Sharing, Learning, and Belonging, Loyal

Mr. Shore is seen at various times during the day slipping mail and bulletins into teachers' boxes for them to pick up sometime during their crowded schedules.

THE challenge of the new entwined with the warmth of tradition ... the facilities constantly expanding for our needs ... the opportunity to share and learn with others ... the sense of belonging and being needed ... the tireless dedication of teachers and administrators ... the chance for diversion and service in our organizations ... the thrilling competition in sports ... the exuberant, overflowing devotion to our mighty Quakers ... a deeply-rooted loyalty ... and a reliable preparation for the world which needs and eagerly awaits us ... all this and much, much more PHS gives to us. So proudly we give A CHEER FOR PHS.

Students and Teachers Give Cheers for PHS

Latonna Harris and Linda Gootee excitedly receive their mum corsages for homecoming. Sunshine Society sponsored this project to boost school spirit.

The majorettes entertain half-time crowds with twirling routines and marching formations with the band. In this band show they used sparklers.

Cherishing Generations of Accomplishments,

THIS school year 607 PHS'ers have a field of 42 classes from which to choose, 18 organizations to join, 30 teachers to guide us, and a section of 7 new classrooms. We are a part of a community that loyally backs and supports the high school. We have years of high achievement behind us and the security of the promise of a bright future. As we gain the insight and understanding for finding useful places in society, we will gratefully and nostalgically remember the vital part PHS played in our lives. In this spirit we give A CHEER FOR PHS.

Mr. Stearley talks with a group of students in the cafeteria at noon and discusses an issue from class.

Lettermen Vince Abell and Marvin McCollum pause to admire the many trophies PHS athletes have won over the years in sports competition.

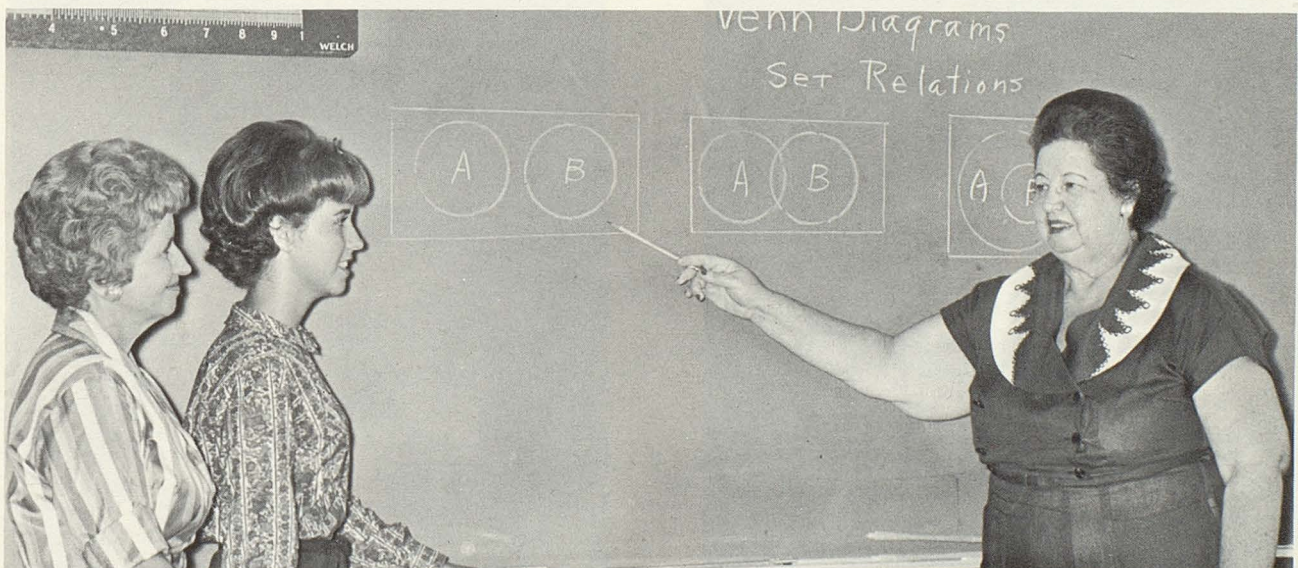

Students Appreciate the Modern Role of PHS

Dale Miller, Alan Fischer and Paul Bos-trum notice that the Dairy Queen is one of the Plainfield merchants that "backs the Quakers."

Mrs. Masten explains a new mathematics concept to Mrs. Paul Kellum and her daughter Peggy. Mrs. Masten had Mrs. Kellum in class when she attended Plainfield High School, and Mrs. Masten is now teaching Peggy. Subjects change, but PHS keeps up with modern trends in all of its departments.

Spectacle of Homecoming Displays Beauties,

The excited, smiling girls chosen to reign at homecoming festivities were Kathy Lambrecht, sophomore princess, Anita Castetter, homecoming queen, and Sheila Martin, junior princess.

PHS's fourteenth annual homecoming unfolded in a traditional array of color and excitement. The parade began the evening, proudly flaunting queen and princess hopefuls, the floats, cheerleaders, and band.

A homecoming would not be complete without a Quaker victory, so the mighty gridmen conquered for PHS. For many, this win was subordinated by that half-time climax--the queen's coronation and announcement of the winning float. This year, the student body elected the queen. It also chose her court, which consisted of two princesses, a junior and a sophomore.

With a final burst of energy PHS'ers danced to music provided with a "good guy" flourish at a soc-hop sponsored by the Student Council.

"Hatch Out a Victory" was the clever theme of the winning sophomore float.

Floats, Conquering Gridmen, and Spirited Fans

Seniors' float was a red and white house.

Happy homecoming queen Anita Castetter enters the gym decorated for the soc-hop following the game.

The entry of the junior class in the float contest was "Victory is Hours," a large clock with a Quaker represented on its face.

Spare Minutes Are Packed with Fun and Cheerleaders Debbie Allen and Cathy Shuler keep the outside school bulletin board up to date.

Stephanie Jacob, Jack Rutherford and Sandy Cookingham enjoy some grapes from the Fruit-O-Matic.

To construct: a pyramid. Whether these seniors are building a solid geometry project or demonstrating their athletic prowess is doubtful, but the result was an inextricable heap of tangled seniors.

Excitement Both in and out of School

PHS is not all studying and drudgery. It is also happy, lively fun.

Lighter moments of school life include field trips, which are both entertaining and educational, hikes to assemblies, and impromptu student gatherings between classes. After school hours we might be seen socializing at the "Ranch," attending unbelievably crowded "pitch-in" dinners before ball-games, or staying awake until the wee hours at a slumber party discussing anything and everything. We may also, with a little luck, have dates.

PHS'ers can be observed doing everything from compiling detailed research in the Public Library to executing various rough-and-tumble gymnastics or plummeting with wild abandon down snowy hills in the winter. We at PHS mix amusement and diversion with work to round out our schedules and our lives.

Dinah Dees and Steve Hall enjoy jumping and executing different stunts on Steve's trampoline.

These girls, like many PHS'ers congregate at the Ranch to get a Coke or just see friends and talk.

Dancers all doing different variations form circles on the gym floor. These girls are doing the Frugg.

THE majority of PHS's home football and basketball games were followed by spirited, animated soc-hops. Sponsored by various school organizations, the soc-hops were well-attended by energetic, enthusiastic PHS'ers. Both the co-ordinated and agile and the rather unco-ordinated danced to records varying in pace from the slow to the very rapid tempo.

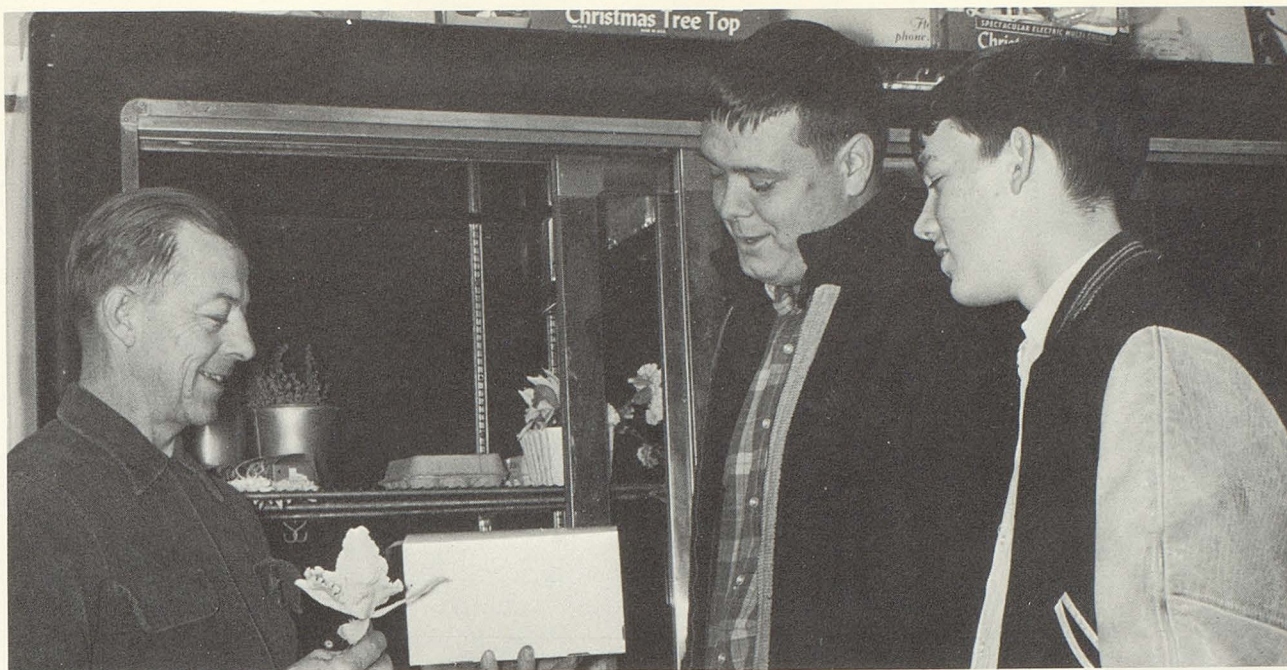

British poet Lord Byron expressed the spirited atmosphere of this year's soc-hops very well when he wrote; "On with the dance! let joy be unconfined; No sleep 'til morn, When Youth and Pleasure meet To chase the glowing hours with flying feet."

Lively Soc-Hops and Lovely Formal Dances

After ball games, the gym is crowded with PHS'ers listening to the latest records and doing the most popular dances including everything from the Swim and the Monkey to the Dog and the Jerk.

When the boys forget to ask their dates what kind of flowers they would like, Mr. Schooler, the local florist, always has helpful suggestions to offer. Bill Trump and Barney Gerdt are about to decide on an orchid.

Brighten the High School Social Calendar

Rustling skirts . . . fragrant and slightly crushed corsages . . . lilting band music floating through the warm night air . . . the excitement of the night that is "finally here" . . . all these things help "set the scene" for PHS's formal dances.

Although patterns and customs have changed at PHS, two of the dances still remain traditional. The Proms, which are now divided into two separate parties, and the Sunshine Society sponsored Sweetheart Dance are enjoyed by PHSers each year.

The Proms, the high point of the year for many, are planned and financed entirely by student committees. After much time and effort, worry and frustration, a Prom is finally organized, staged, and over much too soon . . . but not forgotten.

The Sweetheart Dance's theme is "Stairway to the Stars." Glittering stars provide the backdrop for a glowing evening.

These formal dances combine to brighten the social scene at PHS.

Half of the fun of a dance is the planning. Martha Macy and Lynn Rutherford share Janis Newton's excitement over her formal.

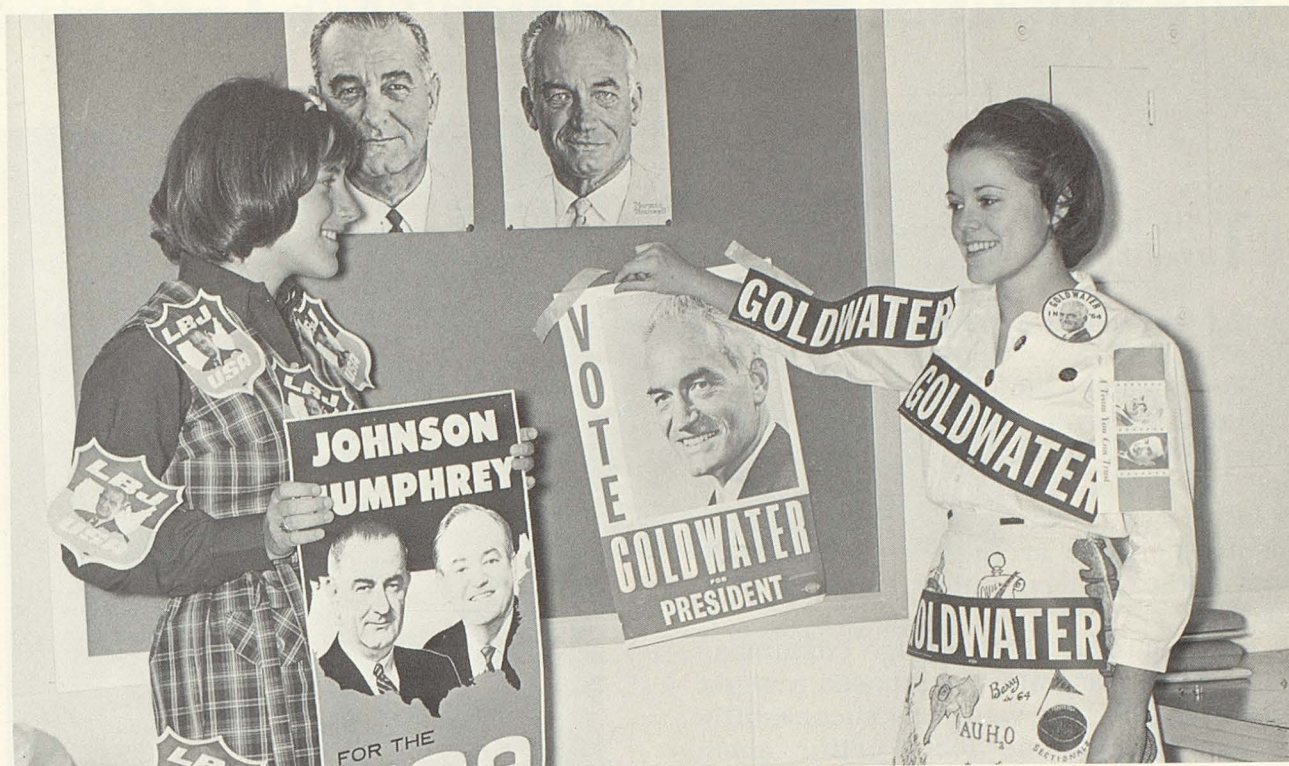

Peggy Hochreiter and Judy Hamblen, heads of the junior class magazine sales, look over some of the prizes high salesmen of the class will receive.

AFTER satisfactorily completing stacks of homework, PHS'ers find time to squeeze a committee meeting or two in the twenty-five minute lunch period, sell everything from magazine subscriptions to tickets to plays and various other performances, catch fan buses and yell themselves hoarse for the mighty Quakers at ballgames, work diligently on homecoming floats for hours on end, attend club meetings, make posters and campaign buttons to supplement vigorous campaigns for class officers, poll student opinion on the national election (and discover that the students favored the Democratic presidential nominee for the first time in many years at PHS), practice football, basketball, baseball and after school track, listen to albums and talk with friends, buy loafers, mohair sweaters, A-line skirts, and madras and pin-stripped anything, and on and on. The list of activities is nearly endless, but PHS'ers complete one day's responsibilities and are ready to face the next with the amazing vitality of youth.

Activities and Leisure Time Supplement

Students eagerly read their Quaker Shakers to find out school news and the latest happenings at PHS.

PHS'ers took an active interest in the presidential election this year. Of different political opinions, Nancy Blair and Kathy Dowden put up posters and campaign for the candidate of their choice.

a Heavy Schedule of Study and Work

When PHS'ers get together they enjoy music. On weekends or after school they listen to records while studying or just relaxing. Their repertoire includes everything from the Beach Boys to musical scores.

Band, Chorus, and Speech Club Entertain

THE appearance of a few shockingly red-headed students in the halls last November could be explained by the fact that it was, once again, "play time" at PHS.

The Speech Club's "Life With Father" depicted humorously the problems of one red-headed Day family in 1880. Father and his wife Vinnie, their young sons, relatives and friends, all are involved in the tremendous struggle between father and mother to have father properly baptized.

Although the 1880 vintage costumes, hair styles, and stage set posed a slight problem, the play was very successfully presented. As one local critic commented, "The casting was excellent, the players lived their roles, and the net result was a performance approaching professional status."

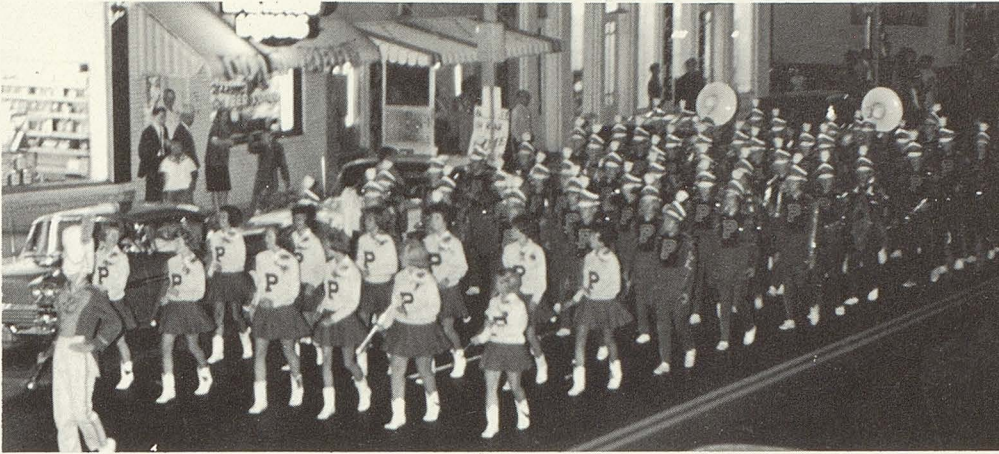

Posing for the portrait of the Clarence Day family are cast members: L. McMahan, J. Cutrell, G. Manning, J. Hamontre, D. Skirvin, and J. Hodson.

The cast members were as follows: (BACK ROW) B. Trent, S. Vickers, M. Swinford, P. Kellum, S. Simmons, L. McMahan, J. Cutrell, G. Manning, B. Shrum, R. Niles, M. Shoemaker, and E. Screes. (SEATED) J. Hamontre, D. Skirvin, and S. Ginn. (FLOOR) J. Hodson. The play was directed by Mrs. Betty Niles.

PHS and Community with Music and Drama

The PHS marching band and majorettes add music and color to homecoming as they lead the parade from the junior high school to the football field.

ALTHOUGH PHS's academic program is often seemingly strict and regimented, it is occasionally enlightened by entertainment. One major source of this entertainment is music, which is provided by PHS's band and chorus.

The band's eighty members, under the direction of Mr. Dale Jackson, provided diversion for PHSers and the community in many ways. They presented interesting and entertaining music and formations for football and basketball audiences. Also formed for public enjoyment were a dance band, a pep band, and a concert band.

The chorus, also with eighty members, acquired new robes this year. Directed by Mrs. James McCart, the chorus has branched out into an ensemble, mixed choir, and male and female choruses. These different groups sang at community and private functions, school convocations, and commencement exercises.

The main musical presentation of the year was the Christmas program, for which the chorus and band combined.

The members of the ensemble practice their parts for several numbers they will sing at a concert.

ACADEMICS

Study, study, study. At PHS, classes were larger and subjects were tougher than last year's. In their classes students gave of themselves by working with an open mind and learning. In so doing they prepared themselves for the world after high school.

They learned better communications with others in English, composition, speech, journalism and language classes and logical, precise reasoning in math classes. They attained a useful knowledge of science in preparation for the hyper-scientifically-minded world, and they learned many skills for vocational careers in various commercial courses.

PHS taught all this with the hope of helping students in the quest for useful, satisfying lives, which will secure a better world for posterity.

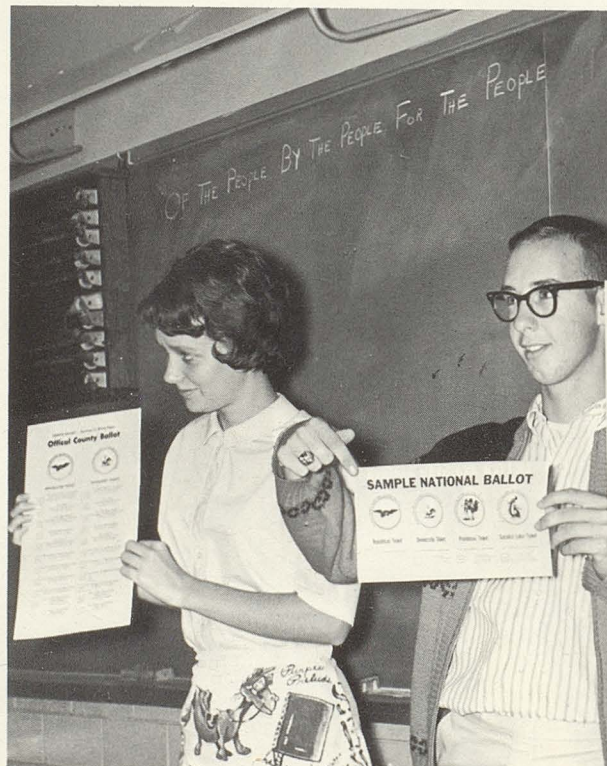

World history class views a filmstrip on an ancient civilization.

The Past Gives Insight for the Future

In social studies classes, students learn of people, places, and events, both past and present. They are benefiting from both mistakes and accomplishments of their predecessors; they can draw upon the knowledge of what has gone before to try to improve the future.

World history, an elective, deals with civilizations from ancient times to the present. Required United States history imparts knowledge of the American heritage and the building of this country.

A new course this year, American Problems, keeps students up to date with current affairs. Government and economics, both required for the senior year, give an understanding of the American system: government explains the functioning of the democratic process on local and national levels while economics describes capitalism and free enterprise.

Wanda Jobst and Alan Klay show their government class sample ballots for the general election.

Sharon Spencer finds that a lot of outside reading and research is necessary in writing her sociology term paper. Texts in the library are good sources of reference for required reports.

Psychology and Sociology Study Behavior

Understanding man's behavior and his roles in society is covered in the fields of psychology and sociology. Psychology students learn reasons for behavior, both normal and abnormal; they learn of personality development; and they learn of the workings of the mind and nervous system.

Sociology attempts to discover the basic social institutions and shows man as a member of groups. Sociology explores such subjects as religion, demography, race relations, juvenile delinquency, and other fields of interest in society.

Both classes have much outside reading. During the year, they also take field trips to various places of interest where first-hand knowledge of their subject is gained.

Greg Kolodziej, Joe Cutrell and Louise Bowman try to decide what the shapes are in the Rorschach ink-blot test. This is a method of study in psychology.

Reading, Writing Teach Self-Expression

Mrs. Craig helps her sophomore literature students check out books for outside reports.

The realization that the major link to one's fellow man is verbal and literate communication enables one to see the importance of the courses of English, literature, and composition.

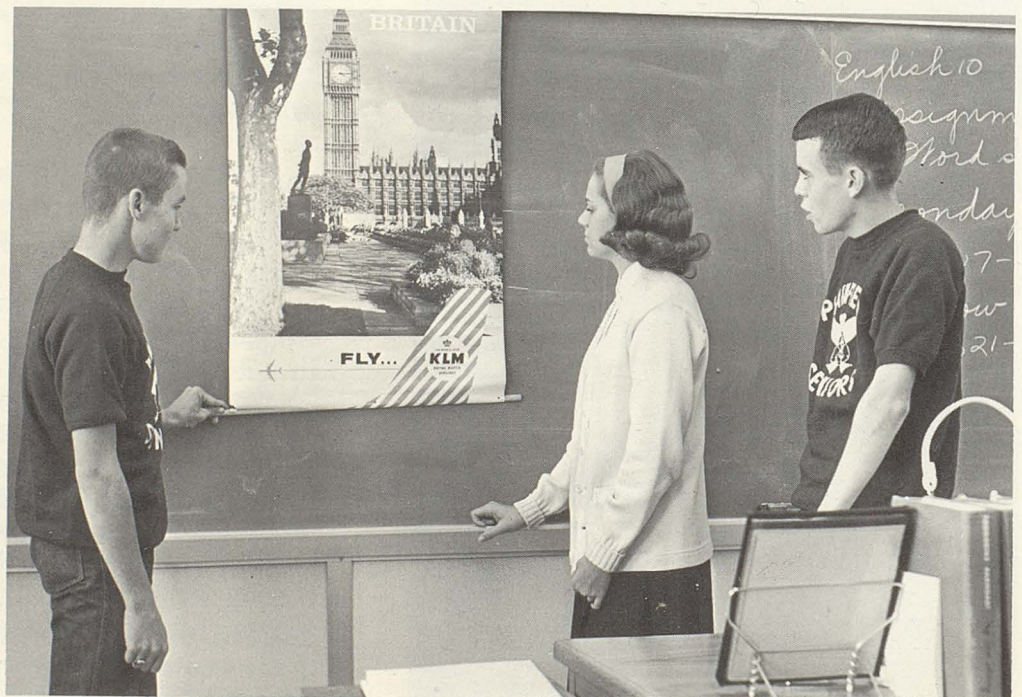

Although students in English classes often felt swamped with endless rules, memorizations, and tests, the end result was a more complete knowledge of a socially acceptable usage of the English language.

Literature students journeyed through pages of the works of authors from Chaucer to John Steinbeck. They gained a deeper insight into and appreciation of the various types of literary works.

Composition students wrote, and wrote, and wrote some more, until it seemed that their cerebral resources must surely be exhausted. But these resources continued to produce fresh ideas for increasing the force of their written self-expression.

These courses offer PHS'ers a chance for appreciation and improvement of the written and spoken word, thus improving their intra-personal relationships.

In English Literature class, Tom Cain, Pam Linden and Leo Dohogne visualize a trip to Britain.

Speech and Journalism Stress Communication

Journalism students, Ernie Screes, Linda Harris and Rita Peters compare newspapers from other high schools.

One might observe a visitor at PHS enacting the classic double-take as he passes Room 22 when a speech class is in session. He might be shocked to see a student gaily executing various roller skating tricks in a very short skating skirt, or bathing a dog, or lining up a target with a foreboding and ominous looking firearm.

The visitor would be reassured that these seemingly un-scholastic activities really are a supervised, planned part of PHS's program. The speech classes concentrate upon helping students acquire, through practice, the art of self-expression before an audience.

Journalism students study the business of mass media; news stories, features, and editorials. They gain practice by writing for the school paper. Journalism lays a firm foundation for PHS's aspiring young authors.

In a demonstration speech, Fred Ward shows the class some bowling techniques and equipment.

Linda Dwinell and Becky Albertson mimeograph programs for the school in a business machines course, an elective in the business department.

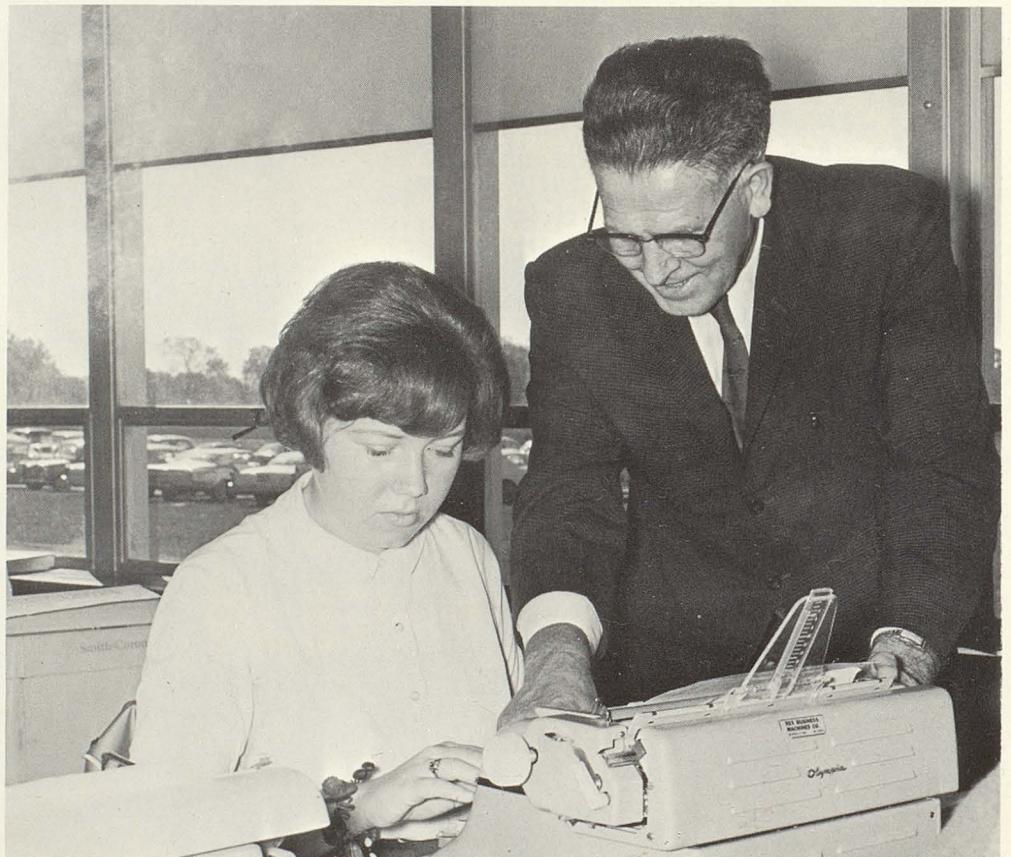

With commercial courses becoming more and more popular among the students, PHS has developed a fine business department of typing, bookkeeping, shorthand, and office machines.

Speed, accuracy, and timing play a main role in the business courses. The students acquire the ability to type, check figures, and operate mimeograph and ditto machines efficiently.

The students also attain practical experience in business management by running the bookstore.

In the future years, PHS plans to expand its business department to accommodate the needs of the rapidly changing business world.

PHS'ers Are Ready for the World of Mr. Pike checks Margie Homan's words per minute for speed and net words for accuracy on a timed writing in a typing class.

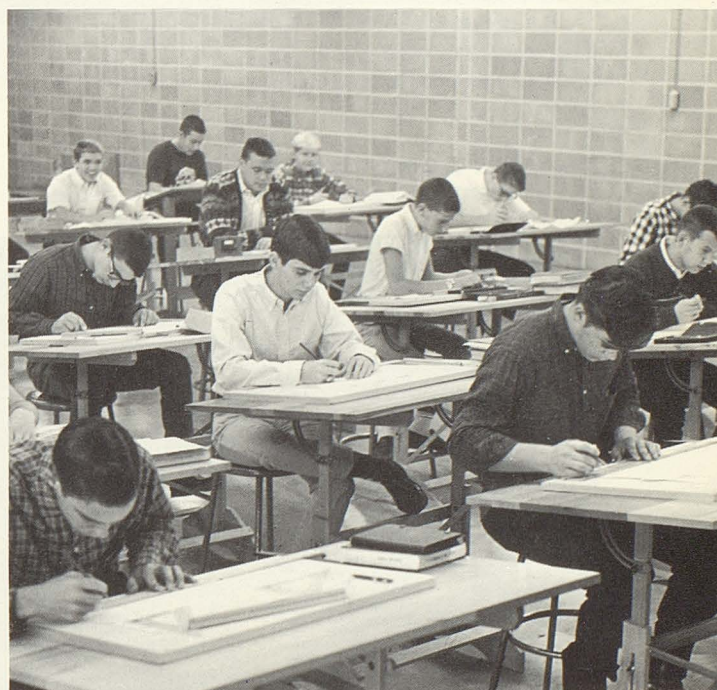

These girls in home economics are about to enjoy a meal they have prepared.

Business, Homemaking, and Engineering

The aim of the vocational arts department at PHS is to present valuable courses for career students.

The detailed sketching in drafting and the perfection in wood shop train students for a useful future. PHS has future plans to construct even better facilities for the ever growing industrial arts department.

Practicing the uses of sewing, cooking, and designing, the girls at PHS are furthering their knowledge of domestic skills. After they have completed their home economics courses, these girls will know the fundamentals for providing a good home life.

At their drawing tables, drafting students concentrate on doing sketches accurately and neatly.

Mathematicians Calculate and Construct

PHS realizes the challenge of our space-age and offers a complete program of mathematics.

Armed with slide rule and protractor, logarithm charts and formulas, PHS'ers determinedly set out to meet this challenge. By conquering the Pythagorean theorem and logs, they are acquiring a logic and reasoning vital to our world.

Plane Geometry, which deals with plane figures, teaches students to reason with basic physical relationships. Algebra II completes the Algebra I course, and constructs a basis for further math. Trigonometry incorporates the fundamentals of and correlations between parts of the triangle, and College Algebra prepares students for college math.

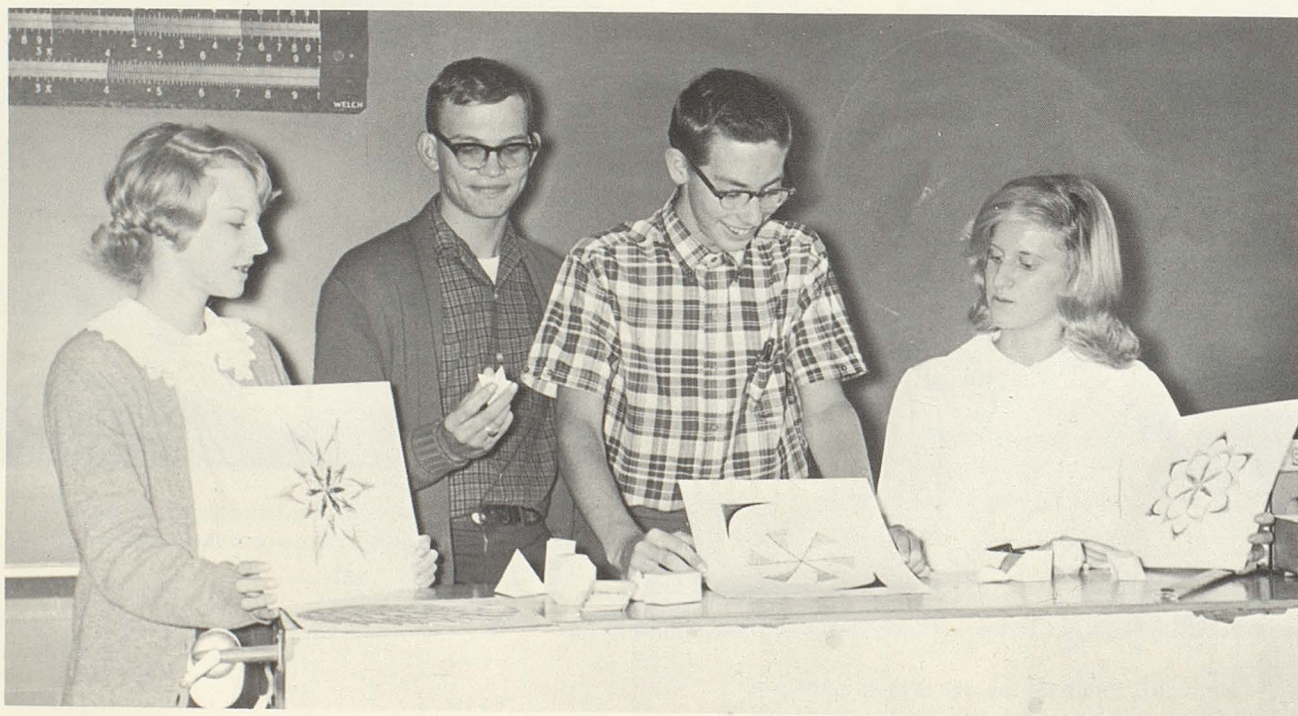

In the future, PHS plans to expand its math program and add even more advanced courses in its curriculum.

PHS realizes today's challenge and meets it.

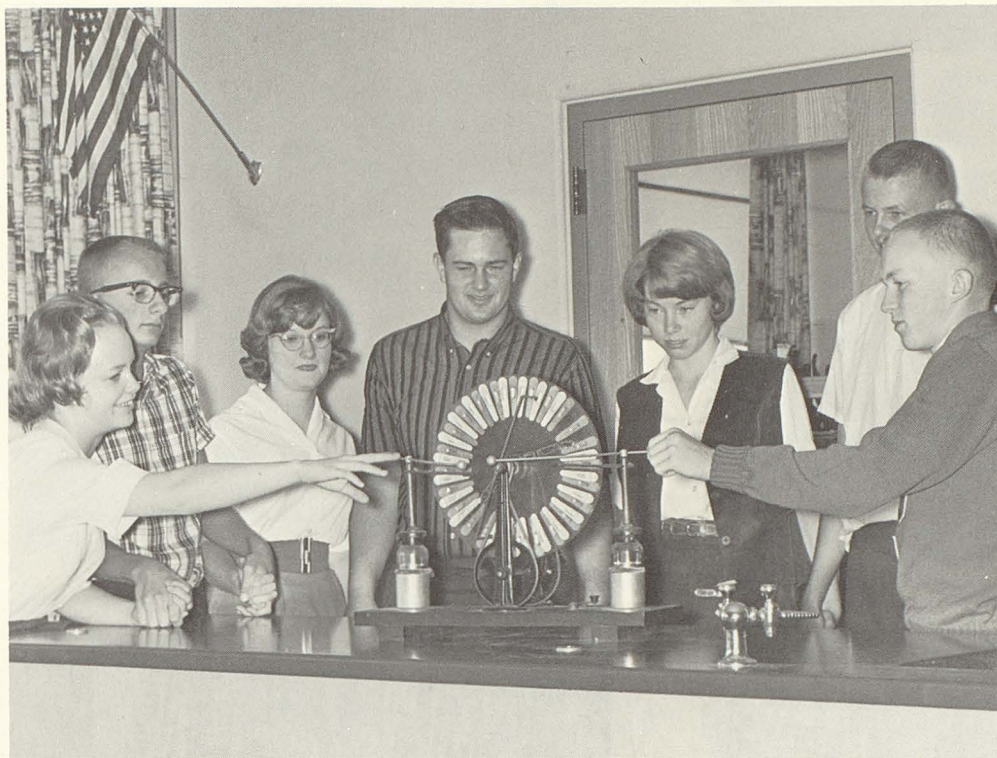

With the large model slide rule, Jim Gentry and Pam Downey illustrate the solution of a problem.

Plane geometry is the study of the surfaces of various polygons. These students examine embroidered designs of figures and the plane surfaces of geometric solids.

Scientific Minds Seek Natural Wonders

Physics students use the Wimshurst machine to generate static electricity.

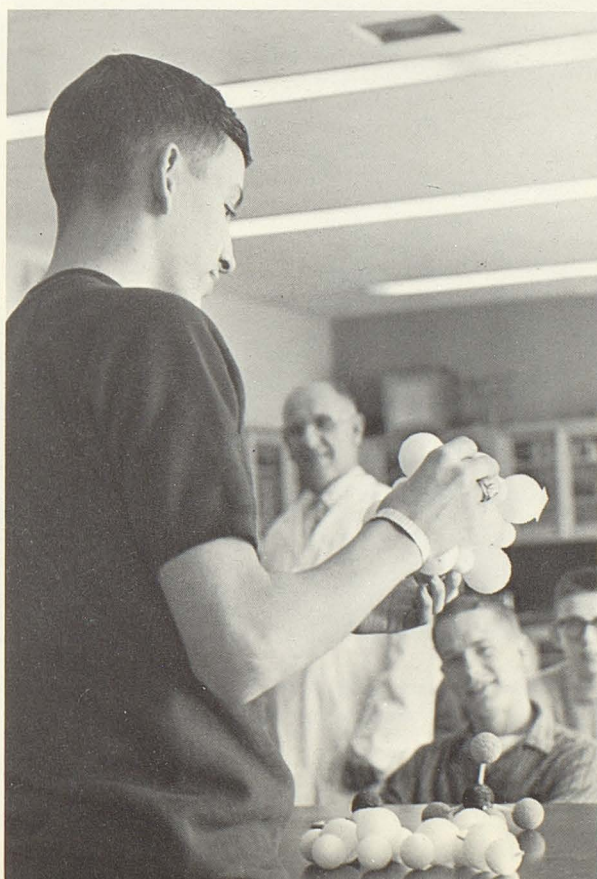

This world is a hyper-scientific one. The space-race and many other research programs are being conducted at a break-neck pace. It is a world in dire need of young people with a sound scientific knowledge and ability.

PHS acknowledges this need by providing qualified teachers and extensive laboratory equipment, thus giving PHS'ers the opportunity to gain a firm foundation in the science field.

PHS offers the physical, biological, and chemical sciences in its organized, well-rounded science program, which offers students a preparation for living and working in this scientific age.

Expansion is in the future for this department, too. PHS is constantly expanding to keep up with and meet the demands of the scientifically-minded world of today.

Brent Bowman explains the atomic structure of a molecule to the chemistry class.

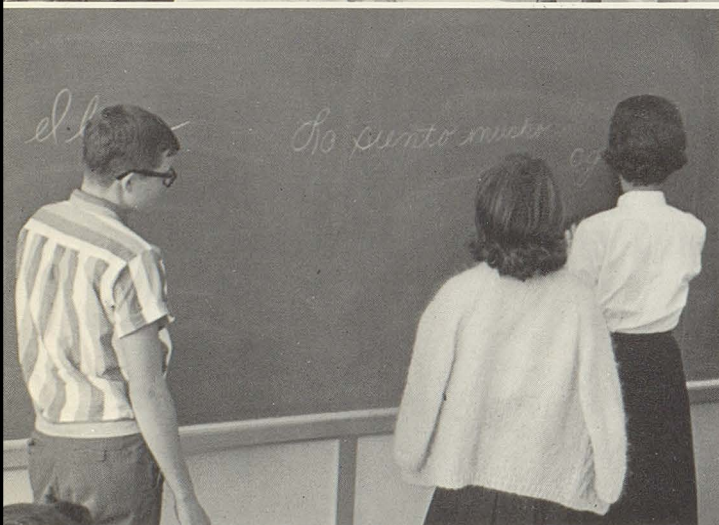

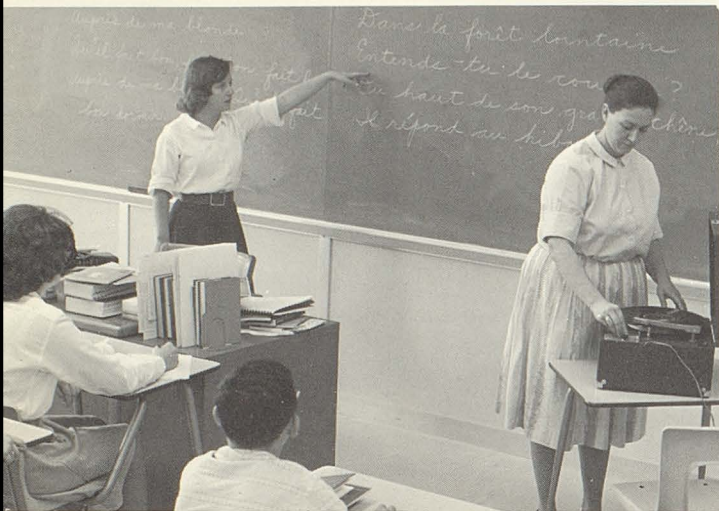

PHS Offers French, Spanish, and Latin

The French class learns some new words while they enjoy singing a French song. Beth Clouse points out the words to the song as Mrs. Sukapdjo plays a record.

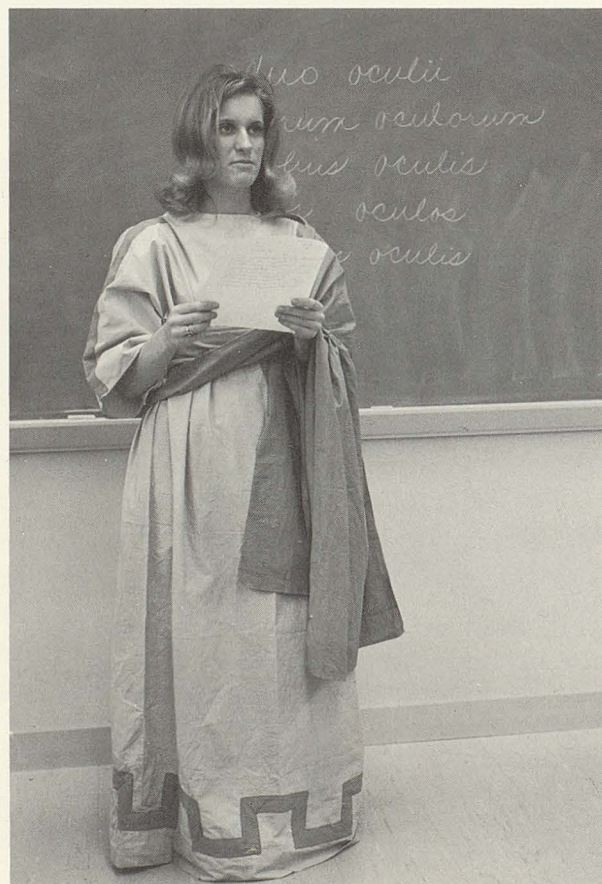

Today's shrinking world calls for an expanding of medias of communication. Students prepare for this need by exposing themselves to the languages offered at PHS.

French, Spanish, and the very "undead" Latin are the three foreign languages offered causing PHS to be filled with cries of "parlezvous francais?", "¿comprende usted?", and the classic recitations of "amo, amas, amat . . .". Each of these courses is a part of PHS's program to enable students to communicate reasonably well with their fellow-men in foreign countries and to understand foreign customs.

The language department also contemplates expansion by an addition of languages into its program in the future.

Students in this Spanish class practice writing Spanish by drilling on words and sentences at the board.

Appropriately dressed, Kathy DeBaun reads a report on the dress of Roman women to the Latin class.

Electives Add Interest and Variety

In driver's education, Lee Hauser shows Mary Jane Forsythe the distributor and other engine parts.

To enable the student to obtain a variation in his curriculum and a chance to pursue his non-academic interests, PHS offers a wide range of electives.

PHS'ers have the courses of art, driver's education, health and safety, band and chorus from which to choose. These and other electives enable students to gain skills and expand culturally.

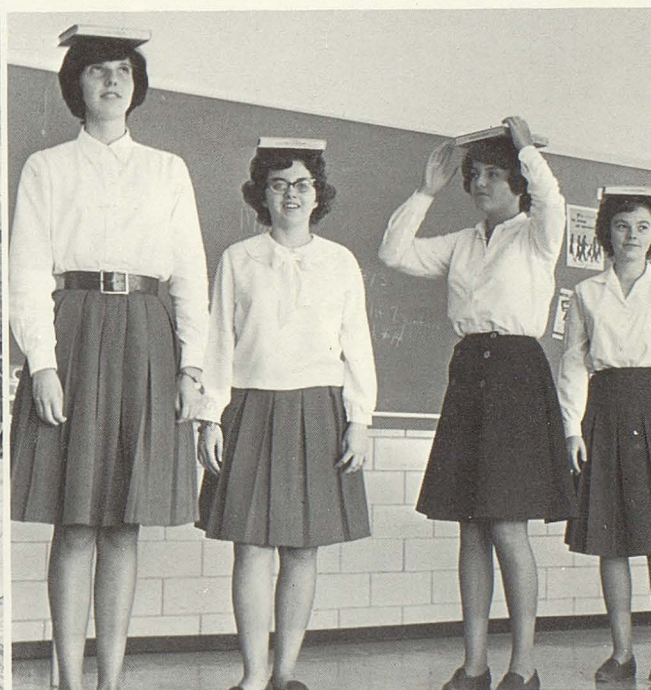

This year a new art teacher taught art students self-expression and appreciation of the finer arts. Also, resplendent new robes added to the beauty and effectiveness of the chorus.

Next year driver's education may be offered only in the summer, thus cutting down on expenses and gaining teachers and classrooms for other subjects during the school year.

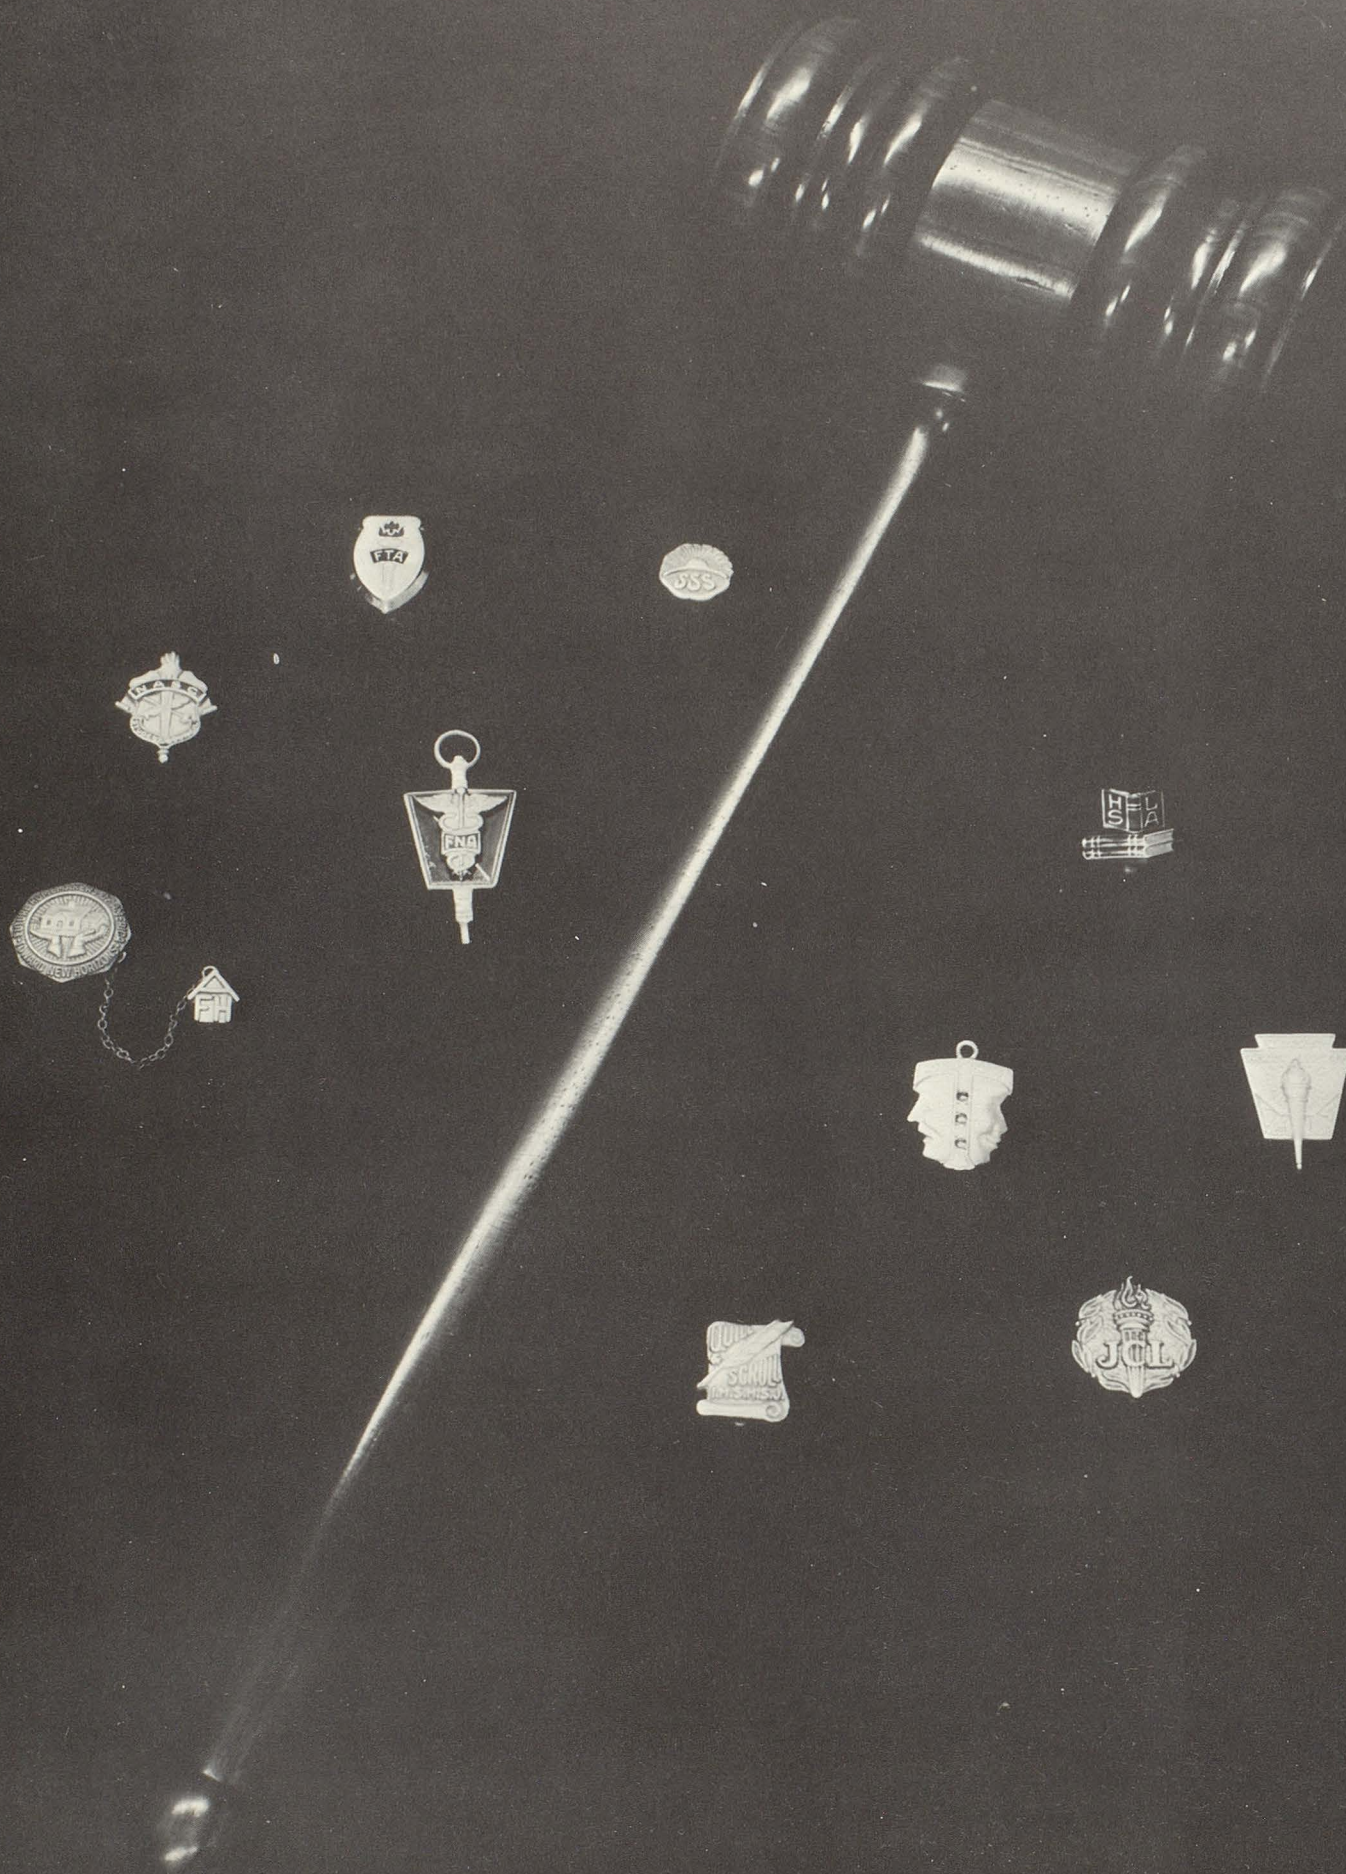

PHS's program of electives is and will continue changing for an even greater non-academic choice for students in the future.

Art students work on parts for their puppets while Vera Williams manipulates a completed marionette.

Carefully balancing books, these girls in health class are practicing correct posture.

ORGANIZATIONS

For as many varied interests and ambitions as PHS'ers possess, there are probably as many clubs organized at PHS.

These organizations provide students with the chance to participate in projects outside the classroom. They also afford PHS'ers the opportunity to serve others and to develop socially as leaders and followers.

Student Council Represents Student Body

Sherry Ginn, Rick Chandler, and Kathy Dowden trim a Christmas tree which the Council provides.

The main job of the Student Council is to provide PHS with a vital link in school government--a communication between students and administration.

In providing this "vital link," the Council assists school management upon request and provides a "sounding board" for students' requests and complaints. The Student Council also works toward the betterment of student citizenship and morale.

Among the Council's projects are selling popcorn at basketball games and sponsoring fan busses, class elections, and homecoming activities. The Council also decorates the school for various holiday seasons and athletic and social events.

Student Council members are directly elected from self-nominated candidates from the student body. One representative from each homeroom also participates on the Council.

Assisting Council President John Hoffner are Vice-president Don Skirvin, Treasurer Bonnie Poillion, and Secretary Sharon Milhon and Mrs. Haines.

PHS's Honor Society is an organization for the recognition of outstanding students. These students are chosen by the faculty on the basis of scholarship, leadership, character, and service. Ten percent of the junior class and fifteen percent of the senior class are chosen each year.

Honor Society members promote incentive for scholastic achievement by presenting the Girard Award to exceptional math students and issuing scholarship loans to aid those deserving them.

The main project of Honor Society this year was sponsoring the Hootenanny.

Honor Society officers for the 1964-65 year were Tom Ewbank, president; Larry Slaton, vice-president; Cynthia Marshall, secretary; Sylvia Mills, treasurer; and Ernie Screes, historian. Mrs. Masten is the sponsor of Honor Society.

Cathy Shuler, Larry McMahan, Bill Muncy, and John Hoffner enjoy an Honor Society pitch-in dinner.

Future Homemakers of America, the largest organization in PHS, strives to promote the appreciation of and interest in the often unappreciated and uninteresting art of home-making. Through their many projects and activities, FHAers prepare for success in not only family life, but also community life.

These goals are accomplished by FHAers' multitude of activities. While the Work Day is traditional, new ideas are constantly being carried out. A major project was sponsoring a performance of the Purdue Glee Club. "Daddy-Date Night" and Teacher Appreciation Night have recently been incorporated into the year's already crowded schedule.

Also, this year FHAers brightened the Christmas of the elderly when they took gifts and sang carols to the people in the County Home.

Officers for the past year were President, Jenny Meyers; Vice-president, Cheryl Ray; Secretary, Mary Ann Swinford; and Treasurer, Sharon Stout.

In their one period per day, the yearbook and school paper editors and their staffs manage to do the business, mechanical, and editorial work involved in publishing the paper, the yearbook, the English literary magazine, and the school calendar.

Headed by Bonnie Poillion and Becky Wilkerson, editors of the SILHOUETTES and QUAKER SHAKER respectively, the combined staffs of approximately twenty students published again this year two "first place publications."

Working closely with the editors were Mary Whitmire, assistant yearbook editor; Cynthia Marshall, yearbook copy editor; Vicki Morgan, yearbook business manager; Richard Niles, paper sports editor; Mark Shoemaker, photographer; Sue Vickers, general assistant; and reporters for the paper. Mrs. Niles is the publications staff advisor.

Editor Becky Wilkerson, sports editor Richard Niles, and Mrs. Niles plan the next issue of the QUAKER SHAKER before stories are assigned.

Sunshine Society Members Remember Others

Susan Harris and Jean Arden collect gifts the SSS will take to the Glenn Home for Dependent Children.

As can be very easily and quickly deduced from its title, the Sunshine Society's purpose is that of brightening the lives of others by kind and helpful deeds.

The year's program for Sunshiners included "Bundle Day," the presentation of a style show, hosting various speakers at meetings, holding a talent show, and a pitch-in dinner. SSS sponsored a Sweetheart Dance for St. Valentine's Day and one soc-hop during the year.

Perhaps the most well-known and traditional activity of SSS is the selection of an "Ideal Lady" by each girl. This Ideal Lady is remembered throughout the year with cards and gifts, until the identity of the Sunshiner is revealed to the lady at the end of the year. At this time a tea honoring the Mothers and Ideal Ladies is held.

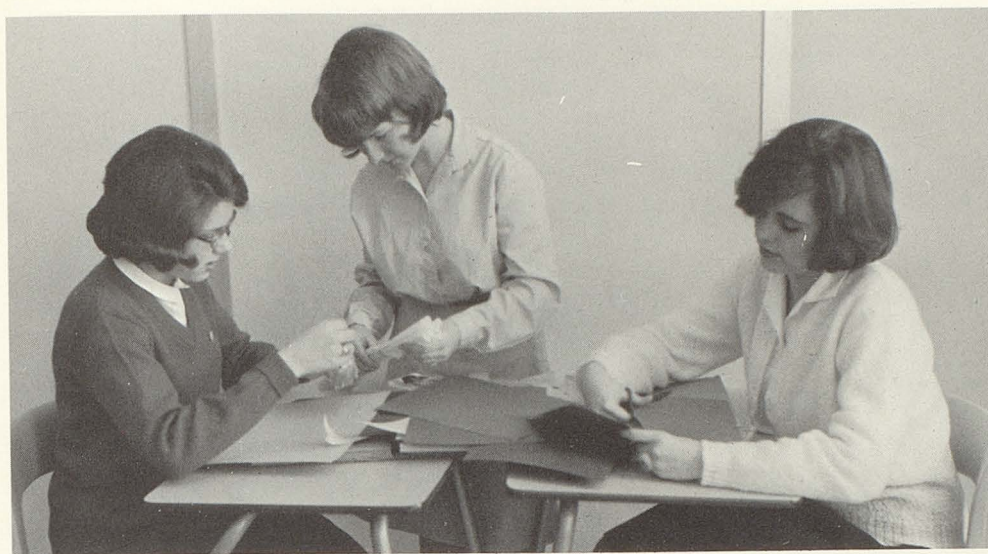

Jean Arden presided this year. Miss Durr and Mrs. Smith sponsored the organization.

Every "ham" in school eventually finds his way into the Speech Club, for it is in this organization that the faces of comedy and tragedy come alive for young actors and actresses.

All eighty members have the opportunity to act, to help produce, and to enjoy seeing professional productions.

Besides presenting two three act plays each year, the members enjoy a Christmas party at which several of these young actors and actresses present a one act play. Gifts donated by each member are given to the Indiana Boys' School.

Another project of the Speech Club is to sponsor a "Speech Festival." Ben Davis H.S., Danville H.S., and PHS all present student directed one act plays.

Members also attend the two field trips each year to see college play productions.

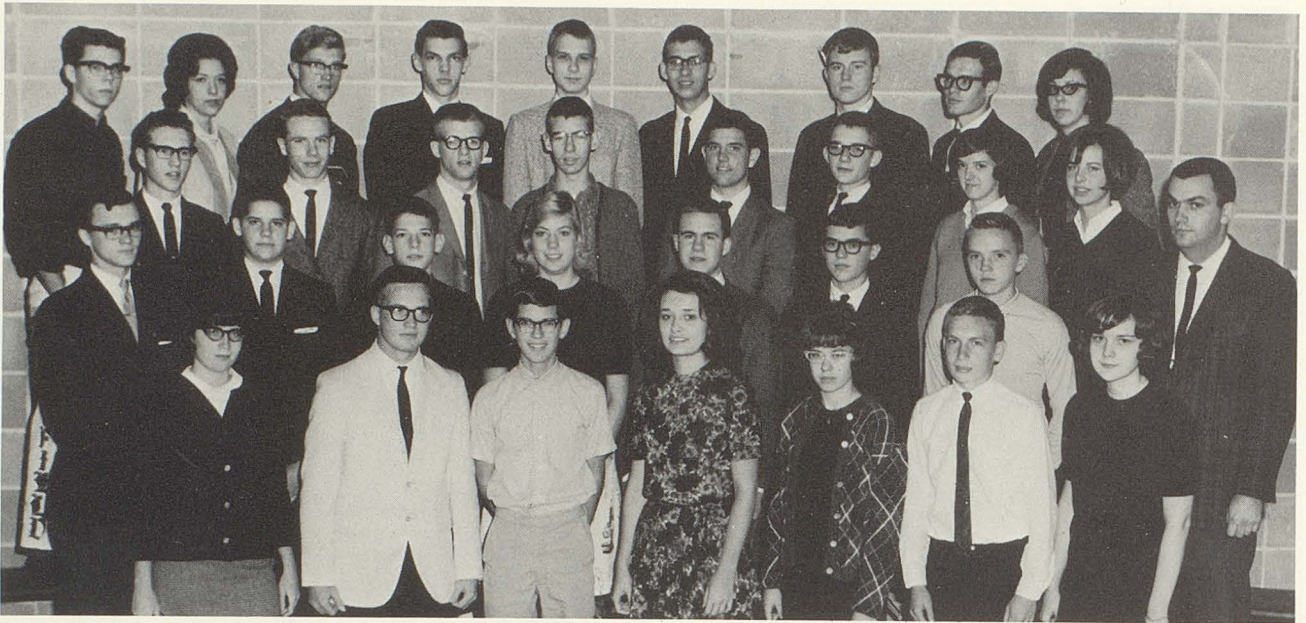

Finally, members have the option of telling stories to children in the grade schools at Christmas time.

Officers for the 1964-1965 school year are Richard Niles, president; Gary Manning, vice-president; and Mary Whitmire, secretary-treasurer. The sponsor is Mrs. Niles.

Science Club offers students a chance to gain knowledge and skill in science by exploring the vast and quickly expanding "wonder-world" of scientific marvels.

In carrying through this program, the Science Club takes many and various field trips, hosts learned speakers at meetings, sponsors the annual Science Fair, and works to better the science library.

Through these activities, students can develop outside of the classroom in the areas of science, and thus prepare for a world which puts so much emphasis upon scientific matters.

Advising and assisting members were sponsors Mr. Grosskreutz and Mr. Rogers. Jim Arnold presided over the club this past year.

FOR those interested in nursing, Future Nurses of America offers the chance to become acquainted with different aspects of the medical field.

Through field trips and guest speakers who already make a career in medicine, members gain second-hand information by seeing and hearing about the many aspects of the field.

Many members obtain firsthand practice by volunteering as teen-aids at the Hendricks County Hospital.

WHILE serving the student body, the student librarians at PHS gain information in literary matters. By efficiently helping puzzled students in the use of the library facilities, these librarians prove themselves invaluable. Countless amounts of time and energy are saved by their efforts.

The student librarians' activities are not confined to the library, however. Parties, conventions, and other projects fill their off-hours.

Latin Club Studies Classical Civilizations

In the Junior Classical League, members promote interest and participation in learning about Roman and Greek cultures and customs through a variety of films and guest speakers.

In the spring, a Roman banquet is held as an initiation for new members. Simulated to actual banquets of the old Romans, the dinner is held with guests in togas, finger bowls, and authentic Roman menus. The initiates act as slaves to the old members.

JCL members also attend the annual spring state convention at one of the various college or university campuses in the state.

Mary Ann Swinford presided over JCL, and Miss Newlin sponsored the group.

WITH a professional and cheerful air, the members of the eighty voice choir entertain and thrill their audiences at each public performance.

The 1964-1965 year is a milestone for the members of the vocal music department; the chorus is now robed in beautiful blue robes with white shawls monogrammed with PHS.

Other groups of the department are the ensemble, girls sextet, mixed ensemble, and a quartet. All groups are directed by Mrs. Rosemary McCart. Dale Miller is the accompanist and Don Skirvin is the student director.

The chorus presents a Christmas concert, a spring concert, and a musical dramatic production each year.

"And the band played on!" No other group around PHS is more evident than the band. The 80 member marching band appears colorfully clad in bright blue uniforms "strutting" in intricate formations at all home football games. The pep band adds to the spirit and noise at all home basketball games.

The concert band gives two public performances each year--a Christmas concert and a spring Sunday concert. The latest instrumental group to be organized is the dance band which made its appearance at several school and community functions this year.

All groups are conducted by Mr. Dale Jackson. Dale Miller, drum major, assists with directing and planning band programs.

Members of the band participate in college band day festivities. Also, Many band members win honors for PHS in state contests.

FTA Gives Members Insight into Teaching

What else would you expect members of a future teachers organization to do except to gain a little insight into the field of teaching?

This is exactly what Future Teachers of PHS do. Through planned programs and field trips, the members become aware of "what it takes to be a teacher."

Senior members of the club enjoy exploratory teaching. This program, planned in cooperation with the grade school principals, gives would-be teachers actual experience in the classroom.

Mrs. Masten sponsors the group. She is assisted by George Stone, president; Alan Fischer, vice-president; Cheryl Ray, secretary; and Vicki Morgan, treasurer.

Exploratory teacher Claudia Jackson helps fourth grade teacher Mrs. Allen put up a bulletin board.

A relatively new organization at PHS, Sociology Club works to understand human behavior and to promote interest in the important study of sociology.

These goals are achieved mainly through field trips to various mental and penal institutions. Speakers also serve to interest members in a career of sociological work.

SPORTS

The CRACK of a bat sending a baseball flying over a muddy baseball diamond . . . the roaring sound of Hoosier Hysteria in action in the midst of a "fast 'n furious" basketball battle . . . the THUNCK of a football being punted and sent dizzily spinning into the biting, autumn night air . . . these are sounds very "near and dear" to PHS'ers.

Whether participant or spectator, PHS'ers enthusiasm and ardent interest in the various sports is evident.

This year the athletic program expanded and now offers two new sports, wrestling and golf.

The Quakers have done a fine job of representing the school and the community. PHS'ers give a cheer for their mighty Quaker teams.

Plainfield gridmen had a winning 8-2 season, losing only to Danville and Brazil. The Quaker team ranked second in the Mid-State Conference. Coach Albright said his group of boys this year had a great deal of desire to play.

Six Plainfield players were chosen for the Mid-State all-conference team. Quarterback Dave Meeks and halfback Gary Brown were named to the first team. On the second string were Frank Wilson as end and Dan Lowry as guard. Halfback Frank Cochran and guard Larry Harvey made the all-conference defensive unit.

Senior quarterback David Meeks carries the ball to gain several yards on an offensive play.

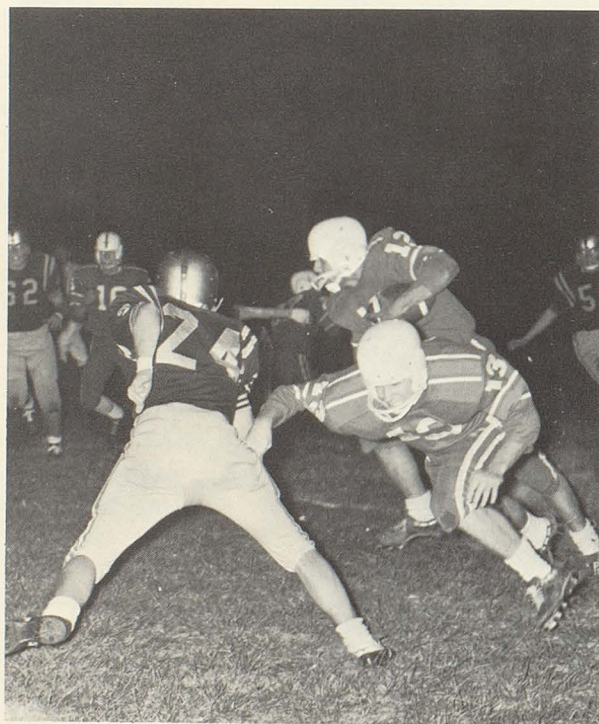

Rigorous training and practice keep the football boys fit and help prevent injuries to them during games. Here some of the team push the seven-man sled in a practice session before a game to improve blocking techniques.

Quakers Exhibit Skill and Training in All Games

In the game against Mooresville, Dave Meeks executes a quarterback sneak behind the backing of George Stone, Larry Harvey and Dan Lowry.

Finding his way blocked to the outside, Frank Cochran reverses his field as Dave Meeks throws a key block.

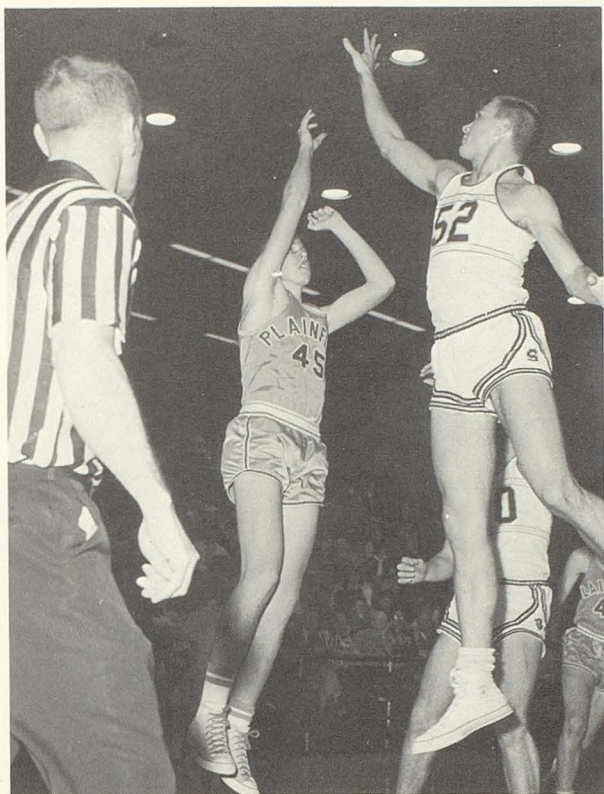

Center George Stone tackles a Speedway player who is returning a punt. Plainfield defeated Speedway 24-19.

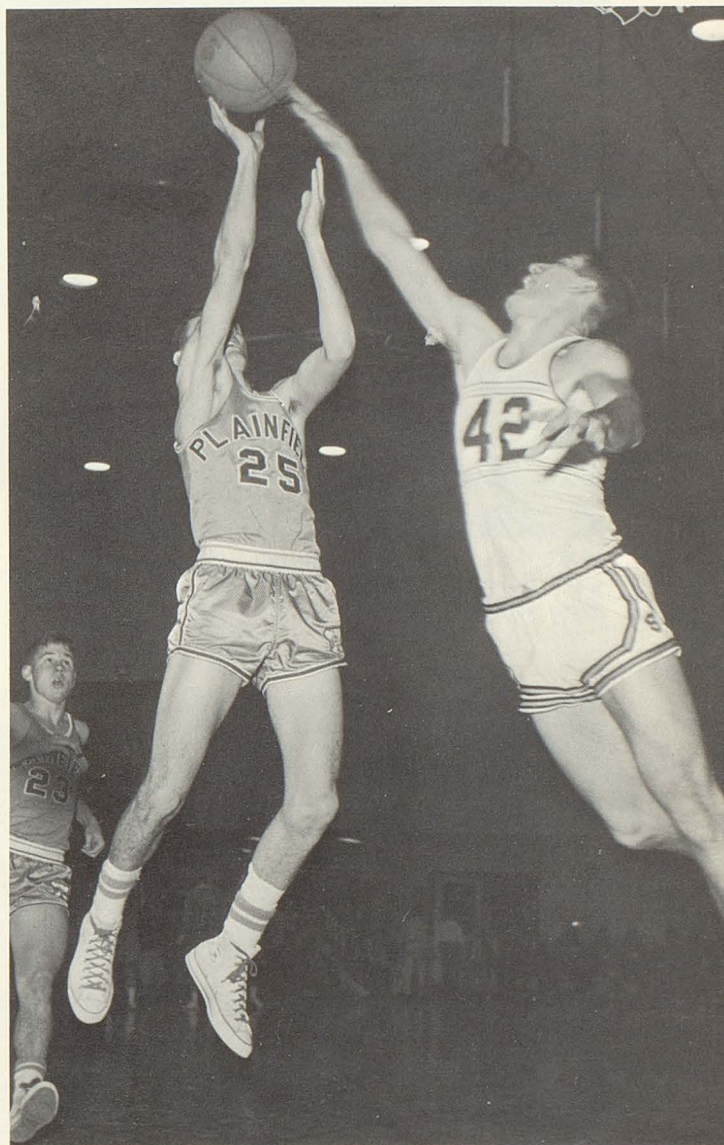

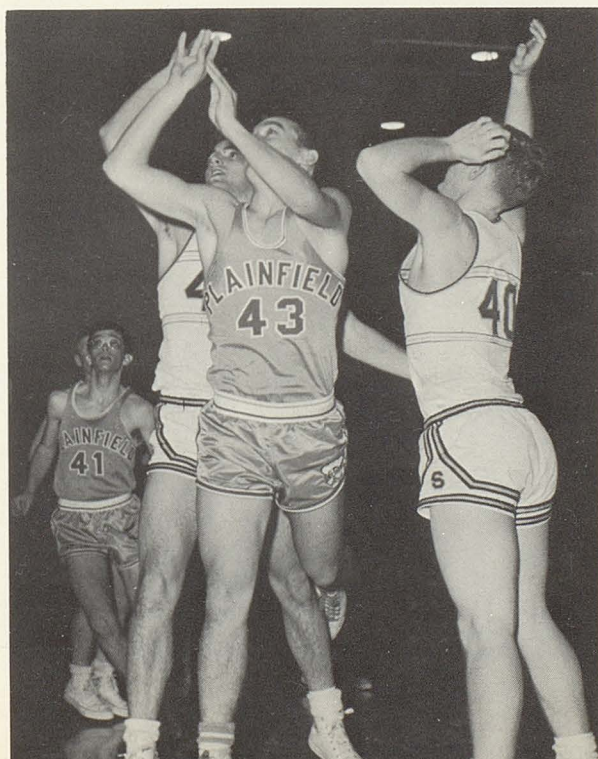

Jim Lovell, end, hangs on to the ball after receiving a pass and being tackled by Speedway players.

Fighting Quakers Create Hoosier Hysteria

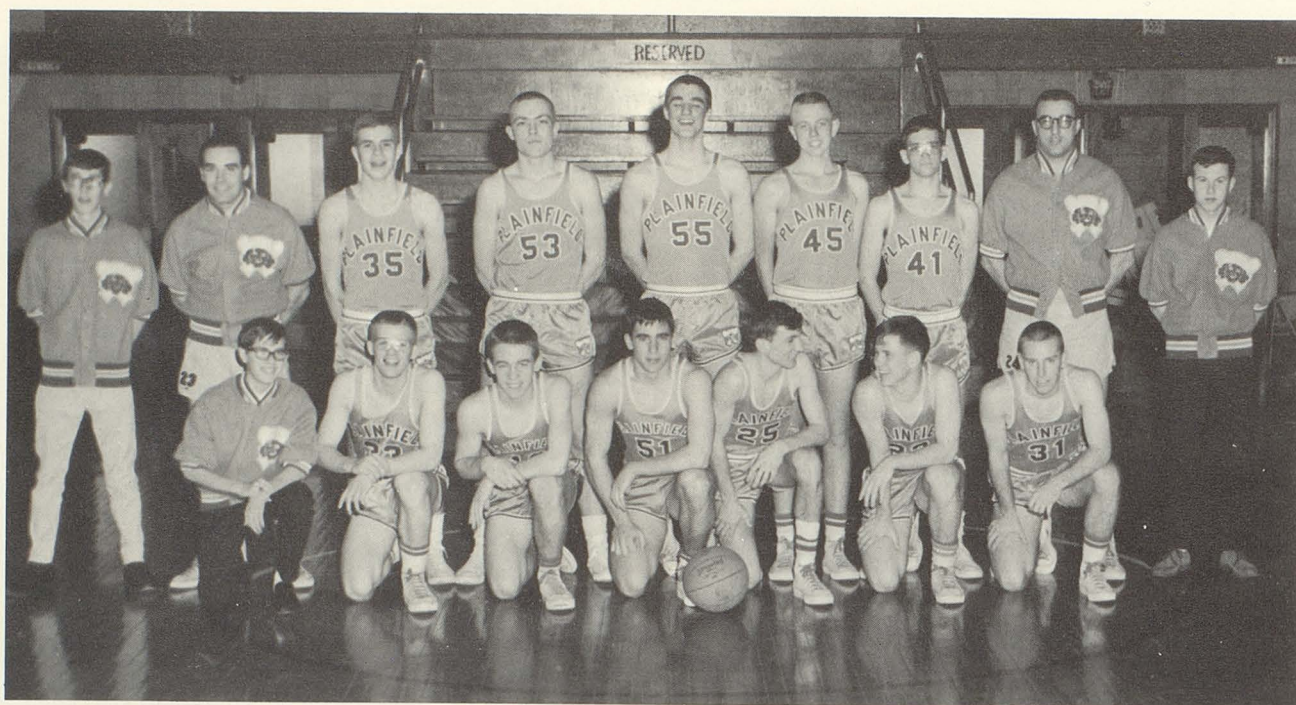

Fred Krampe sinks a basket to score two points for the Quakers in a varsity game.

Greg Conwell makes a close shot under the basket as Jim Lovell and Speedway Sparkplugs wait for the rebound.

Determination, Spirit, and Sportsmanship

coach; R. Wisehart; D. Abplanalp; B. Abel; F. Krampe; J. Lovell; Mr. Sfreddo, coach; L. Paris, student manager.

ALTHOUGH they got off on a rather "slow" start, the Quakers got progressively better with each game they played. They drew many spectators, and evoked lots of Hoosier Hysteria with the almost agonizingly close games.

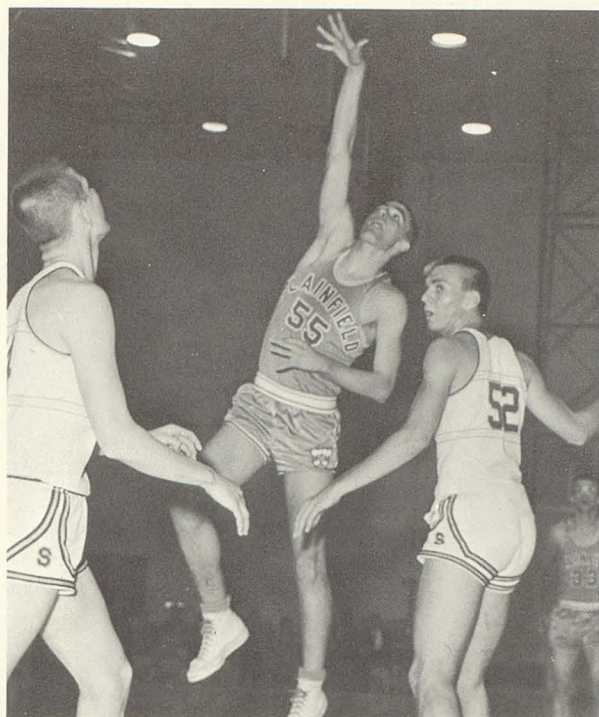

No matter what the record, the most outstanding quality of PHS's Quakers remains the fact that, win or lose, the Quaker spirit and enthusiasm remains high and sportsmanship remains good.

With a shorter than average height, 5'10", and with only five returning lettermen, the mighty Quakers overcame these obstacles and proceeded to play with a determination that was evident.

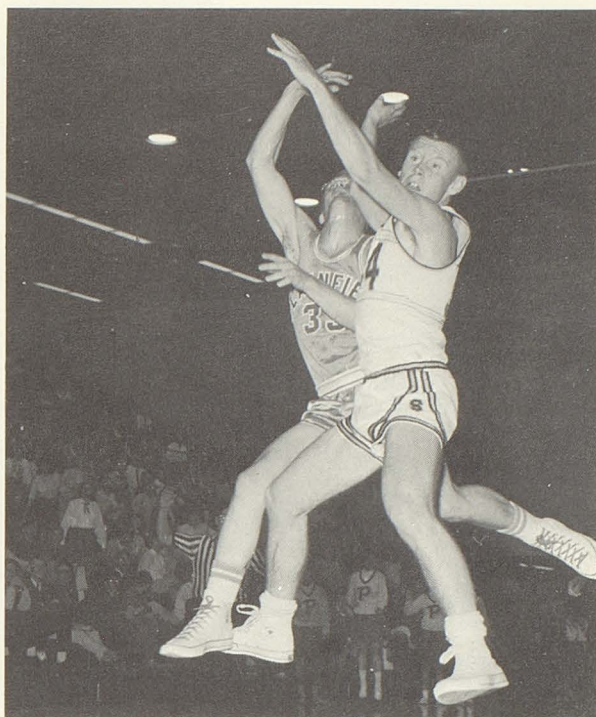

A few of the more outstanding Quakers were Frank Wilson, leading scorer, Jim Lovell, who led in free throws, and Bill Abel, leading rebounder.

Weight-lifters Exercise and Golfers Practice

PHS'S cross-country team, recently renovated by coach Basil Sfreddo, provides an opportunity for boys not participating in other sports to keep fit physically.

The cross-country team competes with other school teams in footracing across varying terrains for distances of two miles per race. The winning team is the team with the least number of points. Victories count points toward the All Sports Trophy.

Lettermen who led the team to its eighth place in the Mid-State Conference were Vince Abell, John Hoffner, Mike Kidwell, and Ronnie Ray.

Another athletic activity, not organized as a competing team, is weight-lifting. Boys participate in weight-lifting mainly for personal enjoyment and improvement of their physical prowess.

Also, golf is proposed for the spring. Mr. Kenneth Bishop will coach a group of interested boys as a team.

Weight-lifters are ROW ONE: M. Hedden; D. Reynolds; A. Sabo; D. Ziegler. ROW TWO: Mr. Ron Reichel; C. Beers; G. Dove; E. Brandgard.

"This is a golf club, and this is a golf ball," says Mr. Bishop to the boys who are interested in being on the first PHS golf team. Fifteen boys attended the organizational meeting.

Lettermen's Club Recognizes PHS Athletes

NOW in its second year, the Lettermen's Club provides boys participating in any of PHS's five sports with letters and awards. The organization also promotes good sportsmanship, high morals, and scholastic qualities among the members.

The main activity of the Lettermen's Club is selling Cokes at the home football and basketball games. The profit from these sales is used to purchase the awards and letters which the boys earn. The club also sponsors an athletic banquet for recognition of achievement by members.

Lettermen's Club officers for the 1964-65 year are Dave Meeks, president; Frank Wilson, vice-president; Tom Ewbank, secretary; and Larry Slaton, treasurer. Sponsors are Mr. Sfreddo and Mr. Albright.

Spirited Cheerleaders Back Quaker Teams

The varsity cheerleaders are Peggy Kellum, Cathy Shuler, Sally Simmons and Debbie Allen. These active girls lead the cheerblock at football and basketball games and help boost the Quaker spirit.

On the reserve cheerleading squad are Jan Rosenberger, Brenda Trent, Mary Anne Hoffner and Gail Clifford. They yell at B-team games and assist the varsity cheerleaders in organizing the cheerblock.

Here we are--the students of PHS. The mighty seniors, the exuberant juniors, and the novice sophomores. We are the blood in the veins of our school and our community. We are the youth--the leaders of tomorrow. Now at PHS we are preparing for our roles of tomorrow.

Our teachers and administrators tirelessly devoted their time and energies to their task of training us to take over the world which is now theirs. They are showing us the way to useful, satisfying lives.

WE--the students, our teachers, and our administrators--WE are PHS.

ment, look over the information on a student's cumulative record in Mr. Abel's office.

and Manage PHS and Plan for Its Future

Members of the school board are elected to provide educational facilities for the town of Plainfield. Members are Mr. Wilbur Maxwell, Mr.

Roland Calbert, Mr. Thomas Hobbs, Mr. LeRoy Stockton, and Mr. Frank Cook.

Superintendent Frank Ross is responsible for the co-ordination of all schools in Plainfield.

PHS has a high academic rating, thanks to a conscientious school board, an efficient administration and a competent teaching staff.

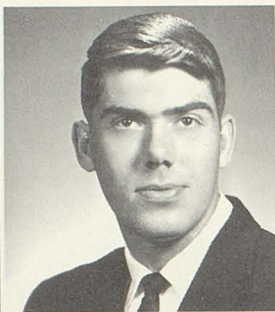

One of two hundred Indiana schools which are members of the North Central Association, PHS boasts of an average of seventy-five per cent of its student body preparing to enter institutions of higher learning.

Expansion this year was most evident in the Guidance Department. A girls' and a boys' counselor joined the guidance staff.

In 1964-65 thirty classroom teachers taught a balanced curriculum to 607 students.

Administration, school board, and faculty members are planning an even better program for the future.

Mr. Elzie Estel, the day-time custodian, is truly a "jack-of-all-trades" at PHS.

Mr. Herschel Winsted, night attendant, cleans the building after school.

Secretary and Custodians Are Indispensable

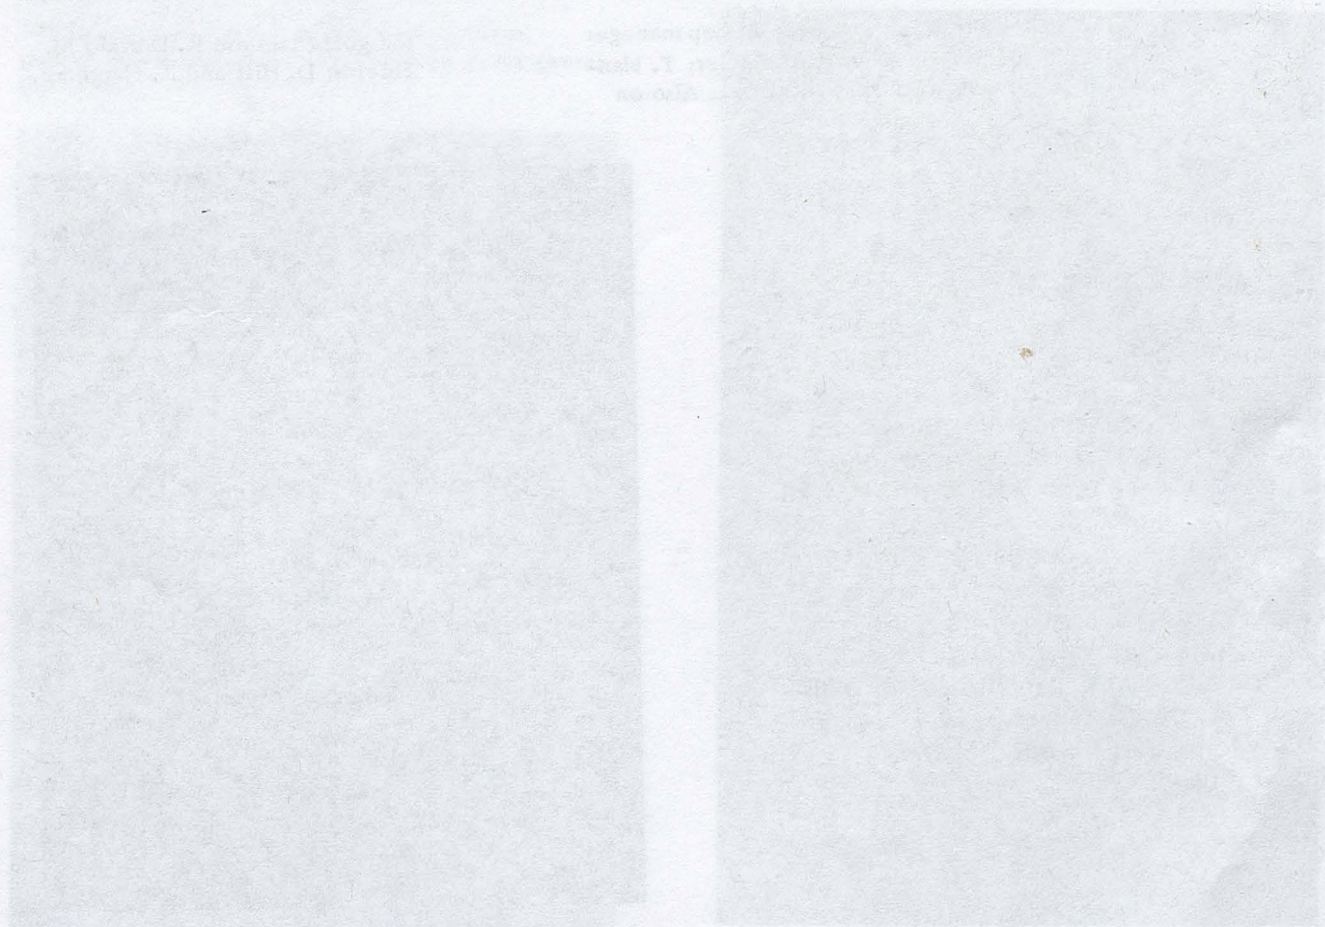

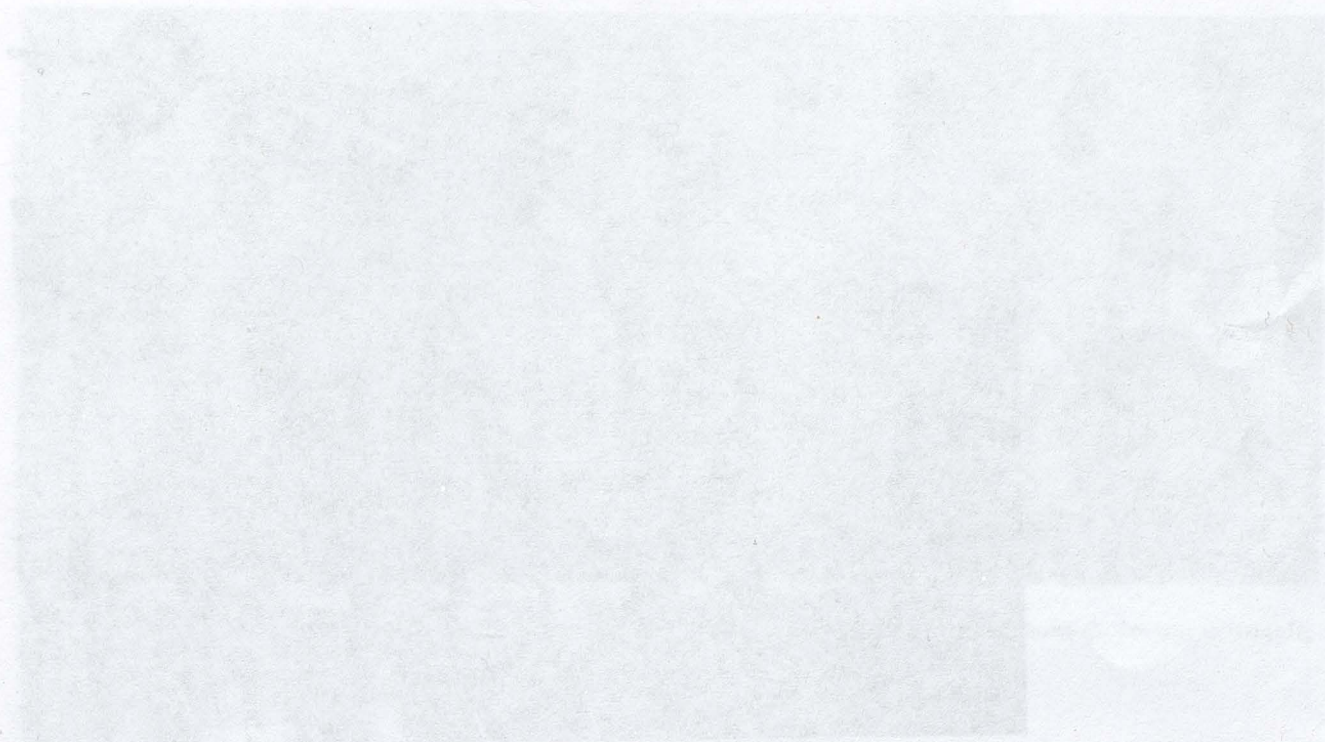

Mrs. Esther Copeland, school secretary, spends her day serving administration, teachers and students. Secretary, nurse, matron--you name it, she's it!

Graduation Highlights the Year for 175 Seniors

Dr. George E. Davis, Professor Emeritus, Purdue, delivered the Commencement address, "How Smart Are You?"

Highest ranking Senior Bill Muncy gave the valedictory speech at the Class Night program, May 28

The one hundred and seventy-five members of the graduating Senior class stand solemnly, listening to the band, as they wait to be pronounced graduated and to turn their tassels.

As they leave PHS, satisfied students will have years of memories and will always give A CHEER FOR PHS.
