THE BIG

PHS
PUZZLE

SILHOUETTES
'78

Engrossed in their studies, Julie Brownwell and Keith Thompson spend a quiet hour in the library.

Hard at work, Mrs. Jackson's Advanced Comp students finish a writing assignment.

In Reading Lab, Jeff Rhodes listens to a story.

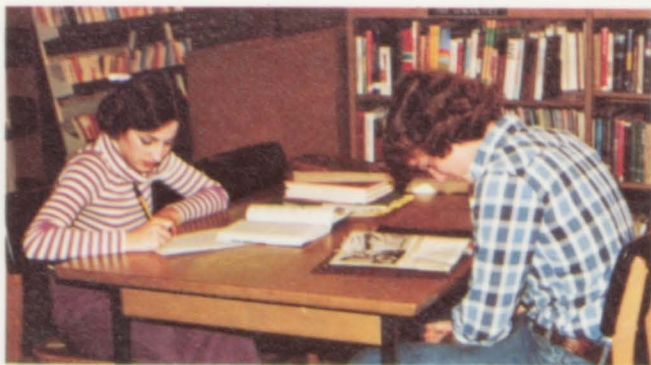

It's 3:30 p.m. and time to go home as the buses line up in front of the high school.

Performing a cutting in Advanced Acting, Judy Ledgerwood broods about her wasted life.

At the light board, Mark Jerome pastes-up his Graphics Arts project for Mr. Baker.

The pins come out as Kathy Campbell checks over the stitches on her garment for Intermediate Clothing.

Listening to the dictaphone, Marty Merkley transcribes a letter in Office Machines.

As the 1977-78 school year unfolded at PHS, it seemed a lot like a jigsaw puzzle with some pieces missing and some pieces that did not appear to fit into the picture as it was expected to be.

Coming back to school earlier than usual, PHS'ers put in two weeks before Labor Day. The Corporation's re-roofing project was soon underway, turning the building into one giant puzzle for students.

The most common questions in the halls were "Where's our class meeting today?" and "Which halls are blocked off now?" However, PHS'ers took it in good part dashing through the ever-changing maze.

PHS'ers received the first unexpected pieces in the jumble of this year's puzzle when the freshmen were promoted to senior high status. Some doubted that they would fit in but the Class of '81 soon proved otherwise.

At the line of scrimmage, the senior line digs in to defend their goal against a determined junior offense.

Coming the audience, the student council members climax their skit at the football pep session.

In an interview for TGIF, radio "star" Sherri Baldwin questions the cross country coach, Mr. Fuhrmann about the prospects for this year's team.

Time out as the varsity basketball coach, Mr. Nay, revises the game strategy for the last few minutes of play.

Pep band member Barb Smith stands as she and her fellow musicians play a rousing chorus of "Hail to the Varsity."

Joyous cheerleaders ring the victory bell to proclaim another Quaker win for the varsity gridmen.

coal strike,

winter's traditional

The weather and the coal strike dominated the winter months, knocking holes in the usual pattern of school life. Snow storms, including the big Blizzard of '78, caused numerous cancellations of traditional school activities as well as nine days of school.

As the coal strike stretched into March, the Public Service Commission's demand for a fifty percent cutback in electricity consumption resulted in a total blackout of after school activities. Thermostates were lowered, lights were turned off, and layers of clothing were increased. It was tough, but PHS met its energy usage goal without the loss of any school time.

With a little juggling of the fragments of this unique school year and a consideration of the true priorities of education, the pieces began to fall into place and the picture for 1977-78 began to emerge. It was going to be a truly different year that PHS'ers would talk about for years.

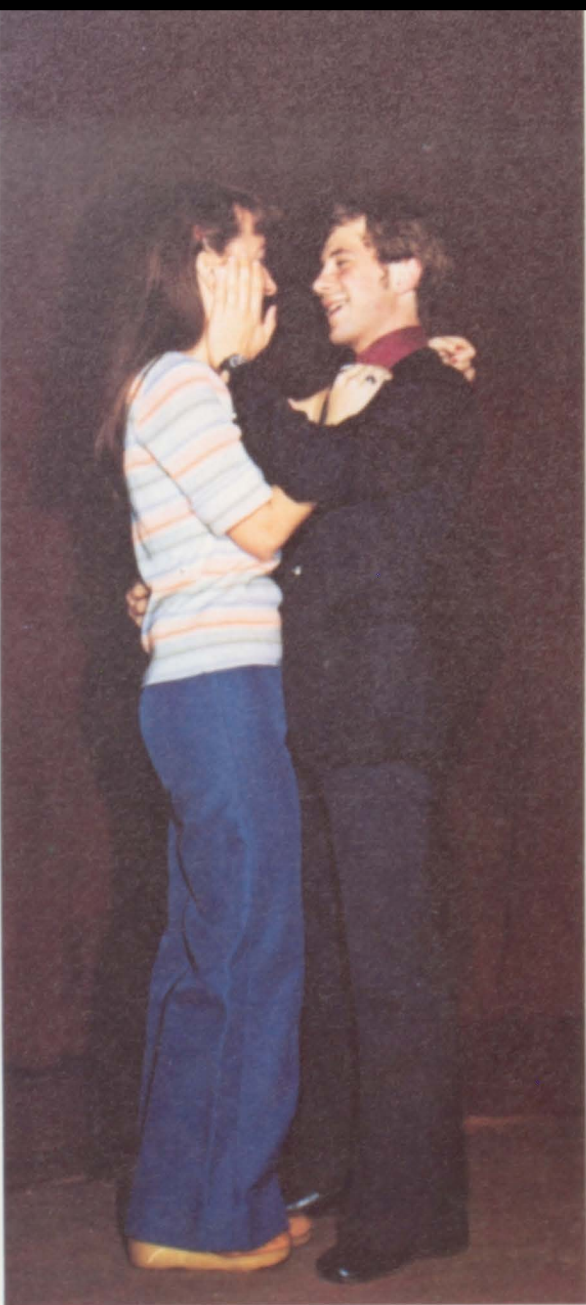

After spring break, PHS'ers were over the hump. The coal strike was over, restrictions on energy usage were lifted, the roof was nearly finished, and they were revived and ready for the hectic activities that were traditional for the months of April and May at PHS—the prom, the musical, FCA's Everything Goes, sports, graduation.

The pieces of the puzzle that was the 1977-78 school year at PHS were piling up at an ever increasing rate. But, these pieces fell more naturally into place. This was more like it was supposed to be. And on May 19, as the seniors graduated, they completed the picture of a year that was unlike any other at PHS—a year to be remembered.

 Trackin' down U.S. 40, the senior float leads all competition in the Homecoming Parade.
 Drum major Randy Johnson signals the start of a new number.
 Enjoying their roles, Dave Newby and Sherri Baldwin practice a scene from Flowers for Algernon.
 Madrigal singers Kyle Davis and Robin Rushton relieve earlier tensions after the Madrigal Dinner.

Class Officers: President, Brian Swift; Treasurer, Stacey Peters; Secretary, Mary Ann Faulkner; Vice-president Brad Kirchoff.

Surprised and happy, Alison Clanton accepts congratulations from Jenny Cokain as she is announced Sophomore Princess.

The Class of 1981 faced many changes this fall. This was the first year that freshmen were included as part of the senior high and with their new status came new privileges.

They gained access to the Quaker Lounge during study hall although a few opted for the smoking area instead. They held their first class elections and assumed seats on the Student Council for the first time.

The freshmen also participated in Homecoming activities for the first time. They worked hard and their effort gave the upperclassmen some stiff competition.

The freshmen began working on their float under a handicap—many didn't even know how to make flowers. That didn't stop them! As soon as their officers were elected they began making plans for their entry in the Homecoming competition.

The Daum's offered their barn as a building site and construction began. Working outside, they got cold but they didn't quit! And when parts of their float got rained on, they took them apart and did them again.

Finally finished, the freshman float was driven proudly into place in the Homecoming parade line-up.

Stitching on letters Julie Burdsall, Marla Winger, and Becky Browning put the finishing touches on the spider cape.

Using lots of paint LeAnn Arnold, Mark Daum, Nancy Taylor, and Mary Ann Faulkner create a blue cape for their Red Prider spider.

Absorbed in their work, Alecia Green, Dotty Green, and Connie Jackson fold and fluff tissue flowers for the freshman float.

With yarn and aluminium foil, freshmen line up to weave and wrap the spider web for their first Homecoming float.

Just before his race is called, Kirt Schlegel receives some last minute advice from his coach, Mr. Chris Sweeney.

In a home meet against Brazil, grappler David Bohenkamp is announced the winner.

From the side, Scott Aldridge shoots high over his guard as he seeks to roll up another two points in the Quaker column.

Dodging through the opposition, quarterback Jett Simrell charges for the goal line in a game played before the home crowd.

FRESHMEN

After school hours, gymnast Alison Clanton puts in some practice time on her compulsory level bars routine.

Freshmen mat maids keep Quaker spirits up at a varsity meet against Brazil.

Keeping the lap count, Becky Bennett helps a teammate pace herself at a home meet.

The compulsory floor exercises present no problems for beginning gymnast Jenny Cokain. Ready for their opponent's serve, Trish May and Stacey Peters brace for a bump.

After the Spanish dinner, Connie Jackson draws clean-up duty.

Participants in the Indiana High School Math contest in Terre Haute, David Bartley and Tom Jent look over the program book before the test begins.

Blowing her own horn, Debbie Fancher joins the junior high band in their Christmas concert in Aiken Auditorium.

"Look at this!" Dan Wisehart instructs his sister Donna during his microscope demonstration at Open House.

Class Officers: Larinda Ferrell, secretary; Tim Stultz, president; LeeAnn Nay, treasurer; Angie Walker, vice-president.

Applying elbow grease, Jeff Majors and John Kirtley scrub cars for their class.

A customer's car shines as Cindy Snodgrass, Susan McDonald, LeeAnn Nay, and Lisa Amich buff it dry.

As school opened in the fall the Sophomores joined the senior high. They quickly adjusted to their new status, participating in club and sports activities and taking advantage of the student lounge and independent study areas during release time.

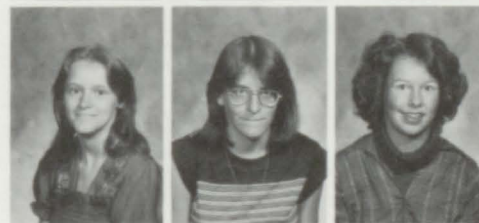

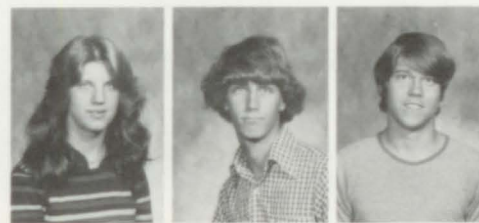

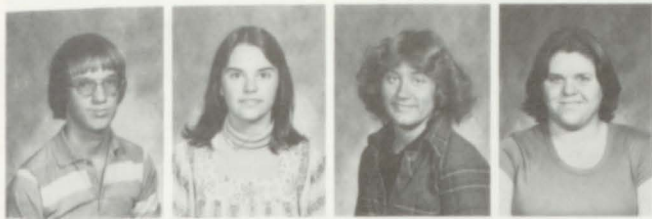

Individuals in the class anxiously awaited the arrival of their class rings ordered last year. And, nearly every week someone in the class was studying for their driver's test.

Led by class officers for the first time, the Class of 1980 had to raise money in a hurry to help with expenses on their first Homecoming float entry. Their solution was a car wash and they wasted no time in organizing one to beef up the treasury.

Coloring letters for the float skirt, Lee Ann Nay and Larinda Ferrell receive advice from Brad Saxman.

Forming an assembly line, sophomores gather outside Mongan's barn to fluff flowers for their first Homecoming float.

With a little teamwork, Janet Boesch, Lorraine Mongan, Lisa Hubbard and Susan McDonald convert chicken wire and tissue flowers into a phone for the sophomore float.

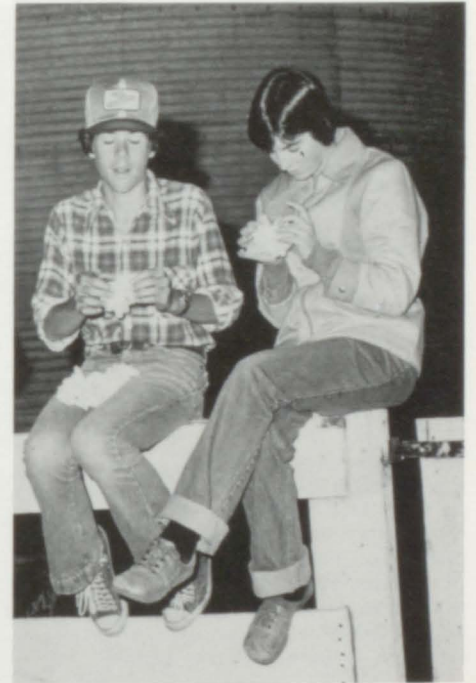

Perched on a fence, David Covalt and Danita Frye 'keep on fluffing.'

Early in September plans got under way for the first big challenge of the sophomore class—a Homecoming float. Ideas were turned in, drawings were made, and, after many considerations, one was chosen by the class.

Things got moving then, and all month long flower folders and fluff-fers rushed to keep up with each other. As building began, the float took form and feelings of tension and pride grew in the Class of '80.

Just as everyone was about to burst with the excitement, the sky did! It rained on their parade! Homecoming was delayed a week, the floats were locked away, and rumors circulated—the sophomore float had been destroyed by the seniors.

At last Homecoming really arrived and the first sophomore effort, still intact, rolled down Main Street.

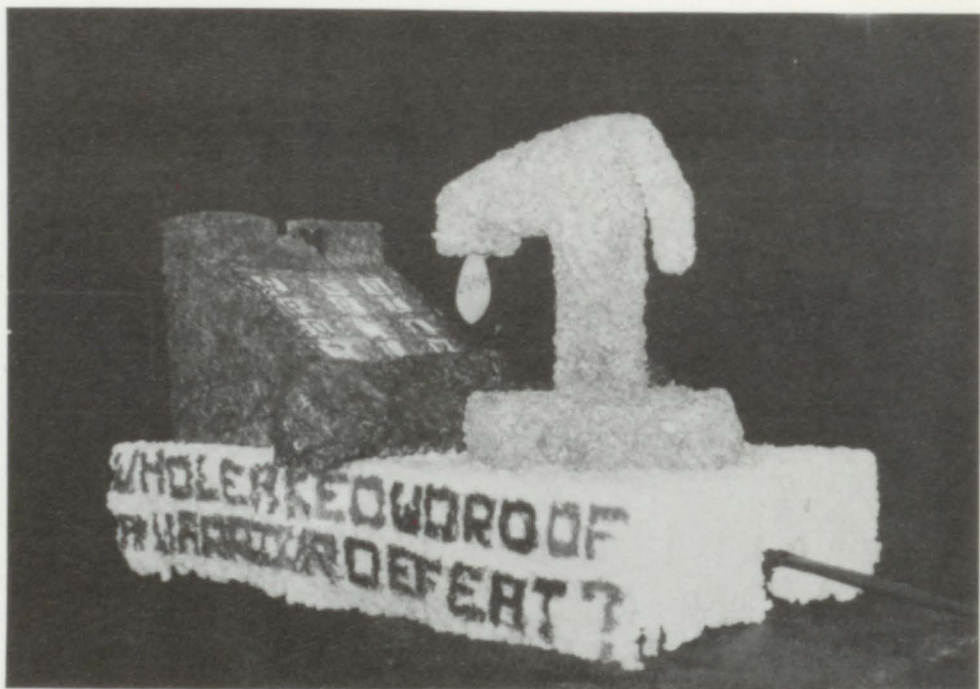

"Eeny, meeny, ..." Barb Bare and Cindy Snodgrass cast their votes for the sophomore princess while Larinda Ferrell and Doug Johnson guard the ballot box.

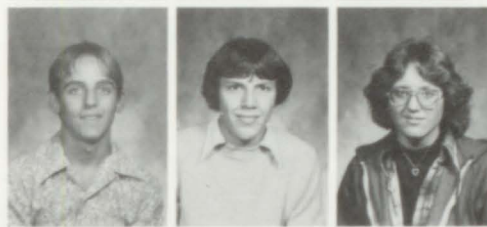

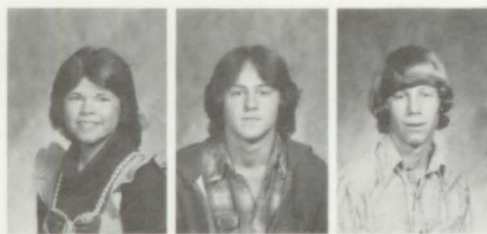

Clowning it up a bit, Lorraine Mongan smiles as she clings to the rear of her horse in the Homecoming parade.

With happy hugs, Kathy Kost and Mark Bade congratulate Lisa Groninger as she is named the Sophomore Homecoming Princess.

Awaiting the final decision, tension builds for princess candidates Susan Smith, Kathy Kost, Lisa Groninger, and their escorts Faron Wiseman, Jay Simrell, and Mark Bade.

Ringin' out a victory, the sophomore phone rolls onto the football field at halftime.

From the sidelines, Mike Ellis concentrates on the reserve action and awaits his turn on the field.

Once again the Gladdens hosted the juniors as they began work on their '77 Homecoming float. They eagerly attacked the project, hoping to top the seniors—their arch rivals.

After Homecoming, attention turned to the jr.-sr. powderpuff game. Ordering blue team shirts, the girls gathered at the Boys School to practice for their bout with the seniors.

In their last project of the year, the juniors joined the seniors in planning the 1978 jr.-sr. prom.

Class Officers: President Rick Masselink, Treasurer Pam Moss, Secretary Leigh Acton, Vice President Doug Bennett.

"Easy does it," Robbie Roberts adjusts a temperamental spray gun before painting the sunburst for the junior float.

At an early session, Robin Rushton, Denetia Stone, Marcy Littlehale, Julie Clark, and Jennifer Slaybaugh crank out tissue flowers while Mary Wertz cuddles a furry friend.

Out in the cold, Darla Nidey, Jenny Scifres, and Tammy Lopossa fluff flowers and gossip a little as the deadline draws near.

Assembling the pieces, Dan Karpy carefully mounts the 'shining' number one atop the junior Homecoming entry.

"Get up!" yells Carol Stout as she and Lorraine Mongan clown their way down Main Street in the Homecoming parade.

Princess candidates Jenny Creek, Sara Hillgoss, and Leigh Acton smile for the crowds along the Homecoming parade route.

Moving to the beat, Bruce Anderson adds the oompa-pa to the band's lively march as they head up the Homecoming parade.

After two weeks of hard labor, the junior float entry 'shines' down Main Street on its way to the football field.

Hopes for a junior touchdown grow as Sarah Donelson breaks away for long yardage in the first quarter of the powderpuff game.

With new 'figures', junior football players Bill Cohn, Brent Eccles, and Jeff Aldridge pose as cheerleaders to boost class spirit at the powderpuff game.

Nervously watching their teammates on the field, the junior bench prays for a first down against a tough senior squad.

Keeping a cool head, reserve player Mary Cox set the volleyball up for her teammates to return to their Speedway opponents.

Out on the stretch, Chuck Kelly paces off the two-and-a-half mile course at a home cross country meet.

With both eyes on the action, Rona McComb records statistics for Coach Masariu during a home volleyball meet.

Straining to free himself, Luke Reinhard refuses to be overpowered by his Brazil foe.

On stage, Kathy McKnight receives a certificate of achievement in the Indiana High School Math Contest held in Terre Haute.

After checking in at Rose-Hulman, Rick Maselink and Alan Wilson study the program book for the Indiana High School Math Contest.

It's not art, but Jane Roe does do a lot of painting as part of the stage crew for the fall play, Flowers for Algernon.

At Christmas time, Bob Lowery, Terra Smitson, and the rest of the stage band entertain family and friends in Aiken Auditorium.

It was finally here, that last big year, and the Class of '78 was ready! The seniors rallied for the Homecoming float competition with the slogan "Three straight in '78!"

Memories of their two previous winners inspired the class as they gathered once again at Sargent's to build, flower, and paint their last float. And, after rain postponed Homecoming, they waited a whole week for the decision—it's a winner!

Next on the horizon was the annual powderpuff game. Practicing secret plays after school and on Sunday, the seniors put together a formidable game plan that completely routed their junior opponents.

The weather and the energy crunch greatly curtailed winter activities. However, by April 1, the whole class was looking forward to spring break, the prom and graduation.

Clean, clean, clean! Dave Newby and his trusty vacuum cleaner work on the inside while his classmates wash the outside of cars brought to the senior class car wash.

Class Officers: Sherri Baldwin, Vice President; Marry Harris, Secretary; Lisa Bennett, Treasurer; David Newby, President.

Soap suds fly as Tom Hammons and Mike Rugen scrub the top of a customer's car at the senior car wash held in front of the school.

With much difficulty, Randy Johnson and Ron Saxman mount a tractor on the float to power the wheels, whistle and light of the senior locomotive.

Stretching, Jeff Shrum nails the top of the engine to the frame on the seniors' last Homecoming float effort.

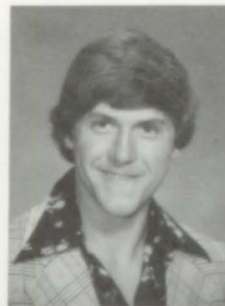

Give them some chicken wire and Terri Evans and Linda May will cover it with flowers as they prove once again.

Working together, Debbie Bradley and Barb Cox attach the final flowers to a wheel of the seniors' version of a train.

"Three straight for '78" became the cry as the seniors realize their float has won for the third year in a row.

Smiling prettily, Queen candidates Caryn Blaugrund, Mary Harris, and Linda Ruddick ride down Main Street in the Homecoming parade.

With disbelief, Queen Linda Ruddick and her escort Jim Groninger listen to congratulations from Sophomore Princess Lisa Groninger.

SPORTS
PUZZLE

Pep club activities began with football season. These gung-ho Red Priders took on the responsibility of decorating team lockers, baking goodies for hungry players, and cheering for the Quakers.

As a money making project, the club sold hats to Plainfield fans to make them more easily identifiable in the big crowds at the football and basketball games.

Basketball season found the club still baking and decorating lockers but they took on the added duty of painting a run-through for each home game. In addition, at Sectional time, they decorated the homes of the individual team members with banners and signs proclaiming the Quaker superiority.

The pep band organized for basketball season with a new "boss" and new shirts. Not only did they have a new look, but also a new sound, perking up the home games with popular toe-tapping tunes.

What do cheerleaders do when they're not cheering? Well, Plainfield's girls do plenty! Their activities began in the summer with cheerleading camp at DePauw for the varsity and reserve squads. The freshmen attended the UCA Camp where they won 3rd, 2nd, and 1st place awards in camp competitions.

After camp the varsity and reserve teams began a round of fair competitions. The varsity girls won the Morgan County Fair contest and took 6th place out of the 84 entrants at the State Fair. The reserves placed 14th out of 68 in their effort at the State Fair.

Both the varsity and reserve teams sponsored a cheerleading workshop where girls in grades 4-8 learned cheers, chants, and gymnastic tricks. They also spent much of their time painting signs to decorate the halls and gym at PHS as well as the coaches homes at sectional time.

The varsity girls were thanked for all of their hard work all year when the basketball team presented them with red roses.

The year began for the majorettes with the uncertainties of working with a new band director. What would he be like? But, it didn't take them long to find out that things were going to be great this year.

In October the majorettes led the marching band in the parade at Greenfield where they took second place in the competition. Working very hard on their new routines, the girls faced their first big challenge with the Homecoming show which was a tremendous success.

November 5 was Band Day in Plainfield and the majorettes joined the band in blitzing the community. They sold sausage and cheese all over town to help raise money for music, uniforms, and so on.

They held their annual Christmas party in December where they exchanged gifts. All too soon, it was time for the last home basketball game and senior night. At this game, only the seniors performed and they were recognized for their year's work in Quaker spirit raising.

The 1977-78 school year was one of reorganization for the Student Council. When they returned to PHS in the fall, they found that their ranks were to be swelled by the addition of freshmen members who would sit on the Council for the first time.

Thus, their first activity was to organize the freshmen elections. They then turned to planning Homecoming which would now include four class floats and one more princess in the Queen's Court.

The Council continued other traditional activities throughout the year. Each month they selected a PHS Student of the Month from those nominated by PHS'ers. They also posted a monthly calendar of school activities and decorated the school halls for the Christmas season.

The Council also worked to boost school spirit with skits for the Homecoming and Sectional pep sessions. However, the uncertainty of Sectionals due to the coal strike caused the Council to cancel their traditional Sectional parade and car decorating contest.

The Council's final project of the year was their biggest—the amending of their constitution. Their chief goals with this project were to reduce the size of the Council to a more workable number of members and to change the method of selecting the Council officers. With this a new Council structure was born.

Bouncing basketballs, Sherri Baldwin and Diane Mosser add them to the Student Council skit at the sectional pep session.

At a first period Council meeting, Kent Nysewander, Brian Swift, and Steve Blevins listen to a discussion.

Student Council growth brings restructuring

Publication staffers learn what it's all about

The school paper, R.S.V.P., was a learning experience for its inexperienced staff in 1977-78. They rose to the challenge, however, combining news features with literary works and photography.

The yearbook staff also began the year with little experience and Ken Keltner, the Herff-Jones representative, conducted after school workshops to acquaint them with the techniques of yearbooking.

The newspaper staff put out 4 issues this year while the yearbook staff struggled with selecting pictures, drawing layouts, and writing copy.

Both staffs ended the year feeling that they had learned a lot about school publications.

At an after school meeting, Danita Frye and Lee Ann Nay study contact prints looking for likely pictures for the yearbook.

On the edge of the court at Market Square Arena, Jim Gibson waits for a good shot of a Greg Jones dunk in the Speedway game.

Organizing the freshman information cards for the yearbook is a two person job according to Julie Burdsall and Terri Baskerville.

Photographer Chris Hayes finds a high perch to shoot the work on the school during the re-roofing project in the fall.

Over 100 strong, PHS dramatists expended their talents on four productions during the year. In addition, they travelled to Carmel H.S. to see Little Mary Sunshine. Their year ended with an awards banquet.

The speech team was equally busy participating in contests sponsored by local service organizations and in those at area schools. They also co-hosted a debate meet in January.

Awards Night David Newby was given a Degree of Honor in the National Forensic League while Chris Carr was recognized as an Honor Thespian.

Drama, speech students put in busy year

Choices abound in English, Social Studies

The English and Social Studies Departments at PHS offered students an opportunity to choose from a varied list of phase elective courses in 1977-78. PHS'ers were able to pursue their individual interests and to select courses geared to their own particular ability levels.

Their choices ranged from nine weeks courses to semester and even full year offerings with one course, CHAP, spanning both departments.

And, the methods of study were just as varied, ranging from traditional readings in textbooks to less conventional learning through simulation games.

Scrabble challenges Gary Schmidt, Julie Brownell, Wendy Scott, and Alan Wilson to expand their vocabularies.

Concentrating on their questionnaires, these senior Sociology students attempt to evaluate the education that they have received.

In Beginning Acting Todd Rodgers creates a new face for his classmate, Tim Newlin.

An exercise in communication finds Kerry Green trying to persuade Butch Clark of his sincerity in Advanced Acting.

Senior government students Amy Collins and Debbie Seib "man" a voter registration table while Brent Walters, Greg Jones, and Bill Hobson demonstrate the voting machine during Open House in mid-October.

With a congratulatory handshake, Mr. Jerry Hankins, Chairman of the Social Studies Department, presents Brad Muse with a department award at Senior Awards Night.

Chalk in hand, John Himmelheber designs an advertisement for a babysitting service as his Civics class studies the practical aspects of the free enterprise system.

The French, German, and Spanish clubs at PHS found many opportunities to socialize this year. They threw parties at members' homes and went to dinners at area restaurants.

The French students went to Renee's and Chez Jean's French restaurants while the German enthusiasts ate at the Glass Chimney and Cafe Heidelberg. The Spanish Club also ate out at La Paz Restaurant but more often cooked their own traditional dinners.

As usual, the three groups combined their cooking talents to prepare desserts, traditional to the cultures which they study, for their Dessert Fest at Open House. Their annual joint dinner party at the school was cancelled by the energy crisis.

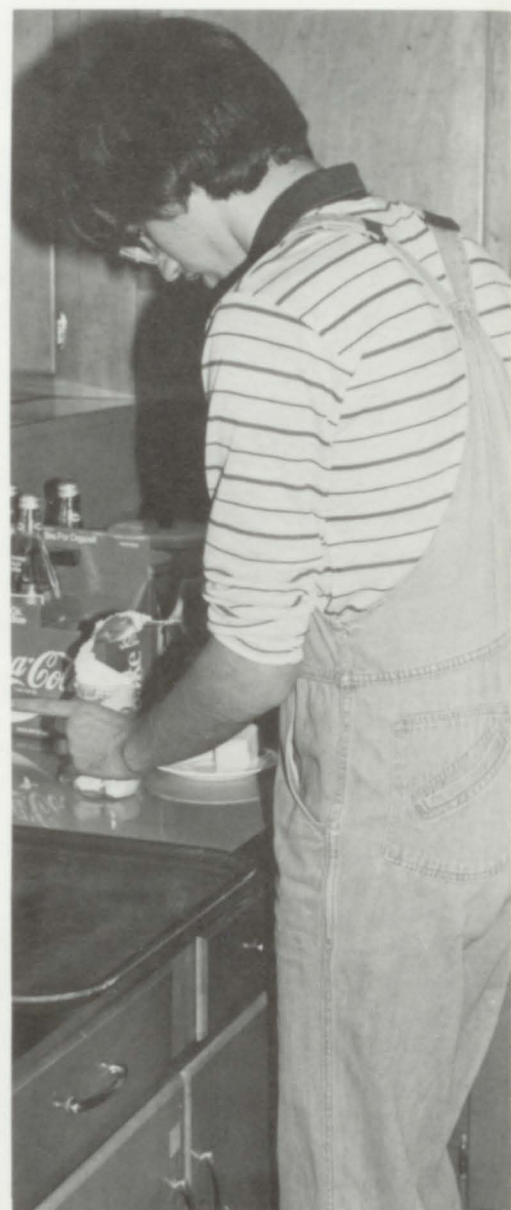

Twelve French students worked very hard all during the year to raise enough money to spend Spring Vacation in Paris. Travelling with their teacher, Mrs. Joan McAllister, they were able to put their studies to practical use and to study French culture first hand.

At the Weir Cook departure gate, excited French students wave goodbye to family and friends before leaving for Paris.

Digging into an authentic German dinner, Andy Richmond and Jeff Hubble enjoy the fare at the Glass Chimney.

Math, Science classes remain unchanged

Math and science classes were much the same in 1977-78 as in any other school year. Science students were cutting up fetal pigs, frogs, and worms in biology, finding focal lengths and testing circuits in physics, and mixing chemicals and balancing equations in chemistry.

In math, PHS'ers could be found struggling with proofs in geometry, solving equations in algebra, proving identities in trigonometry, and puzzling over differentials in advanced math. Nothing had changed.

The studies were not new this year except to the students being exposed to them for the first time. For them it was all brand new and required a lot of concentration and brain work to meet the challenge.

At the local Science Fair, Robert Depree demonstrates his winning telephone project that will later take him to the National Science Fair in California.

Concentration is required as Kent Nysewander constructs one of those tricky drawings in geometry class.

Practical skills taught in Home Ec, Shop

The Department of Practical Arts at Plainfield High School offered young men and women the opportunity to learn skills that they could use for the rest of their lives.

If a visitor had checked the Home Economics classrooms, he would have found boys as well as girls learning to cook and sew. And, in the Industrial Arts areas, this same visitor could have seen girls right along side the boys learning the secrets of drafting or the operation of power equipment.

In the various course offerings of this department, PHS'ers learned to draw house plans, decorate a home, care for children, maintain a car, and so on, studying the many skills necessary to the establishment and maintenance of a home.

Under the hood of a car, Leroy Eberwein and Jack Richards demonstrate the technique that took them to the finals of the state Chrysler-Plymouth Trouble Shooting Contest.

Drawing a straight line requires concentration as would-be draftsman Jim Russell completes his Drafting project.

At the drill press, Diane Markey shows that power tools are easily operated by girls as well as boys.

In Home Economics, Judy Colleser completes some handwork on her sewing project.

Icing a potential prize winner, Randy Davis puts the finishing touches on his entry in the Bachelor Living cake baking contest.

Stacking attendance pads, these student printers check their handiwork.

At their sewing machines, John Hager and Mike Rugen make their first garments—T-shirts.

Sunshine Society keeps secrets in '77-'78

The girls in the Sunshine Society spread their own brand of sunshine once again this year. Their first project was the selection by each girl of her Ideal Lady who would be given little gifts and cards throughout the year—secretly of course.

The Sunshiners sold mums for Homecoming to raise money for a luncheon to be given for their Ideal Ladies in the Spring. This traditional fund-raiser proved more successful than ever before and the girls sold 365 of the big white flowers.

At Christmas time they again turned secretive with a drawing of members' names for stocking pals. All during the week before Christmas vacation, the girls left little gifts for their secret pals who were finally revealed at an after school get-together.

The girls planned to co-host their annual Sweetheart Dance with the Student Council in February. However, the dance had to be cancelled at the last minute when the ticket sales did not reach expected levels.

Then, in April, the Sunshiners sent out the luncheon invitations to their Ideal Ladies. Gathering at the Elks, the Ideal Ladies met their secret admirers face-to-face for the first time and received a rose as well as a good meal.

Standing at the window in the Elks' dining room, the Sunshine girls anxiously await the arrival of their ideal ladies.

Santa's helper Rona McComb fills the Christmas stockings for her Sunshine pals.

The Business Department at Plainfield High School was busily preparing PHS'ers for the future during the 1977-78 school year.

In classes such as Distributive Education and Intensive Office Lab, students were actually practicing skills which would allow them to step directly into the business world upon graduation. And, the D.E.

people were even being paid while they learned from their employers.

Other classes gave the students a more general education in business which would be useful to them no matter what they planned to do with their lives. And, still other courses offered PHS'ers a good foundation for further studies either in college or business school.

Working at the light board, Sandy Williams copies a drawing onto a mimeograph stencil as part of a learning station.

The ditto machine holds no secrets for Becky Campbell as she runs the duplicator in her Office Machines class.

Checking his tape, Jerry Gross finds the error which he was seeking.

In Accounting, Lisa Sauer works on her final practice set of the year.

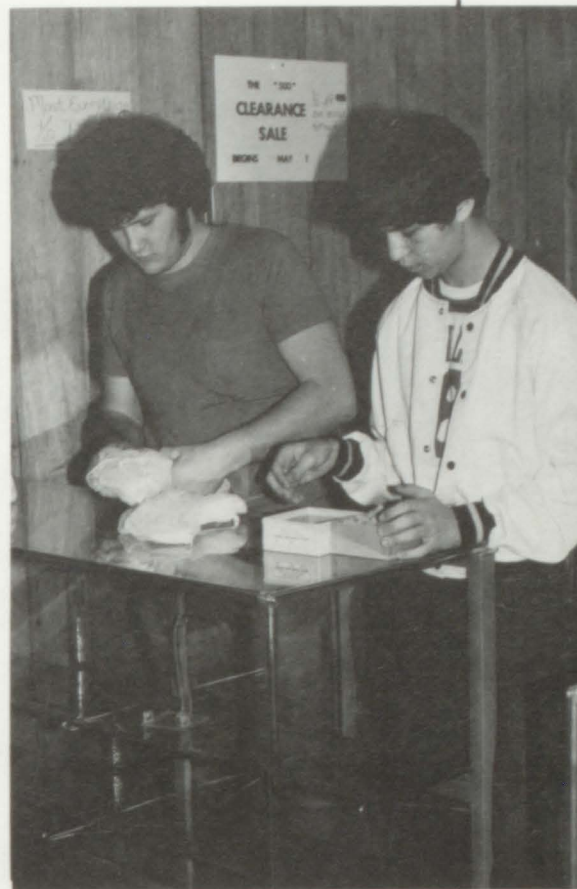

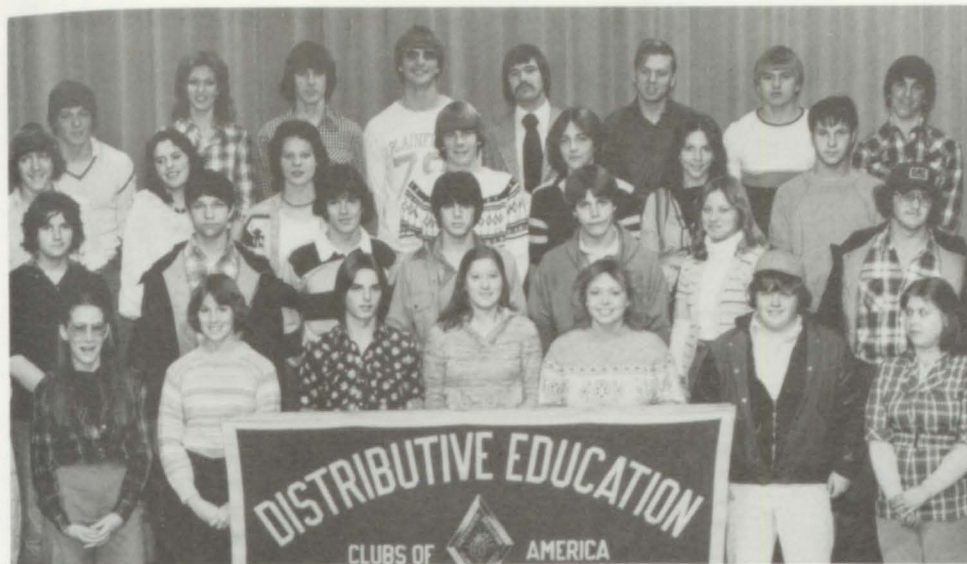

Composing newspaper ads, Marketing student Tracey Owen explains her ideas to her classmates to get their reactions.

DECA, OEA apply skills learned in class

With the opening of school DECA students set their early morning donut shop into operation. They also opened the school book store.

As a money making project, DECA sold tumblers and at Christmas time they held a party for the children of the Damar Home. They also sold sectional hats for the pep club and made name plates for every teacher.

The OEA held three different bake sales and sold jewelry to raise money for their projects. Members of this club participated in the Rock-a-thon for Special Olympics and, during National Secretaries Week, they held an open house for the faculty, serving coffee and cookies.

DECA had 13 winners at their district conference while OEA had 2 winners at their own district conference. Then each of the groups participated in their state conferences.

At the DECA Christmas party, Tim Shrout finds a small friend with whom to share the Christmas spirit.

Sacking up orders, Rhonda Brownell and Judy Jones prepare the jewelry from the OEA sale for distribution to customers.

The Christmas season gives Toni McDowell, Vicki Taylor, and Lori McCullough an opportunity to decorate the office lab.

Selling OEA baked goods, Renee Edsall waits for Shawn Rhoderick to make up his mind on which cookies to buy.

Fine Arts offer media for self-expression

The Department of Fine Arts at Plainfield High School offered PHS'ers a full range of opportunities for self-expression in art and music in the 1977-78 school year.

In music, students could choose to be a part of one or more of four choirs and glees or, if they were very talented, they could be selected for Plainfield's most elite group, the Belles & Beaux.

If a student preferred instrumental to vocal music, they could choose to study their favorite instrument in band. And, the very best of these young musicians were offered a place in one of two dance bands.

In art, PHS'ers were given a chance to study techniques of drawing, painting, pottery, and crafts of all kinds. Frequently their best efforts were displayed in the showcases.

Practicing in the choir room, Angie Walker, Elise Clanton, and Amy Boyer join the rest of the concert choir in preparing for their spring concert.

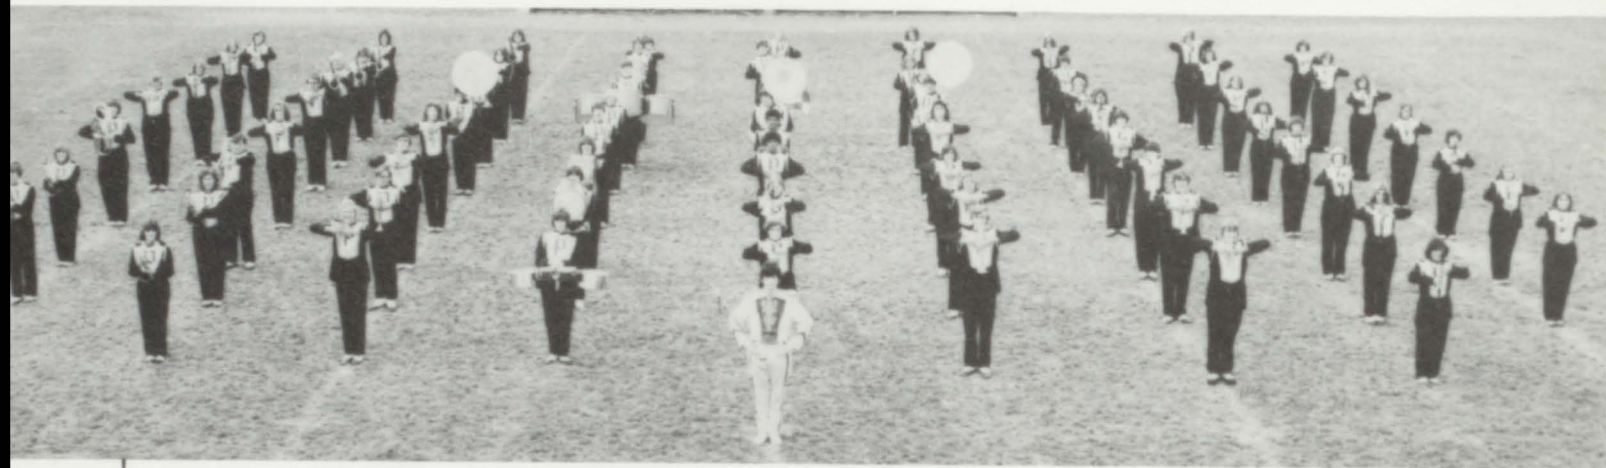

With attention to detail, Pat Brush uses a photograph as a model for her oil painting. Clay is the medium that David Jackson and his two classmates are using to express their artistic talents.

Adding the finishing touches to her portrait, this PHS artist seeks the comfort of bare feet while she concentrates on her work.

Eyes on the music, Debi Blaugrund plays her part in the rehearsal for the spring concert.

Rolling out clay, Doug McCormack designs a pottery bowl in art class.

Marching Band lines up behind new leader

The band began the year with a new director leading them as they marched at all home football games and in the Homecoming, Plainfield Fall Festival, and Greenfield parades.

They played recruitment concerts at the elementary schools, performed at Open House, and sold over $5000 worth of cheese and sausage on Band Day. In addition, Dance Band I played for the Grand Opening of McDonald's.

Band members won an unprecedented number of first division medals at the Solo and Ensemble Contest and they placed 2nd in the Greenfield Marching Band Contest. Dance Band II took a superior when they competed in a jazz band festival in Terre Haute.

P.E. classes offer full range of activities

Plainfield's phase elective program in physical education allowed students to select quarter courses that could further develop their existing skills or expose them to new ones.

Some learned team sports such as basketball, soccer, football, and volleyball. Others learned individual sports such as swimming, tennis, archery, and golf.

And, all learning didn't take place on a playing field either. Some PHS'ers elected to take Athletic Training where they learned to wrap strained muscles and sprained ankles. Lovers of the outdoors even had the opportunity to learn the secrets of successful camping.

A rainy day finds the P.E. classes in the gym playing a hard game of volleyball.

Woops! Sliding on the grass, David Bohenkamp attempts to save the ball as his opponents move in to take it away in a fast paced soccer match.

In the fall the freshmen in the National Junior Honor Society helped give a get-acquainted dance for students in grades 7-9. They also held a Thanksgiving party at the Vinewood Nursing Home where they entertained and played Bingo with the elderly.

In the spring both the Junior and Senior High Honor Societies initiated new members—the junior group in Aiken Auditorium and the senior group at the Plainfield Christian Church. After the initiations, each group had a reception for the initiates.

The big project of the year for the Senior High Honor Society was the purchasing and presentation of gold cords to their graduating members to be worn at graduation.

Downpour delays 1977 Homecoming

Oh, no! Rain! PHS'ers watched the sky all day hoping the rain would hold off until after their Homecoming game against Danville—but it didn't. The floats were moved indoors early in the day and judged after school just as the rain began.

Activities were postponed a week and anxiety reigned in the halls as students wondered who had won the float competition. Finally, the night of the second Homecoming arrived clear and cold.

The big moments came when the Class of '78 was announced the float winner for the third year in a row. Then the Quakers got down to winning a ball game.

After being announced Queen, Linda Ruddick shares her joy with Barb Cox and Mary Harris. Waving to well-wishers, Grand Marshall Harold Grosskreutz and his wife await the start of the parade. Complete and ready for judging, the floats are tucked away at Sargent's to protect them from the rain. At the Homecoming pep session, Joni Burlison and the marching band preview their half time show. As the band plays the national anthem, Mary Hays displays the Stars and Stripes to the Homecoming fans. The Quaker defense charges in to stop a Bulldog drive and maintain Plainfield's eight point lead.

Jubilant victors, the senior team, their coaches, and their cheerleaders inform everyone that they are number one.

Tensions run high at the junior sidelines as Lisa Haak, Liz Russell, and their teammates keep anxious eyes on the field action.

With a determined drive, Janet Muston carries the ball for the tough senior squad.

"If Mr. Danielson could only see us now!" giggles Tracey Krutschevski as she and Karen Ellis join the powderpuff pep band.

Substituting for the Red Pride girl, Chris Anderson "entertains" the crowd at the powderpuff game.

On the sideline, Mike Cureton, Scott Latta, and Brent Walters move the chain along as the game progresses.

Senior squad rolls up powderpuff win

With football season nearly over, the girls of the junior and senior classes began to gear up for their big confrontation on the football field. In its third year, the jr-sr powderpuff game had now become a tradition at PHS and both classes were determined to win the classic.

After the teams were chosen and the jerseys ordered, the two squads began making their secret game plans. They practiced their big plays after school wherever they could find an empty field and harassed their opponents when the opportunity was offered.

The big night came and the girls took the field with the light of battle in their eyes. The juniors had little luck in containing the experienced senior squad and the Class of '78 rolled up four TD's while the underclassmen remained scoreless. When the final whistle blew the seniors had a victory to celebrate and funds for the prom.

In full regalia, the band gives the Open House patrons a demonstration of the marching skills.

As parents watch, John Kirtley and Brad Saxman run a blood typing lab in the biology room.

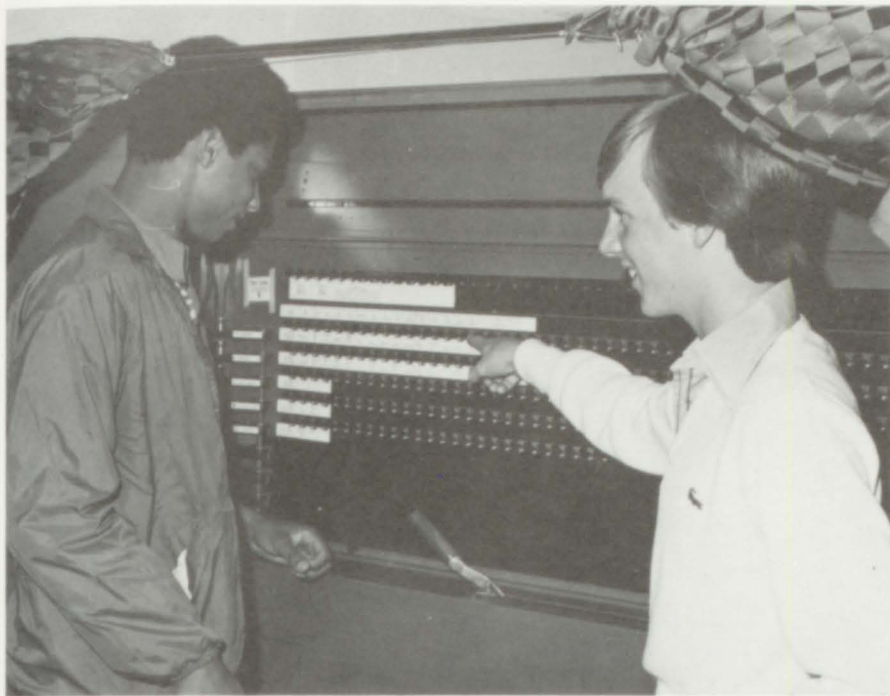

Drama students, Mary Ann Faulkner and Jenny Niemeyer, perform for the visitors at Open House.

Soon to be voters, government students Greg Jones and Brent Walters demonstrate the voting machine.

Waiting for his cake to bake, Jim Gibson discusses some of the techniques of micro-wave cooking.

In the cafeteria, the language students sell foreign goodies at their Dessert Fest.

Prosecutor Dan Donovan questions Allie Parker in a simulation of the Nuremberg Trials.

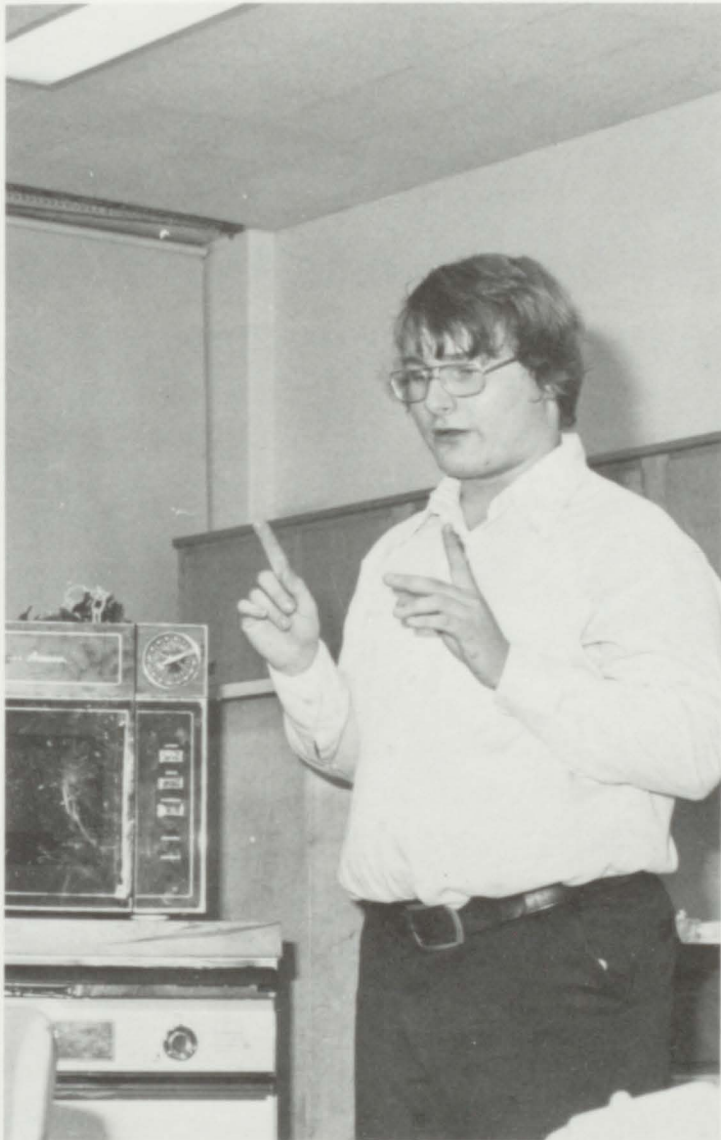

How could Open House be perked up? That was a big question, and, the answer soon came—involve the students.

Plans began to evolve with the various departments organizing displays, demonstrations, discussions, and films throughout the building. Students volunteered to help and "School in Action" was finalized.

On October 12, parents arrived to be presented with the options of visiting teachers in the classrooms or watching lab demonstrations, sampling desserts, listening to a concert, cheering PHS swimmers to a victory, and on, and on, and on . . .

Students revitalize '77 Open House

Many PHS'ers were kept busy behind the scenes of the drama and musical productions this year. The construction crews worked long hours with tape, saw, hammer, and nail. In the fall, Flowers for Algernon required a giant maze while Hello Dolly! in the spring called for a multi-level set complete with stairs, platforms, and ramps.

While the costumes and props for the fall play were not too difficult to devise, it was a different story for the musical. The period setting for this production forced a great deal of searching and creativity with needle and thread.

As the final rehearsals drew near, the sound and light crews moved into action, fitting their fade-ins and fade-outs into the proper time sequences. And, finally, the makeup artists plied their skills, turning teenagers into adults of various ages.

These hard workers did a lot to make the stage productions a success, and for little recognition. Hats off to them!

Unseen hands aid drama productions

In the sound booth, Mr. John Reedy and Randy Johnson work on a tape for the fall play, Flowers for Algernon.

Working on the set, Becky Barnett and Debi Blaugrund use unfamiliar carpentry tools.

An assembly line develops as Janet Roe, Susan Pedigo, and Jane Roe help each other with makeup and hairdos for Hello Dolly!—Plainfield's spring musical.

Sitting on the floor, Patti Kiefer makes some quick last minute stitches on a costume for the musical.

"This is where it's supposed to be," student director Chris Carr instructs his assistant, Mary Wertz, as they discuss problems in the first act of the fall play.

With a lot of tape and cardboard, Linda Wilson helps to construct a giant maze on stage for Flowers for Algernon.

Manning the lightboard, Doug Johnson waits for his cue to push levers and flip switches.

Plainfield players present 'Algernon'

The drama department delved into the confusing world of the retarded with their fall production, Flowers for Algernon. Six weeks of practice brought to the stage this study of a childlike man who, through experimental surgery, grew intellectually to genius level only to regress as the benefits of the experiment proved temporary.

Running for two nights, the play successfully depicted the tragic position of retarded citizens in our society and many in the audience surreptitiously wiped tears from their eyes as the final curtain fell.

Between scenes, Nola Johnson finds a quiet corner to concentrate on her shorthand homework.

Startled at seeing a vision from his childhood, David Newby panics and tries to flee from Sherri Baldwin's arms.

At a party, Karl James, Amy Boyer, John Himmelheber, and Kelly White enjoy a cruel joke at the expense of David Newby.

In a medical conference, doctors Kyle Davis, Butch Clark, and Joe Johnson discuss the future treatment of Charly, their special patient.

Counseling him to do his best, Karen Cummings assures David Newby that he does have a future.

A flashback to Charly's childhood finds his mother, Linda Wilson, weeping for her retarded son, Brad Kirchoff.

It's intermission of the last rehearsal and the cast and crew gather in the choir room for a briefing from their director, Mr. John Reedy.

Court page John Himmelheber presents the wassail bowl to the Lords and Ladies of the head table.

Hand in hand, Maureen Dakin and Terry Baker lead the procession of Belles and Beaux to begin the Madrigal show.

Opening with a song, Madrigal singers Lisa Bennett, Chris Carr, Cindy Snodgrass, and Chuck Carvey welcome their guests.

Toasting the good company, Quentin Storm and Lynn Mongan enjoy their wassail cups.

With a fanfare, trumpeters Tim Taylor, Scott Latta, and Mike Greer signal the beginning of the feast.

Before the guests arrive, Mike Baldwin puts the finishing touches to the table decorations by lighting the candles.

Waiting for their guests to finish eating, Robbie Roberts and Patty Campfield indulge in quiet conversation.

Christmas brings Madrigal concert

Once again the Belles and Beaux donned their velvets and satins to become Lords and Ladies of Medieval England. With a new director, Mr. Peter Sims, Plainfield's top singing group practiced long hours on the music for their traditional Madrigal concert.

As the trumpets flared and the doors opened, the singers entered a transformed cafeteria to be greeted by a full house ready to celebrate the Christmas season. The audience was not only treated to their musical efforts but also dined well on a traditional meal of roast beef and flaming pudding.

Comforting a constantly crying Judy Ledgerwood, Kyle Davis assures her that everything will work out once they are married. "Hey, you with the big ears!" screeches Robin Rushton while an embarrassed David Newby frantically tries to stop her. "Well Hellowooo, Stanley ..." sings Maureen Dakin as she glides down the stairs greeting each of the restaurant staff in turn. Dancing waiters Kyle Davis, Mark Joswick, John Himmelheber, and Ron Saxman present arms under the stern eye of maitre d' Robbie Roberts. "We've got elegance," exclaim Chris Carr, Cindy Snodgrass, Lisa Bennett, and Butch Clark as they walk to dinner. Strolling across the stage, the chorus recommends that you "Put on your Sunday clothes when you feel down and out."

In the Spring the music department took on the gigantic task of bringing Hello Dolly! to the Plainfield stage. Working around the curtailment of all night activities caused by the energy crisis, the cast met at the Indiana Boys School during the early weeks of rehearsals.

Involving forty-three people on stage and many more behind the scenes, the musical was the largest production of the year. The players spent hours learning lines, music, and intricate dance steps for this lighthearted musical comedy about the maneuverings of a matchmaking widow as she attempted to snare a wealthy husband for herself.

Large production numbers and acrobatic choreography highlighted the musical and made it fun for the cast to do. The audience also enjoyed it as the production unfolded and they demonstrated their approval with a standing ovation at the final curtain.

'Dolly' comes to PHS in spring

Perched at the top of the bleachers on the west end of the gym, pep band members Tim Taylor, Dan Donovan, J.V. Gilbert, John Allen, and Doug Johnson provide the blare of the trumpets at the pep session.

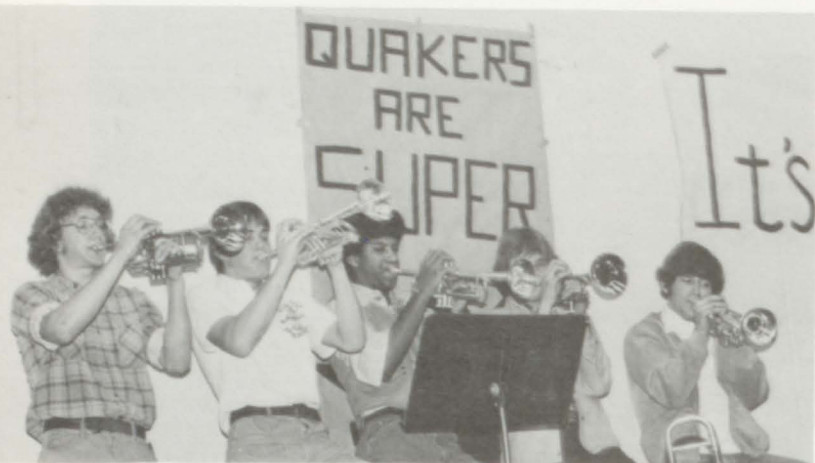

Interior decorators Susan Voyles and Patti Hayes spend an afternoon redoing Mike Rugen's bedroom in Quaker style.

"Go Red Pride!" chants the Plainfield cheerblock as they await the buzzer to signal the start of the final game of the Brownsburg Sectional.

"... this is what I'd be ..." sing cheerleaders Mitzi Buis, Angie Snodgrass, Lisa Modesitt, Sally Badanek, Susan Hart, and Cindy Snodgrass during their comical skit for the sectional pep session.

Decorating the fan bus proved a problem for Robin Alexander and Kelly Ackley when the tape refused to stick.

Bundled up, Cathy Boesch, Barb Cox, and Linda Ruddick brave below freezing temperatures to plaster Jim Groninger's house with signs.

"Will basketball sectionals be held?"
 "When is the game scheduled now?"
 Such questions plagued PHS'ers as regular season play ended and the coal strike dragged on.

Since no one had definite answers for the questions, the pep club and cheerleaders decided to proceed with Spirit Week as planned. They wanted to show their appreciation and support of a team that had produced such an exciting 16-4 season.

These hard workers decorated the homes of players and coaches and painted hundreds of signs to be hung in the halls. PHS'ers dressed oddly all week and activities culminated with a pep session just prior to the first sectional game.

Sectionals lift Quaker spirit

'78 prom blooms at Murat Temple

The juniors and seniors had only five days to get ready for the 1978 prom when they came back to school from spring vacation. The planning had been done weeks earlier, the ballroom was reserved, the band was hired, and the favors were ordered.

Now they had to sell the tickets, organize the refreshments, and decorate the ballroom at the Murat Temple, not to mention getting their flowers ordered and their gowns and tuxedos ready for the big night.

Saturday found the girls in hair rollers and the guys cleaning their cars. But, by evening all were ready—it was out to dinner in a fancy restaurant, then to the prom, and finally on to post-prom activities.

All wrapped up in each other, Lin Creech and Randy Davis sway to the slow beat of Nick Craig's band.
 At the refreshment table, Sandy Turner and Janell Duncan serve up punch to a thirsty Randy Galyan.
 Taking a break from the dancing, Kathy Spencer and her date spend a few moments in quiet conversation at their table.
 In a seat for two on the edge of the dance floor, Judy Ledgerwood and Dan Drury watch the dancing.
 Ducking to get through the flowered arch, Mark Robinson escorts Darla Nidey along the pathway of stars to the 1978 prom.
 Finally reaching the head of the line, Tim Belcher and Toni McDowell sign up with Tim Freund of Porter's Studio for their prom pictures.
 As the music floats around the Murat Temple ballroom, PHS'ers enjoy this year's junior-senior prom.

In the Spring the members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes once again turned their crafty minds to devising a hilarious "Almost Everything Goes" program to raise money for summer camp fees.

For the first time the freshmen joined the sophomore, junior, senior, and faculty teams in competing for top honors on this night of friendly rivalry. Events opened with the traditional maypole scramble and moved quickly through human rope unknotting, blindfold table setting, and various relays.

The seniors took an early lead in the score book but at the conclusion of the last event the faculty had pulled an upset to emerge victorious for the evening. The crowd for the annual melee was larger than ever before and the FCA cleared enough money to help several members with summer camp fees.

Almost everything goes FCA night

A blindfolded Dan LaRoche puts a place setting together following the instructions of teammate Janet Muston.

The freshman maypole team of Beth Gee, Brian Cecil, John Cox, Kirk Daugherty, Reenie Whitfield, and Becky Bennett finishes first.

Unwinding the sophomore maypole, Patti Kiefer and Scott Johnstone attempt to finish before the other four teams.

Knotted into the senior rope, Steve Caraboa, Sally Badanek, Barb Cox, and Steve Wray await a check by Mike Hanna and Mr. Muston.

With a strained look, Starr Turner races for the freshman shooter while Lisa Groninger takes the sophomore football the other way.

Back to back, Laura Wildermuth, Randy Davis, and Darla Nidey move a slippery ball down the court for the juniors.

With the prom over, the seniors had only graduation to plan—and that required a lot of thought! What could the Class of '78 do that would top the frisbees of last year's graduation? Aha! Confetti! And, they set to work cutting paper.

On the evening of May 19, the seniors arrived at PHS in everything from shorts to party clothes with their gowns and caps clutched in their arms. One of the smoothest and quickest afternoon practices in the memory of class sponsor Harold Grosskreutz prepared them for the night's ceremonies.

Speeches by Pastor James Wilson, Valedictorian Sherri Baldwin, and Mr. Grosskreutz as well as music from the choir and band led quickly to the climactic moments—the reading of the class roll, the receiving of diploma covers, and the turning of the tassels. Then with cheers the graduates filled the air with a cloud of confetti.

Confetti blankets PHS graduates

At the head of the line, Salutatorian Barb Cox awaits the cue to begin while Gary Day, Robbie Fergerson, and Rhonda Brownwell listen to last minute instructions.

Together for the last time, the concert choir entertains at graduation with the song "Times of Your Life."

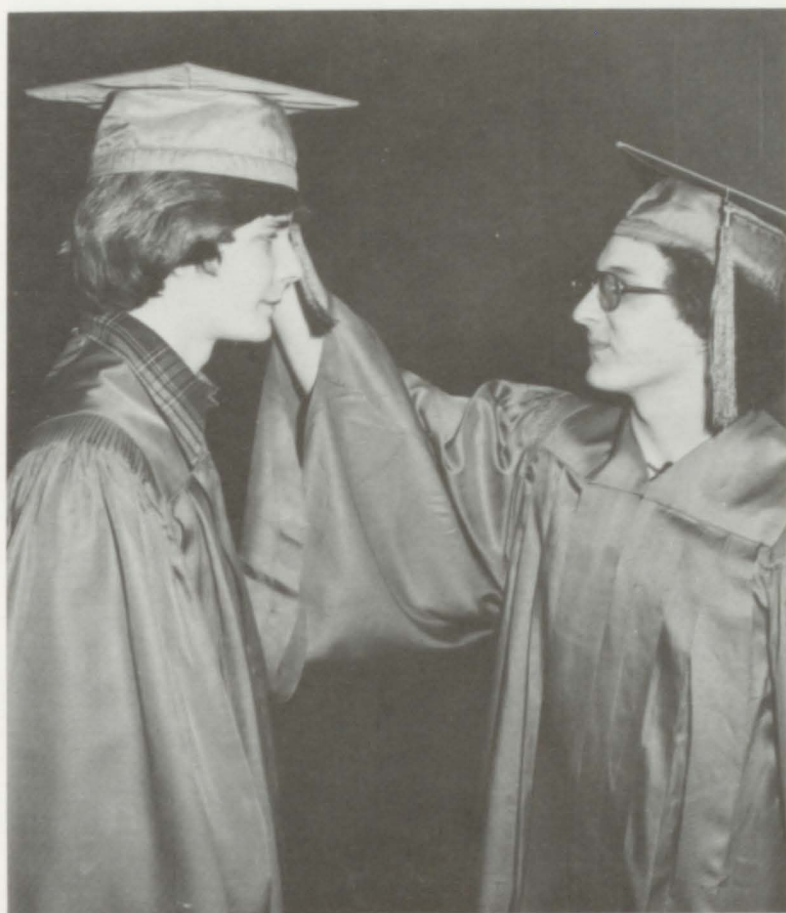

With popular song titles as her focal point, Valedictorian Sherri Baldwin addresses her class on what has happened in the past and what will happen in the future.

Carefully folding his robe, Pat Taylor gets ready to exchange it for his hard earned diploma.

The Class of '78 listens to the address given by their classmate Sherri Baldwin.

"Is my tassel O.K.?" Jim Vogel asks Scott Turner as they nervously wait for the signal to line up.

Hugs and congratulations from Jeanette Margiotti greet Susan Kiefer after she has claimed her diploma in the cafeteria.

Mr. Grosskreutz leaves PHS

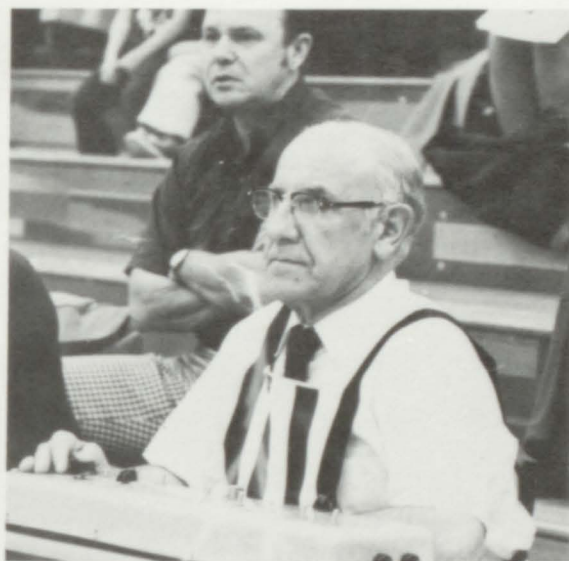

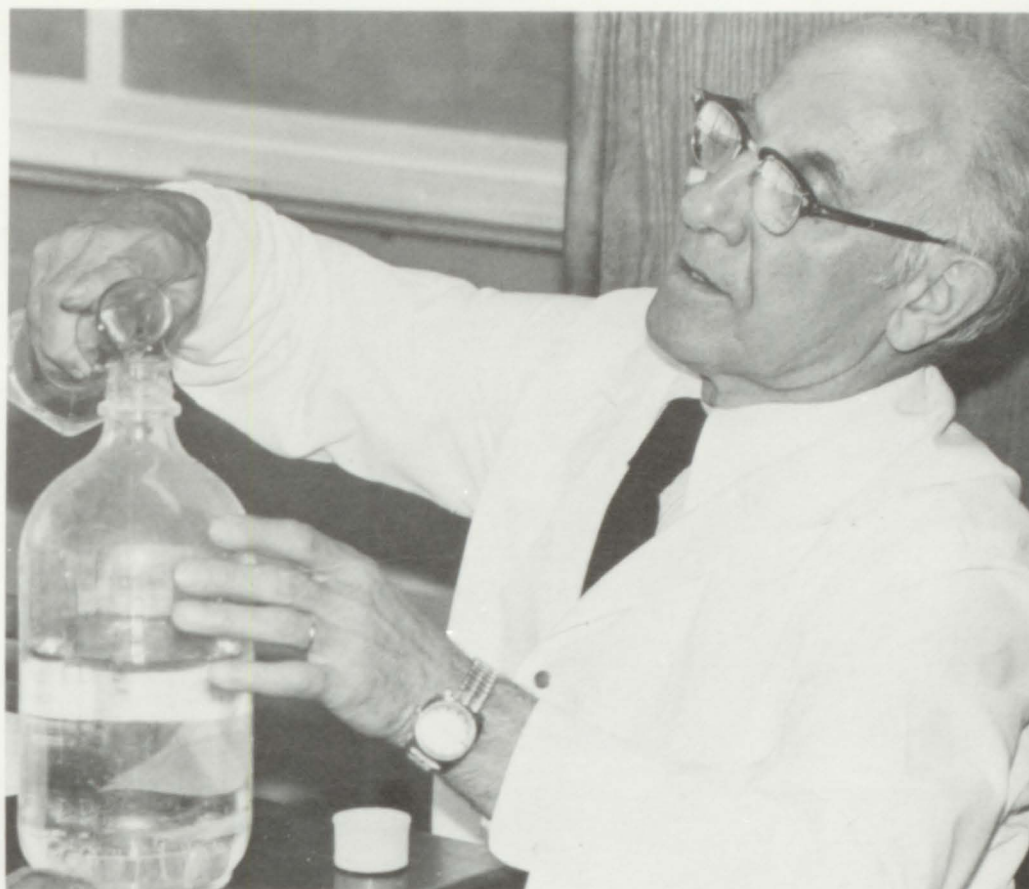

In May of 1978 Plainfield bid farewell to a teacher and a friend—Mr. Harold Grosskreutz. A part of the PHS scene for over 40 years, Mr. Grosskreutz received messages of thanks for his years of service from many graduates who remembered him with fondness.

Chemistry teacher, 4-H leader, and Sunday School teacher, Mr. Grosskreutz devoted his life to working with youth. He offered his services to the athletics department as a ticket taker, score keeper, fan bus chaperone and anything else that was needed.

In addition, Mr. Grosskreutz sponsored many senior classes, helping to build Homecoming floats, plan proms, and organize graduations. He also helped smooth the paths of other teachers in his role as chairman of the science department.

Truly a man of many hats, Mr. Grosskreutz is a man who will be greatly missed at Plainfield High School in the years to come.

At graduation, Mr. Grosskreutz speaks to his last class of Plainfield graduates.

"Look at this!" Mr. Grosskreutz shares with his wife Inez the gift presented at a farewell banquet.

In his role as department chairman, Mr. Grosskreutz discusses some new science equipment with Mr. Baker.

Dancing at the prom, Mr. and Mrs. Grosskreutz show the younger generation how it's done.

With a steady hand, Mr. Grosskreutz measures out the chemicals for a class experiment.

As a judge at the Science Fair, Mr. Grosskreutz questions a participant on her entry.

Keeping his eyes on the referee, Mr. Grosskreutz operates the scoreboard at a varsity basketball game.
