

Coaching the various teams along to victory were Mr. Ivan Albright, football and track; Mr. Basil Sfredo, basketball and baseball; Mr. Gene Combs, assistant football and track; Mr. John Kost, assistant basketball and baseball.

John Thomas, Spencer Jobst, and Ed Bell toughen up for next year's football team by lifting weights during the winter and spring months.

Even the girls receive their share of athletics

Members of G. A. A. are (FRONT ROW) K. Welch, J. Watts, P. Smith, F. Babb, J. Weddle, P. Kelly, M. Skolaut, S. Johnson, J. James, L. Smock, M. Ross, J. Simmons, C. Wierzbik. (SECOND ROW) Miss Snider, sponsor; B. Decker, D. Heald, N. Alexander, J. Praay, S. Cooper, D. Etherington, B. Buis, D. Campbell, J. Kirsch, G. Schenck. (THIRD ROW) M. Sweet, R.

Thompson, M. Lane, D. Thompson, B. Andrews, D. Truax, A. Newlin, L. Leach, K. Bryant, S. Page, B. Young, D. Prince, K. Kellum. (FOURTH ROW) K. Ziegler, S. Lynch, S. Ingram, V. Johnston, M. Getchell, J. Weber, J. Weber, A. Cochran, T. Bally, B. Etchason, E. Woods, T. Sering, S. Bolen.

Girls' Athletic Association was organized in 1948 and has since proved to be a good means of teaching girls physical coordination and good sportsmanship.

Before a girl may take part in any G. A. A. activity, she must turn in a permission slip signed by a parent and a physician.

At a Mother and Daughter Banquet in the spring, awards are given on the following basis: 50 points, G. A. A. pin; 200 points, letter; 350 points, plaque; 500 points, sweater.

Miss Snider sponsors the organization. The officers are Vicki Johnston, president; Mary Ross, vice-president; Judy Watts, secretary; Alice Newlin, treasurer.

"Ha! You can't have it!" That is what Bonnie Buis seems to be saying as she keeps the ball out of Ann Cochran's reach. Basketball, girls' style, is a favorite sport of the G. A. A. members. They agree that boys' basketball may be a fast-moving game with plenty of action, but that girls' basketball is even more lively.

P.H.S. fans and cheerleaders say, "If you can't hear us, Varsity cheerleaders for the 1960-61 sports were (FRONT TO BACK) Kathy Kellum, Linda Leach, Linda Acton, and Vicki Johnston. These girls, under the sponsorship of Miss Snider, organized the cheerblock and led yells for all varsity games. They also worked with the administration and Student Council in planning parades, pep sessions, and celebrations. In November, the girls represented Plainfield at the annual cheerleaders' convention at Indiana University.

Four girls who worked with the varsity cheerleaders in organizing the cheerblock and various cheerblock activities were the "B" team cheerleaders, Lynn Smock, Donna Hobbs, Joan Alfred, and Becky Cole-scott. These girls led yells at all reserve football and basketball games and assisted with leading yells at the Wabash Valley tourney and sectionals. With the other cheerleaders, they rode on top of the fire truck leading the Quaker caravan that kicked off the sectionals for P. H. S.

Rufus Nysewander, the only man on the Traveling Quaker bus, had to endure the songs and shouts of his passengers.

we'll yell a little louder . . . and louder, and louder!"

Vicki, Linda, Linda, and Kathy are all up in the air about something, and with good reason, too. While the Quakers were turning in outstanding performances on the basketball court, the cheerblock was giving out with a mighty sound in the bleachers. Four cheerleaders could ask for no more from their team or fans.

Composed of about 120 girls, Pep Club is proud of the name it has earned throughout the area for its yells and routines. Some of the girls wear red sweaters and form a red block letter "P" against the white background of the other girls' white blouses. The girls also wear red Quaker ties, white gloves, and red and blue mitts. Together with the band and cheerleaders, Pep Club supports the team and adds color to the athletic events.

Traveling Quakers is Plainfield's cheerblock for out-of-town games. These girls wear different outfits for every game. Both the Pep Club and Traveling Quakers are sponsored by Miss Jane Snider.

After the game, there are no hard feelings. Instead, the losers congratulate the winners and wish them luck in the remainder of the state tourney.

Faculty, seniors, juniors, sophomores

The statement "We're from Plainfield; nobody's prouder!"
sums up the sentiments of the people around P.H.S.
Sometimes the statement varies somewhat and comes out, "We're the Class of '61," or '62, or '63, as the case may be.

Each class has its own personality and forms a part of the whole,
that whole being Plainfield High School.
Wholesome class rivalry gives way to school loyalty in critical situations, like sectionals.

Of course, one group of people around school never to be forgotten, especially by the students,
is the faculty and administration.

Their presence in the school is necessary to its smooth operation, accomplishment of its goals, and completion of its personality.

Some other people the school could not do without are the faithful cafeteria workers and custodians.

From the warehouse of memories that took three years to collect, which will be remembered first and longest?

Will it be something that is remembered only when the pages of a scrapbook are turned?

Or will it be a memory of the people who make up the spirit of P.H.S.?
That is a memory that needs no scrapbook to back it up.

ALBUM

Mary Jo Watson stores her memories in a scrapbook where she can keep them for reference in the years following graduation.

Grading papers, planning lessons, and helping students

Mrs. Masten (LEFT) is typical of the other Plainfield teachers as she grades endless stacks of papers. This time-consuming task seems to be as distasteful to the teachers as homework is to the students. (BELOW) Like the other teachers, Mrs. Haines regrets that she cannot spend more time with her family. She takes time out to listen as her daughter Linda plays the piano.

Everyone knows what little boys and little girls are made of, but few people know exactly what teachers are made of. The ingredients needed to make a good teacher are: knowledge, understanding, patience, sense of humor, personality, industry, endurance, kind words, and smiles. Happily, the P.H.S. teachers are made of this magical formula.

Senior year: Last stop on road through high school

Carrying out the business of the class of '61 during its senior year were Mr. Livingston, sponsor; Jim Edmondson, vice-president; Charles Swarn, president; Diana Heald, treasurer; and Susie Newlin, secretary. As they measure for caps and gowns, the officers' thoughts are on graduation. The planning of Class Night is one of the duties of the senior class officers. Their other duties include conducting any business transactions of the class. As the officers of the oldest class in school, they must also attempt to set an example for the coming senior classes at Plainfield.

Informal get-togethers like this one at Nancy Alexander's house will become a less familiar sight to the members of the class of '61 as they go different ways after graduation. For the time being, though, the seniors take advantage of their opportunities. Judy Weber, Mary Lou Lane, Nancy Alexander, Georgianna Schenck, and Judy Kirsch fill a lazy afternoon with cokes and potato chips, television, records, gossip, and the adult conversation of Francie Hilligoss, a young neighbor from the nursery school set.

Upperclassmen at last! Class of '62 become juniors

Exciting things began happening for the class of '62 when they were finally recognized as upperclassmen. Now the juniors could walk down the hall with their heads held high and participate in the game of torturing the sophs. Being juniors also brought the responsibility of selling concessions at home ball games. The class of '62 displayed its sales ability by selling more magazine subscriptions than any other class in P.H.S.'s history. Next came the long dreamed for and waited for class rings. The year's last and most exciting experience for the juniors was the Junior-Senior Reception in May. The event put the finishing touches on an already perfect year. As the time for commencement approached, the juniors became more aware of the fact that next year they will be seniors. Never forgetting their junior year, the class of '62 prepares to take the place of the graduating seniors.

Kay Sanders is proud of the portable stereo record player which she won for being top salesman in the junior class magazine sales campaign. Prizes were given according to the amount of money turned in. Kay's receipts totaled $206.42.

Counting the money the juniors have earned from their magazine sales and concessions are the junior class officers--Larry Gentner, treasurer; Harris Newlin, president; Dick Hardin, vice-president; Kay Johnston, secretary; and Mrs. Haines, sponsor. The money will be used chiefly to finance the Junior-Senior Reception in the spring. Earning the money and planning the reception is a great responsibility which falls to the junior class each year. Of course, the officers are largely in charge of the activities.

Juniors' motto—"Sell a coke today; have a reception in Selling concessions at football games was cold work, but the juniors performed the job cheerfully and efficiently.

Sophomores make big jump from junior high to high school

For the sophomores, life at P.H.S. was new, exciting, and perhaps a little frightening. As part of the high school, the sophomores were eligible for all the privileges and advantages of high school students. They contributed their fresh talents to co-curricular organizations, athletics, and all other phases of school life. On the other hand, as the youngest class in school, they were subjected to the teasing of the upperclassmen. However, before too many weeks of the school year had passed, even the superior juniors and seniors recognized the sophomores as part of Plainfield High. The class of '63 conquered any minor obstacles that they encountered along the way and, all in all, enjoyed a successful year.

The senior boys were the most impressive part of high school life to the sophomore girls. Nancy Hardin can't help stealing a glance at Steve Harlan.

With an eye to a busy junior year, the sophomore class officers stop in the hall to exchange ideas. Larry Leach, president; Judy Watts, treasurer; Mrs. Craig, sponsor; Jean Vickers, vice-president; and Diane Chitwood, secretary; headed the class of '63 in their first year at Plainfield High School. Although the sophomores had no actual duties or projects during the year, they played an important part in promoting the general welfare of the school by doing their part on committees and joining school functions.

Actually, Burt Mills and the other sophs were subjected to upperclassmen's jokes for only a short while. The class of '63 soon came into its own.

Students agree on four of favorite people around school

Four of the nicest and best-liked people around school are Mrs. Dellacca and Mrs. Affolter (ABOVE) and Mr. Estle and Mr. Winsted (BELOW). Although they are in the building during the noon hour only, the cafeteria workers are well-known to the students, especially for their cheerful smiles. During the few spare minutes they are able to find during the busy day, the custodians relax in their cozy quarters. The student body is well-acquainted with these men, too, who are always on hand to perform whatever services they can.

Thanks to our friends for their backing.

As we walk down the long, long hall for the last time,
our ears ring with echoes of laughing voices, scuffling feet, and banging locker doors;
our minds fill with pictures of the past year.
Although time may fade these memories,
they will always remain as "Silhouettes of P.H.S."
