Red Pride Is In Plain Sight, As is Construction at PHS

As we stumbled into school on that anticipated, yet also dreaded day in August, we looked forward to the worst. Not only were there plans for a year of construction, but the teachers had plans for a year of homework and assignments. Surely algebra, chemistry, and AP English would lower our GPA's.

As the five-minute warning bell rang, the halls were abuzz with the action of 1085 students making last minute checks on homerooms. Upon entering homeroom and adjusting to the familiar surroundings, faces and names came back. Despite the dull starting routine of organizing schedules and filling out forms, the year began to look like it was going to be a good one.

Although the planned construction was not yet under way, the foundations of the practice gym and new science rooms would soon come into view. Little did we know that the construction would be such an influence on our school lives. Traffic was eventually rerouted, not only in the parking lot, but also in the halls. It made life challenging. Instead of taking the usual eight-minute walk in five minutes, we were forced to take an elevenminute walk in five minutes to get to class. Either way, most of the time we were late.

Despite all the agonies of the usual school year, which were greatly magnified by freezing halls and scaffolding, we survived. Somehow, throughout the year we managed to bring what we thought to be unattainable with In Plain Sight, within our reach. Moving Up But Temporarily Out

Who could have imagined the plans being made back in the summer of '77 that would add excitement and confusion to the halls this year. It was decided then to begin the acre-and-ahalf building addition this past fall once the plans were given final approval in 1980.

With construction underway, the whole school began a slow transformation. One of the first changes students had to contend with was the rerouting of student traffic from the back door to a side door. As if this was not enough of a bother, passing periods became a daily obstacle course for every PHS student. Dodging tractors, ladders, wheelbarrows, and lost construction workers was a dreaded event in each student, teacher, and administrator's routine.

Amid this mass of activity and strangers, one form in khaki slacks and shirt became increasingly familiar. Amos, head of the A.E. Pitcher Co., general contractors, could often be seen surveying blueprints, or supervising work.

As the new walls came into view, the inconvenience became less noticeable and excitement replaced annoyance in everybody's mind. The thoughts of a new gym to facilitate the growing sports programs, extra class space to accommodate the recent shift towards vocational training, and three additional lab rooms to handle the overflow of science students, roused curiosity in the hearts of every staff, faculty and student body member.

As the year went on, bringing the school closer to the 1983 completion date, a sense of pride was instilled in everyone. Despite new locker combinations, classroom changes, and, worst of all, the asphyxiating stench of paint in the hallways, the improvements to PHS were all well accepted. All in all, the year of detours, obstacles, and general confusion ended with the school's goals of modern change and overall improvement in plain sight.

Does this man look familiar? Many workers surveyed blueprints in the halls.

The boys' locker room, normally the home for smelly socks and lost gym trunks, became the home for construction workers as the floor was destroyed to make way for new plumbing.

PHS was invaded this year by a new and neverbefore-seen breed. Bulldozers such as this became as familiar to students as a school bus.

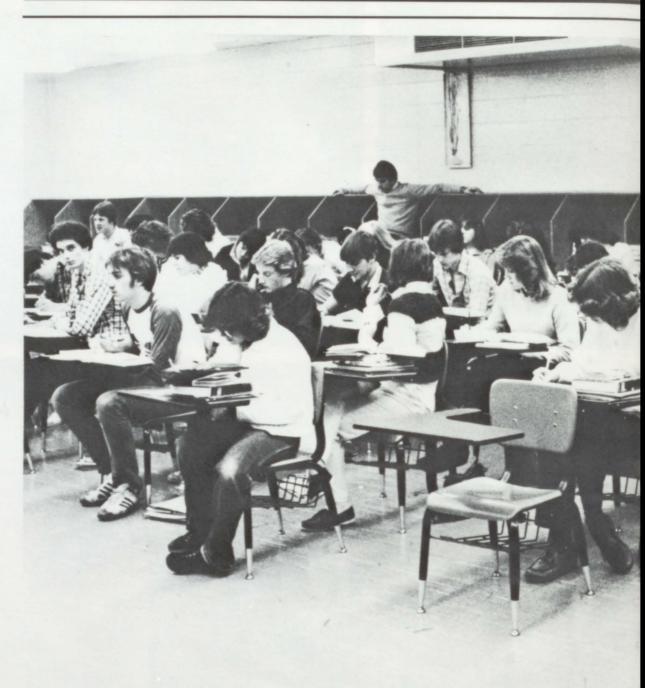

Men began walling in the new English and history room as well as the locker bay this year, giving some students acute claustrophobia.

Ceremoniously lifting their shovels, Jon Yoho, Dan Young, R. Dale Jackson, and Everett Deken make the first move in the improvement of PHS.

ACADEMICS

Despite the varied academic opportunities offered at PHS, the most familiar scene is that of students hurriedly scribbling notes. These students listening to Mr. Bullington in CHAP are no exception.

It's the Reason For Being Here

Finding it harder to concentrate than they expected, Mike Muse and Hanna Lassila lose control during a German class skit.

You wished you were dreaming, but you knew you weren't when the warning bell sounded at 7:55 on August 25th. You finally had to face reality and wake up from that threemonth summer daze. Somehow over the summer those halls you could have walked blindfolded last year had grown strangely unfamiliar, and only after a great deal of wandering—complete with a trip to the smoke-filled bathroom, a stop at the guidance office, and, don't forget, all of that juicy gossip—did you arrive safely in homeroom.

As your year progressed with many tardies, locker switches, in-hall tractor collisions, and classroom changes, you eventually became resigned to the daily grind; even insurmountable loads of homework weren't surprising (still disappointing and yet worth all of the effort of "conning" the teacher out of it). You might have begun to find the daily routine of English and mathematics dull or the usual schedule of science and history boring. However, with inclass diversions such as labs, dissections, and computer programming-as well as added incentives like candy sales, student teaching, field trips, classes at Ben Davis, and library and lounge excursions-your school day was practically tolerable. Still, it was only those unexpected extras that brought your school year to life: "air raids," decorative deer heads, sub-zero fire drills, snow days, lab fires, and squirt bottle fights.

Granted, your school year had its high points, but what could ever compare with the sheer ecstasy of final exams, research papers, mammoth reading assignments, or allnight study sessions? A few sleepless nights were essential in order to balance out your in-class "free-days." Late nights, endless homework, pop-quizzes, and lab blunders combined with hurried lunches, school closings, "surf's up," and food fights—it was plain to see your '81-'82 academic year was one to be remembered.

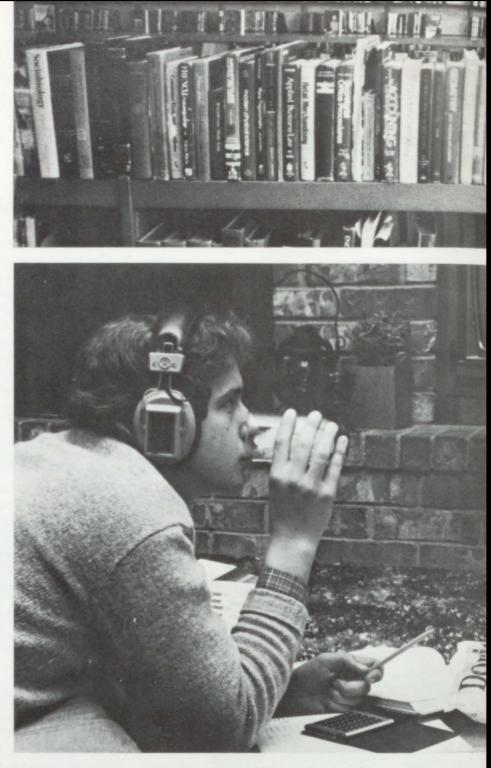

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Homework Can Be Hazardous To Your Health

There's something about teachers and homework that fits together beautifully; why, it's like flies to flypaper! Why does it always seem like Mr. Bullington or Mrs. Jackson finds homework assignments for you to do the one night that you wanted to go to the reserve game? Or why is it that the homework that is assigned often seems to be from a totally different world from what was discussed in class? Of course, there are people who never do their homework, but even those people give in and start doing their assignments about the time that smoke-ups come out.

Have you ever noticed the different ways that people go about doing their homework? Some go off to the quiet asylum of their bedrooms, while others prefer mixing homework with TV, and stereo, and lots of food.

Actually, homework isn't that bad. After all, homework is what school is about. Besides, most of us usually find the time between assignments to do the things that we want to do.

Probably the most typical study pose is David Daum's: surrounded by food, drinks, TV, and stereo noise, David is hardly interrupted by having to do homework. If students can't use Mrs. Carrigan's hangout, they go to the Plainfield Public Library to wile away the evening hours. Susan Peters and David Ruark work on AP reports.

Intently inspecting his personally decorated locker, Ed Dailey debates what books he needs to take home for tomorrow's assignments.

One place to do homework in school is the library where Rita Merkley either plans ahead by studying for tomorrow's test or—like many—grabs a few seconds for last-minute cramming.

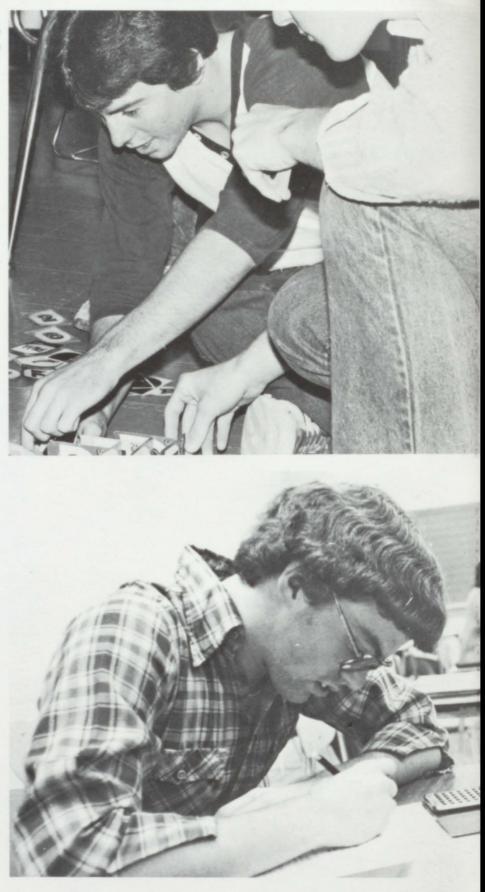

CLASS32 . . we're working 8 to 3:30 . . .

A teaching technique used by Frau Fleck is the classtime use of games and skits, ranging from Monopoly to original skits; Dick Newport and Tracy Jones use Uno cards in this German game. "Is that for us?!" students ask delightedly when they see a VTR machine roll into the classroom. Many teachers use cassettes to supplement teaching and break routines.

On a day to day basis classroom time takes up most of a school day. Depending on the individual teacher's preference, students are offered a variety of ways in which the material may be covered and tested. Timeconsuming worksheets, questions, video tapes, lectures, and reading are a few methods teachers use to encourage the student to actually learn the material. Quizzes and tests ranging from multiple guess to the dreaded essay are given to see how much of the material the student actually knows.

Many teachers offer students class time to do their homework. A variety of other things are done in this much anticipated time. Many popular activities include sleeping, talking, throwing paper airplanes, or bugging a classmate. If you enter a classroom while a teacher is lecturing, you are most likely to find at least one head on a desk. Not to say that lectures are boring, just that many students have a very different idea of what's interesting. Occasionally, you'll hear a snore erupt from some inept student who hasn't quite latched on to the fine art of snoozing with his eyes open. If you look hard enough, you might even find one person taking notes. Another all-time favorite that you will almost always hear in a classroom is talking. Oh, the juicy gossip that goes on during class; it's wonderful! For some odd reason you never hear anyone talking about verbs or Congress or the exciting art of using the Trig tables. Conversations about who's going with whom always seem to top the list.

As you can see, this opportunity to do homework is well spent but most students seem to end up with homework anyway. Why?

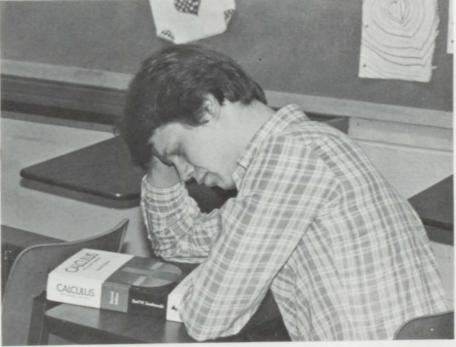

Occasionally high school students are still asked to write on the board (it was a favorite in elementary school, right?). Bev Clark is poised as she begins a diagram.

Every math class has its study time "to get you started on tomorrow's assignment." Curt Brodie rolls up his sleeves, clears his desk, and—with calculator help—digs in.

Dozing off in class, Kim Kelly typifies the seniors' attitude toward calculus and (by Spring Break) school in general.

Labs may be interesting or dull, uproarious or sedate, but usually labs are a challenging learning experience. They are designed to give a first-hand learning experience in a particular subject area.

The English department at PHS offers two labs to students, the Reading Lab and the Writers Gallery. Both classes are individualized so that the student is assigned his own special work based on his own needs. All freshmen are required to take their grammar quarter in the Writers Gallery, but the class usually includes just as many upperclassmen who are trying to improve their writing skills.

The Math Lab focuses on reviewing math skills and acquiring new ones. It is especially valuable for those students who have a difficult time with math and need some extra practice.

The newest lab at PHS is the Computer Lab. It offers a chance for any student to become familiar with the language and operation of simple programs. Some of the genius types learn to write their own programs, and some of the Pac-man addicts use it as a school day substitute for the 25¢ variety.

Nearly every science class from Biology to Advanced Chemistry offers labs to students. Most of the time labs go unnoticed by anyone not in the class, except for chemistry. Everyone in the whole front hall shares the odoriferous sulfur concoctions which Mr. Effinger's crew put together.

Business labs give students knowledge of running a real business office. besides the usual typing shorthand skills, Intensive Office Lab even covers the more practical skills of how to dress and how to make coffee for the boss.

"Ready, begin." And the sounds of keys hitting paper break the silence of concentration for these beginning typing students. Checking the results of her chemistry experiment, Kathy Yeryar carefully inspects the crystals which, if the experiment has been done properly, should appear on the filter paper.

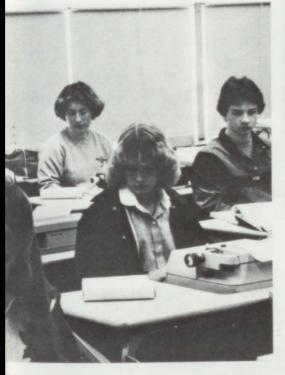

Last May representatives from various computer companies brought their wares to PHS. Student Todd Haver and teachers Kathy Leatherman and Don Heald watch a presentation. As a result of this conference, PHS owns 19 microcomputers for student use. An Individual Science Research student, Laura Smith designs a presentation to display the results of her hours of research on perception differences among elementary students.

A freshman in the Writers Gallery, Jeff Fishel completes another sketchbook; through satisfactory submission of a masterpiece students accumulate their grade points.

in the classroom

Lurking in the halls of our school, hiding in the daily routine schedule are students who on the outside seem to be ordinary, but in fact are quite the contrary. These students bear a talent that brings out their creativity plain for all to see.

Some students will go to extremes to insure their project is of the highest quality possible. In art classes students may have to carry weaving loom frames strung with various colors of yarn, weaving shuttles, and a pattern paper. Other projects may require hauling large paintings and paint, or often times a student may spot someone with clay under his fingernails or pencil on light-colored clothing.

Home ec classes require creativity and imagination, too. Favorite among students and staff is the class offering cooking challenges. Terrific odors of cookies and cakes baking drift through the hallways. Other results produced by the classes are clothing, home plans, wedding costs, better understanding of human nature in different stages of life, and creative house cleaning. Perhaps the most amusing class offered is the famous Singles Survival. One story is told by a faculty judge: as he was sampling a pie, he bit into an unusually dry, hard piece. Investigation led to an explanation of why the boy had called his pie "educating": he had included his book in the ingredients!

Shop classes prepare students for reallife work situations. Trade secrets are revealed in classes which instruct students how to print on various materials, work with cars, design in wood and metal, and create masterpieces in each.

Working diligently together in graphics, Colleen Human (who is having second thoughts) and Randy Brinker make a paste-up.

Many students at PHS dare to venture out of the school for some of their educational experiences. The battle to learn takes place through Junior Achievement, DECA, and student teaching. These outside experiences are very beneficial in that they allow the students a chance to test their ability in coping with the population outside our world at PHS.

Conquering fears of dealing with consumers, the brave people of DECA journey regularly to jobs that the organization has found for them. Their jobs vary from waiting on customers at Marsh to selling Radio Shack equipment to eager buyers.

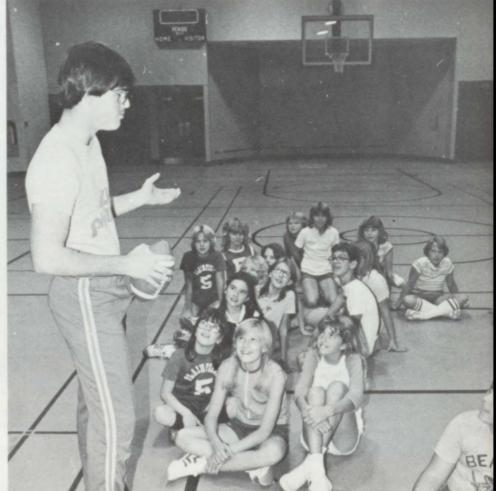

For the first time, Plainfield offered the students of PHS a chance to establish and operate a charter company. The Junior Achievement groups (commonly called JA) experienced the high points as well as the difficult moments common to every company in the step-by-step production and marketing of their goods. The Magnetic Person—Owlities and Coupons Make Cents were very successful in the outside consumer market.

Students wishing to pursue a career in teaching or dealing with children were encouraged to enroll in the student teaching program that PHS offers in cooperation with the elementary schools in the Plainfield area. In this program the student travels to a school of their choice to assist in tutoring regular classroom activities and extra-curricular activities.

For many students, these opportunities to explore the world outside the walls of PHS make their in-school learning more relevant and provide them some experience in the "Real World."

Anyone who has been around the choir, drama, and band departments can tell you just how bizarre some of the events and people may seem. This is, however, not totally true. Mostly they are talented, spirited, but so totally dedicated that they seem to teter on the brink of being slightly insane. They spend endless hours perfecting their music or acting.

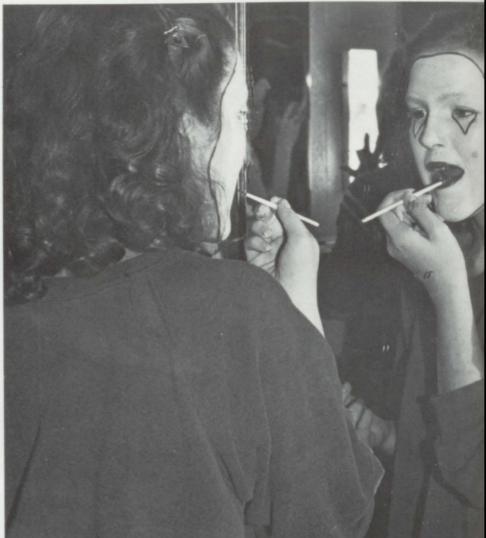

Both the bands and the choirs have music contests throughout the year. These range from Solo and Ensemble contest to the Jazz Band contests and competition that involve the whole choir or band. During these contests both the bands and the choirs have well represented Plainfield (including an excellent division rating given in the squirt gun competition.) Along with their competitions they must also prepare for several concerts a year.

The acting classes are very different from most of the classes at PHS. Upon entering the back stage door one is greeted by drama students warming up with calisthenics, being involved in stage combat, or talking to a curtain. Acting students not only learn about dramatic acting but also about mime, comedy, and lighting, and, most of all, working with other people. The acting classes don't have contests or performances, but their members are expected to assist with the school productions.

Possibly the group most bent on self-destruction is the Red Pride Marching Showband. Their season spans the time from and August band camp to the Kentucky Derby. Not only is a bandman expected to play and march in time but he must also like 6 A.M practice before state contest, mosquitoes and band camp food. Another requirement is that he come equipped with a sun visor and insect repellent as well as long johns and earmuffs.

Is Tim Benge attempting to keep his brains in with his fingers? Or is he expressing his view to Mr. Baker? Just what Tim is doing remains quite a mystery. Concentrating, Sandy Snyder practices her make-up for the play during acting class.

Vampires and other creatures delighted people of all ages during the choirs' quite successful Halloween Horror Hall.

Does choir make Mary Jane Hadley this way? Or is she entertaining everyone at Halloween in the choir hall?

...BRIGHT!

Despite a rigorous schedule that included performances at home football games and three festivals in the fall, the Marching Band achieved a first at regional and placed thirteenth at state in a toughened Division B. Later pulling their new trailer along, they headed for the Kentucky Derby parade in April to represent Plainfield. Even though there are numerous hazards and discomforts to the Marching Band, no one would dream of deserting or complaining.

Performing groups are an intergral and sparkling part of life at PHS. Best of all, being a part of choir, drama or band teaches us how to work together and make new friendships.

STUDENT LIFE

For the first time ever the student body collects on the gym floor for an impromptu pep session to get charged up for the Friday night sectional game.

A Lighter Side to Quaker Life

The sophomore AAG bunny-hoppers stumble toward the finish line during this fast-paced event.

Student life here at PHS this year was one which was exciting and fun filled: a year to be remembered. No matter where your interests happen to lie-whether they be drama, athletics, or academics-the activities here interested everyone. With the approach of a new school year you were already contemplating a winning float, a victory quickly grabbed by the junior class. Nevertheless, when the floats were completed and homecoming over, a feeling of togetherness was aroused with friends and classmates whether your float happened to win or not. For those more intrigued by the stage, a host of activities were at hand. Both "A Night of One Acts" and Brigadoon were excellent productions that required an abundance of time and energy. In fact, more often than not, time was a major factor. With a score of late night rehearsals you often found it nearly impossible to complete the reams of homework which teachers so villainously piled on. At any rate, you survived and went on to participate in the rough and tumble powderpuff game, the competitive Field Day, and Almost Anything Goes. And this year, compliments of Mother Nature, there were a few days of peace, quiet, and silent snow that allowed you to catch just a few extra winks of sleep before the gang wanted to go to Hobb's Hill. Of course you didn't mind the extra days off, and neither did the teachers.

With the spring thaw came thoughts of Spring Break and, for many seniors, thoughts of Florida sunshine. Once back from Spring Break, senioritis set in, not only in the senior class but the junior, sophomore and freshman classes as well. But somehow you managed to settle yourself down enough to attend the Jr. Sr. Prom, an evening you won't forget for a long time. As graduation and the end of your year came to a close in your mind—the memories of the great times as PHS were In Plain Sight!

Quakers Send Out Clowns With Homecoming Victory

Do you remember ...

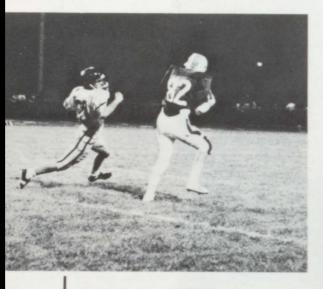

Only three weeks into the school year, PHS students were swamped by rigorous Homecoming activities. Planning float themes based on song titles took thoughtful discussion. Then, armed with float plans on paper, the classes dug into the treacherous work of flower fluffing and staple-gunning. Miraculously all four floats appeared at the Plaza Friday afternoon for judging.

Before the band marched its Homecoming halftime, the results of the week's worth of work with staple-guns and rolls of float paper were announced: the class of '83 took the prize. Shelley Brown was announced as the 1981 Homecoming Queen amidst a crowd of cheering.

To further highlight Homecoming, the Quakers sent the Cascade Cadets home on their haywagons soundly defeated 42 to 15. As they ran off the field, the victorious Quaker team was heard singing "Here Comes the King, the Big #1!" ... Shelley Brown crying, shaking, and trembling with joy well into the game's third quarter after she had been crowned Homecoming queen at halftime.

- ... Student Council President, Tom Hawk, Talking rreeeaaall sslloow at Friday's pep session.
- .. Junior, Kathy Costin, shrieking at Mr. Milburn, "No, no you'll ruin it!" while he attempted to correct the Quaker man's nose with a paint brush (it took two bold strokes). Sort of like most of us saying, "Hey, Michaelangelo, don't you think you ought to chip just a bit more on this part over here?!"

- Homecoming being great for everyone except for the band members who were all standing perfectly still, just as usual, trying not to swat at the mosquitoes.

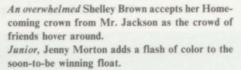

Plainfield player #82, Phil Lowery, maneuvers a tough play against a Cascade cadet. After many tedious hours of rigorous work, the class of 1983 turned out a colorful, prizewinning float that was highlighted with balloons and streamers.

The traditional Homecoming half-time show would not have been complete without the sounds of the Red Pride Marching Show band and Flag Corp's presentaiton of the colors.

Power (rough) puff Football Brings Out Beast in Everyone

While the usual football squad consists of big burly "creatures," the football team which took to the field on Nov. 2 was made up of sweet mannered girls, an idea soon proven wrong from the moment the clock started to run down. Many practices held previous to the game brought out the untamed "beast" in every player.

To start off the intriguing event, the frosh and soph girls went at it savagely for a 2-quarter length battle. The sophs triumphantly took the game 20-0.

While this game had the crowd on the edge of their seats, the mood was nothing to be compared with the emotions and spirits that arose during the junior and senior girls' clash. To begin the game, the lineup for both teams was announced: the excitement which had built up among the girls for the momentous occasion began to erupt into cheers.

The juniors' first touchdown was considered meaningless by the seniors (for some reason), until their own touchdown was called back. The juniors added to their tally with another T.D. later in the game. The seniors then scored a second T.D. The joy that the senior girls expressed was soon haulted when it, too, was called back. The junior/senior clash ended in sad defeat for the seniors and the thrill of victory for the juniors.

Let It Snow, Let It Snow, And It Did!

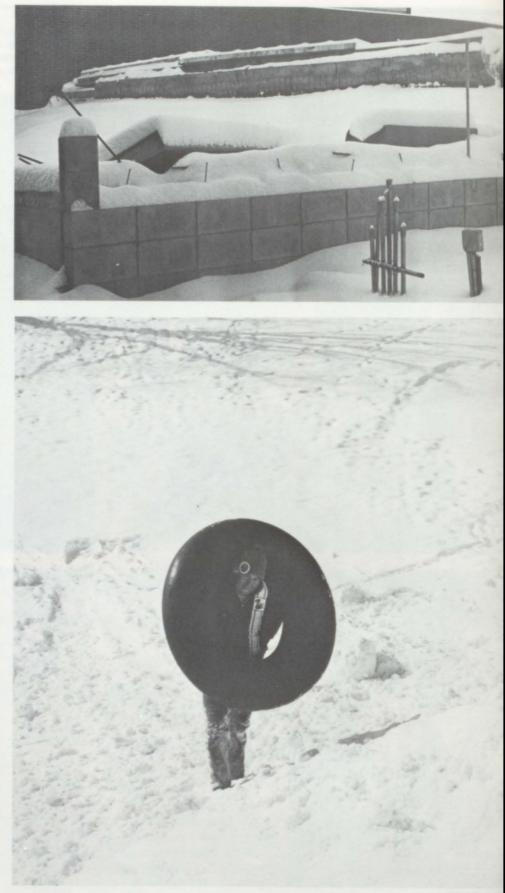

A white Christmas was more than a dream for PHS students in 1982—it was a definite reality. Plainfield experienced the heaviest volume of snow seen since the blizzard of 1978. Mounds of the fluffy white substance caused the school to be closed a total of five days in '82.

Logically if the roads were too treacherous for school buses, then they were too dangerous for student drivers also. WRONG! PHS students took advantage of their extra vacation time by snowmobiling, traveling to ski slopes, or driving to Hobb's hill for some sledding. The more adventurous students even made midnight trips to the famed hill to test their "night driving" skill.

The snow caused a new disease to spread through the school. Just as quickly as "Senioritis" spreads in the spring, "Snow Fever" infected every student in the PHS halls. Each time snow began to fall, classes were disrupted with cries of "Here it comes again!" or "Do you think they'll let us out early?"

Although the teachers may have seemed annoyed by these regular interuptions, where the snow days were concerned, they welcomed them as readily as any student.

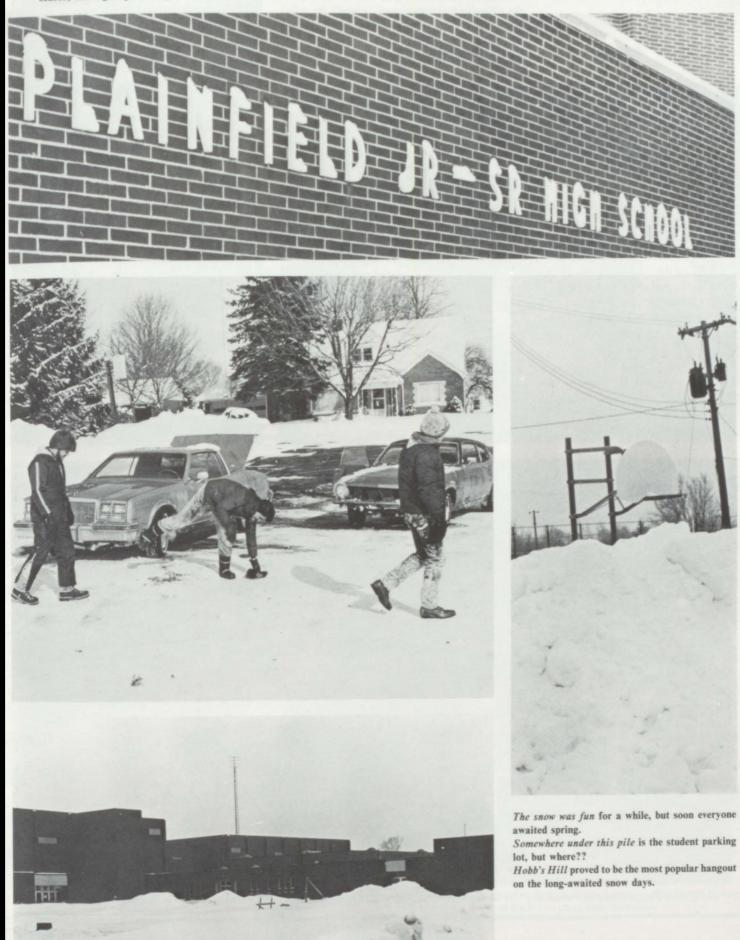

Many high heaps of snow in the parking lot made maneuvering difficult when parking cars or attempting to enter the building, but on those mornings when the radio called out The Plainfield Community School Corp. under school closings, and students could roll over and go back to sleep, it was worth any inconvenience.

Finally Neal Turner found a doughnut he couldn't handle.

The outside construction had to be put on hold with the onset of the snowy season, causing major changes inside PHS.

Plainfield Jr-Sr High School sports a white cover which kept us out of classes for several days.

A different setting and staging technique is used for the philosphical development of "Apples"; the varied movements and the number of people on the stage at all times created a unique effect.

While David Ruark demands the land is his, Rita Belles and Dean Black deny it during "A Marriage Proposal."

In "If Men Played Cards as Women Do," David Sigmund, David Ruark, David Maloney, and Chris Fischer prototype a "bunch" of women.

Lights! Camera! Action!

PLACE: PHS Auditorium DATE: November 13 & 14, 1981 TIME: 8:00 P.M.

SUBJECT: "A Night of One Acts"

"A Night of One Acts" was exactly what the name implies. The drama department, under new direction, took on the difficult task of presenting four one-act plays in the same evening.

To start the evening, the first play was "A Marriage Proposal." A young man, bitten by the bug of love, sought his sweetheart's hand in marriage. But before he could "pop" the question, the two parted in a quarrel. Eventually brought together again by their true love, the couple agree to become man and wife.

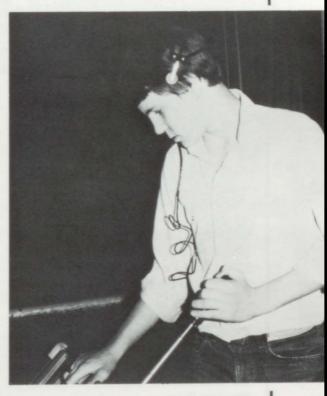

The second play, "Apples," was a brief but serious look at real life. It was about newly graduated students who tried in vain to find the apple tree of success. They found life outside of their protected environment more difficult than they had anticipated.

"If Men Played Cards as Women Do" was the third play. This was a satire about men portraying women as they play cards, or, should we say, as they gossip. And they find gossip more to their liking.

The final play of the evening was "A Day in the Mind of Tich Oldfield." This play took the audience through the day and daydreams of a young boy, Tich. His daydreams ranged from a talent show to a plane hijacking. Young Tich is the hero in all of the episodes.

The many hard hours contributed by the cast and crew proved to be worthwhile as the final night came to an end. The four oneacts proved to be another success for the drama department.

Without the assistance of Bryan Wilson on the lights and all of the people behind the scenes, the play production would never have been a success. As Tim Benge waits for a response, Rob Hauck dreams of his future plans with the money. Sitting this dance out, Jeff Stephens and Lisa Ragan watch O.G. Kourany and Dana Peters clown around. Taking part in the most popular dance of the evening are Sheila Bailey and Allen Harding.

Valentine Dance Revived in '82

An old tradition was rekindled as the Senior High Student Council planned and sponsored a Sweetheart Dance at the Plainfield Elk's Club. The room was decorated with festive Valentine fair and romantically lit by candlelight which further enhanced the atmosphere. Music was provided by the "4C's and Friends" which prompted the couples to sway to the music all night long. In addition, refreshments of all sorts were catered by the Elk's Club.

As couples' shyness began to be driven away, they danced and swayed to current songs as well as songs from the 40's and 50's. Slow dancing, square dancing, and "The Stroll" were perhaps the most popular of the evening to both the students and chaperones.

Each person who attended the event was asked to vote for a Sweetheart Couple. As the eleventh hour approached Mr. King presented the Couple, Laura Smith and Gene Margiotti, to those in attendance. Following the presentation, Laura and Gene danced to "Can I Have This Dance for the Rest of My Life" and were then joined on the floor for the remainder of the evening.

As a pleasant surprise to their evening, Gene Margiotti and Laura Smith are named King and Queen of the Sweetheart Dance.

Doing the twist, Don Heatherly and Anne Rogers enjoy the Sweetheart Dance.

Taking a break from the dance floor activities Todd Davis and Laura Ragan partake of the snack bar "goodies".

The dance floor quickly fills as couples sway to the music of the "4C's and Friends". Junior Susan Fancher and her date dance the night away.

Quakers Capture Sectional Crown In Two Overtimes

"Red Priders" came out in full force as the 1981-82 sectional weekend rolled around and Quaker spirits soared as everyone prepared for the approaching games. To roust the feelings even higher, an "awesome" pep session was presented on the Wednesday of the Plainfield-Avon clash. Mr.—Pacman—Teany (Waka-Waka) and his troop of video players cleverly acted out a skit mocking the popular video game which soon became our team's mascot.

The team was considered the underdog in the beginning, but this was soon dispelled as the Plainfield Quakers conquered the Avon Orioles in the first game of sectional play.

After Wednesday's success, Plainfield's enthusiasm mounted even higher for the Friday night game against Cascade. To send our team off to a victory, the pep band split in half and started at each end of the school; the band played the school song and picked up classes on the way to the gym for a pep rally. The raising of spirits was worthwhile because the Quakers triumphantly won against the Cadets in an exciting game.

As the final game arrived, Plainfield was so "psyched up", we just couldn't lose; we went on to defeat Brownsburg. Thus, Plainfield brought home a sectional victory and advanced to the regional games.

In Frankfort a loyal group of fans agonized as the Quakers lost by 1 point to the Clinton Prairie Gophers.

Eager Athletes Endure Almost Anything Goes

The traditional contest between the faculty and classes erupted as they met on the gym floor for the stiff competition of Almost Anything Goes. Each class boasted of individuals' strength, while the faculty boasted of slow and steady finesse. Thus with the competitive spirit in the air, the confrontation began.

The athletes endured such rigorous challenges as the football shoot, the marshmallow relay, the table-setting event, and the obstacle relay. Other mind-boggling events included the rope untying event, the maypole pyramid race, the pie-throw, the bunny-hop danceathon, and the torment of all torments—the dreaded buttball!! Certain events proved to be too demanding for specific classes. The inexperienced freshman class was particularly puzzled by the skill needed to compete in the unraveling of the maypole and the building of the pyramid. The slow, but learning, sophomores were at last clever enough to get their act together with the football shoot and triumph at a sure second place. The juniors were challenged by the marshmallow relay (Heaven only knows why—they were told not to eat before they came). Seniors, well let's just say they aren't as spry as they used to be.

With the competition over and the points tabulated, the class of 1983 was announced as the victor.

The senior tug-of-war team, a bunch of "featherweights" put together at the last minute, seem to be having fun even though they are outweighed. They are Rita Kirtley, Bryan Sturgeon, Becky Dykins, Marty Williams and Jenny Taylor.

Sporting dark sunglasses as part of his umpire attire is Mr. Teany. His expert opinion is necessary to settle the dispute between Jim Cox and the freshman catcher. Holding on for life is freshman stretcher girl Dawn Duffer.

"Give me that hat!" exclaims Katrina Gilbert as she tries to gain another point for the junior team.

Field Day Tops Year for Seniors

Friday morning dawned bright and students were eager for the rivalry that would soon clash on the football field—then it rained. As a result the big event was moved to the following Monday, a day which turned out to be as sizzling as the events.

Included besides those old favorites of the stretcher race, the hat chase, the threelegged race, the obstacle course and the tugof-war were a new variety of softball and a blanket toss basketball, neither of which proved easy.

Senior John Hadley was surprised to discover just how bloody the hat chase could become, but he also was pleased to see that he garnered all sorts of sympathy from the girls. Overall, he decided it wasn't really too bad. Probably the most terrifying part of the day was being carried on the stretcher by four people who cannot chew bubble gum and walk—let alone run—at the same time. At least that is Dawn Duffer's version of sheer terror.

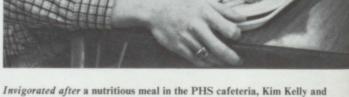

By the end of the day the seniors had salvaged their honor by winning and forced the others to retain their places with juniors second, sophomores third and freshmen fourth.

Seniors Greg Nay and Hanna Lassila practice for the rugged competition in the three-legged race.

Every Friday— Pizza & Fries!

One of the most important times in a student's daily schedule was lunch; figuring out from the pink schedule if you ate at 11 or 12 was as important as whether you had first period free. As soon as the bell rang, everyone rushed to the lunchroom, although, once there, many chose to stand outside and play "pinball," watch (and help) the construction process, or use the phone. Others tried to con the hall monitors into letting them go somewhere on "really important business" and thus gained a half hour to roam.

Those who entered the cafeteria doors were greeted by Type A, Quaker Specials, Red Pride Specials, and—every Friday—pizza and fries! Green beans and French fries were favorites, but not to eat: they supplied ammunition for junior war games. Amidst this dramatic situation lurked Mr. Muston, scouting and patroling the line for the unseen cutter.

Inevitably, though, the bell rang. Trash was dumped, trays replaced, books grabbed from the nearby shelves, and the cafeteria was abandoned for another day.

Belles et Beaux, Madrigal Singers Burst on Scene in '82

The 81-82 year for Belles et Beaux began almost as soon as the 80-81 school year ended. At the start of vacation plans were made for massive fund raising projects. The money was used to ship the whole crew to BayView, Michigan, for a week of intensive rehearsals and general fun-in-the-sun.

During that week the group completely learned and choreographed a medley of songs to take to the Bishop Leurs Invitational during choir competition in late February. In the meantime, the medley was the highlight of many performances given during the first semester.

When November came around, Mr. Sims held auditions for the madrigal singers. For the first time in many years, Belles et Beaux were not automatically the madrigal singers, although they were the backbone for that group. The madrigal season was very productive with many small, private performances and a madrigal dinner at a church in Indianapolis. The madrigal group also did well at district contest but, unfortunately, poorly at the state level.

Spring brought Belles et Beaux back to life with participation in the Beech Grove Swing Choir Festival and final preparations for the Bishop Leurs contest.

Apart from the BayView trip, Bishop Leurs was the biggest event for the group in 81-82. The singers, band, stagecrew and chaperones piled into a school bus and drove up to Fort Wayne the evening before the contest.

The Belles et Beaux were the first to perform the next morning. Feelings were mixed about their performance, but those were soon numbered by the hotel whirlpool. Although the group did not make it to the championship singoff, rumors that they had placed 9th out of 20 buoyed their spirits. A few weeks later, however, it was discovered that the Belles et Beaux had placed 16th.

The year wrapped up with a few private performances but most importantly Sensation 82, the Belles et Beaux's annual variety show. The show was incredible—almost flawless. Sensation 82 closed out this year's events for the Belles et Beaux, but with spring auditions and preparations for next year, the Belles et Beaux cycle continues.

The Miracle of Brigadoon

To pass the time from Christmas break to spring break this year I committed myself to Brigadoon, the spring musical of 1982.

The whole wonderfully fulfilling experience began with auditions: a week of shattered nerves, fear, terror, happiness, disappointment and other emotions. During this week those eager to be in the show were asked to sing and dance and read from the script. To shorten this part of the story I'll just say that the cast was chosen and I got a nice part and made an oath to myself to do a good job.

To do a good job I found it necessary to attend rehearsals. During these rehearsals we would learn what we were supposed to do. It was advisable to write this information in one's script so as not to forget it. However, I did not write it down, either because I thought it would stifle my creativity or I was just too lazy.

Rehearsals sailed along until the production got terribly behind schedule. By an actual Act of God our basketball team was very good this year. They did so well that they went to Regionals, delaying Brigadoon one week and giving us extra time to perfect our show.

And perfect it we did, or at least we made it really good. The only problems experienced during the two performances involved a few missed light cues, overturned milk carts, and more missed light cues.

I think the cast and crew will agree with me wholeheartedly when I say that Brigadoon was an experience we all went through. And we loved every minute of it! —A Cast Member

Amid a cascade of balloons couples enjoy the free food and festivities of the post-prom.

The group Double Exposure provides the musical entertainment for couples to dance the night away.

Prom Time, for Just the Two of Us

The prom was held at the Egyptian Room of the Murat Temple again this year, an immense room tastefully appointed with a cascade of pastel decorations, a centerpiece with the "Just the Two of Us" theme couple adorned each table. Punch, cookies, and cake were served from a lavishly decorated table in the corner of the ballroom.

Lively music was furnished by Double Exposure, who effectively alternated slow and fast songs. Slow songs were, of course, the most popular to dance to, and as each began, the dance floor quickly filled.

Students spared no expense to make the evening a classy one. Tuxedos and elegant gowns in complementing shades were everywhere; the hoop skirt fashion in a variety of colors had been renewed for the evening: wrist corsages and boutonnieres added the finishing touches.

After the prom, couples headed for the gym to take part in the activities of postprom. The carnival-like atmosphere proved appropriate; it provided the mood for all to relax and enjoy free food, fun and games. Thus, the 1982 prom weekend was a spectacular event for students at PHS.

Seniors Nich Waltermire and Lori Kesterson sway to the slow music which prompted couples to fill the ballroom floor.

Fads Hit PHS: "Awesome,"

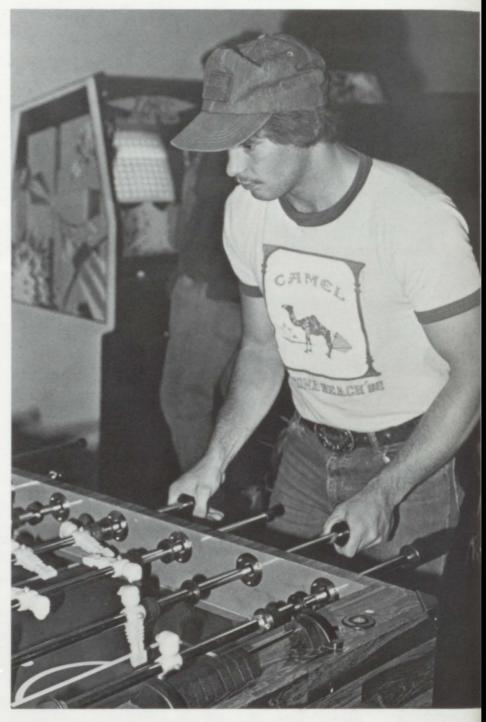

A surge of fads, fashions, popular places to go, "in" things to do, and a widespread liking of Garfield hit students at PHS with full force velocity this year. Being bombarded from all sides with every imaginable product and pasttime, students kept busy each and every day.

The fads which became a mania in 1981-1982 were those of manipulative games. These were produced in an array of sizes, shapes, and colors such as Rubik's Cube, Missing Link, Pyraminx, and Snake. In desperation, the puzzle-solver would go to extremes while finding the solution and viciously attack the cube by taking it apart or reeling it against the wall. At any rate, the puzzles were intriguing as well as entertaining.

With the changing times, new fashions came on the scene. Winning dress combinations of all sorts were popular. Lace, high collars and ruffles, a more feminine aspect, were well-liked as well as bold, sailor stripes. Knickers, which underwent a brief popularity in the 40's and then again in the late 60's, were dragged out again, proving that fashions do run in somewhat of a cycle. Boys kept up with the times by sporting designer clothes.

PHS students of 81-82 bombarded the widely acclaimed places to which everyone went. Game rooms all over the west side swelled from the patronage of video addicts. In addition, going out to the movies seemed to be a pasttime of which more students took advantage. The mythological-adventure movies were very popular; Raiders of the Lost Ark took the place of the most renowned movie of the year. As springtime infected the students, going to Florida and going to the Journey concert were events which were uppermost on the minds of all.

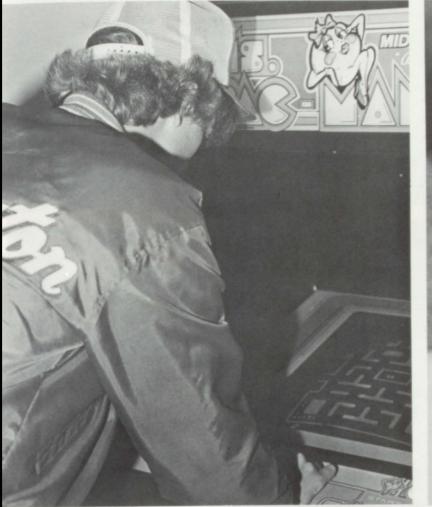

The most "in" thing to do in 81-82 was to play the video games. Space Invaders, Frogger, Defender, and the infamous Pac-Man were games which quickly became recontinued on page 52 nowned as hordes of people hovered over the machines and their opponents. If one word had to be chosen which was 81-82's all-purpose word, it would most definitely be "awesome." Anyone anywhere at anytime could be awesome.

The hottest novelty item produced were those of that notorious cat—Garfield. Garfield's popularity stemmed from Hoosier Jim Davis' cartoon strip character. Students could purchase products ranging from tshirts to desk sets with Garfield insignia smattered upon them.

Soap operas reigned as victor when it came to deciding the most popular TV programs. General Hospital was the favorite daytime soap, as Dynasty became the favorite on nightime. At any rate, night soaps were as popular as the traditional daytime.

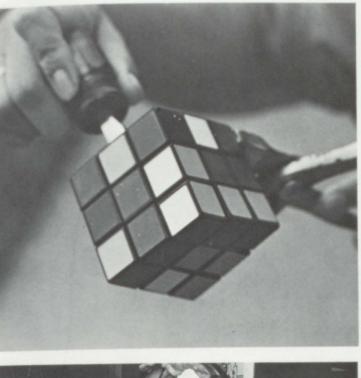

Every student somewhere along the way during 1981-82 at PHS was influenced by the fads which made this year unique.

Yogi's Place, local video game hangout, attracts many students long into the evening hours; quarters slip through fingers like sand as game after game draws the fans in.

Awards Memories

The annual awards night ceremony represented the culminative successes which members of the class of 1982 had achieved throughout their course of study at PHS. Students were awarded medals and certificates for excellence in major areas of study throughout the curriculum as well as four year student awards. Athletic scholarships based on sportsmanship and skill were also given to members of various sports teams. Local organizations, sororities and businesses encouraged students to further their education by giving them financial incentive in the form of scholarships. The amount of financial awards presented on awards night was one which has not ever, in Plainfield's history, been surpassed; the total sum was $54,000. Certificates of merit were also presented to the high achievers. In addition, the Senior National Honor Society presented cowls to the valedictorian and salutatorian as they were the highest scholastic-standing students. The society also distributed gold cords to senior members to commemorate their high achievements.

In addition to the presentation of awards, a very moving slide show was shown for the class history part of the program. The show included scenes from homecoming, student life, and the victorious sectional win. By adding a stirring musical background and using progressive slides, the overall effect was one which brought tears to the eyes of all who were present. Thus, the evening allowed awards to be presented as well as memories to be made.

A Look At The Past—Future

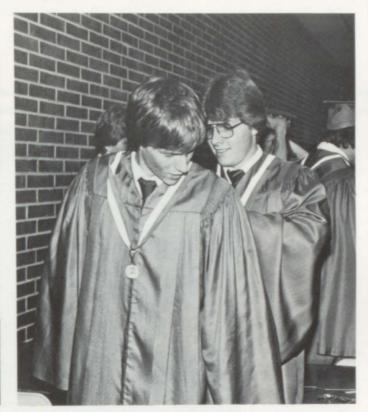

With the turning of the tassels the class of 1982 became alumni. Their futures are just beginning-new lives that hold college for some, work for others, and many other lifestyles. As the graduates begin to look back they will see that their class was a very special one to a great many people. The class of 1982 was not always victorious, yet they were always there to care and lend a hand. Their school spirit and loyalty has been unequaled in the minds of many. The final night of float building, as also many other final nights, brought tears of love and laughter to the circle of seniors who had joined hands in symbolism of their closeness and love for one another. The unity of the class of 1982 has hopefully brought strength and happiness to all those who were lucky enough to have been touched by them. In an odd way, even the school itself seems to be changing in silent honor of how these newly born adults will soon be changing their lives into the future that they so deeply deserve and cherish.

Involve Students in PHS Life

Rubik's Cube Della Rogers tries the fondue dip during the French Club Halloween party.

No matter what activities you felt suited you, there always seemed to be a club or organization that would take you in and make you a full-fledged member.

Some of the groups provided lots of activity through the year such as the Thespians, who were expected to work on every school production. Others, like National Honor Society, concentrated mostly on formal affairs such as their initiation and their dinner. This year it did seem as if all the clubs from OEA to Sunshine Society were selling everything from chocolate Santas to Homecoming mums in order to have enough funding for an end-of-the-year dinner. Between the never-ending parade of fattening dinners, there was also time for plenty of other activities. Many of the activities were school related and widely acclaimed such as the Sweetheart Dance, but others were basically unseen by most of the students here at PHS; for example, Student Council used much of their candy profit to outfit and buy toys for a needy family, and Sunshine went carolling at the local nursing homes.

No matter how much time is spent on these activities and quite often it is many hours—it is plain to see that it is all part of the fun side of being a student at PHS.

After taking the sectional victory with his winning shot, senior Brad Reno turns to share his moment of triumph with teammate and friend Carl Bennett.

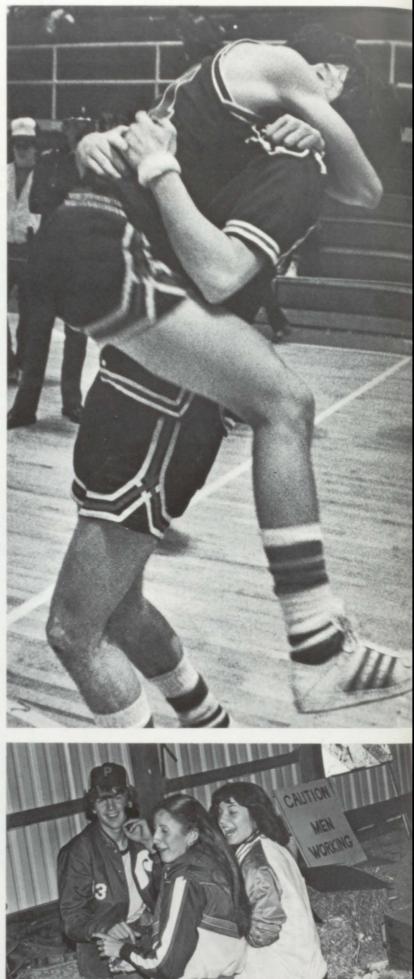

Juniors Vikki Richardson and Stacy Rushing make the most of a Halloween party's festivities.

Congratulating the newly elected Homecoming queen, Annette West hugs her friend Shelley Brown.

Trying to keep from having to work on the float are juniors Steve Pennington, Jenny Stephens, Becky Collier.

Enjoying a laugh, senior Jenny Taylor takes time out of acting class to chuckle over someone's antics.

Friendship: A Quaker Club

Well, if you didn't consider yourself a part of a club this year at PHS, you just didn't consider all of the facts. Perhaps, PHS could be considered a special club whose students are all members. As the days of '82 were numbered, there was a general feeling of closeness and friendship among those who spent the year together. From float building to graduation many activities helped strengthen bonds of friendship both within the classes as well as in the entire student body. There were times when it was great just to sit around and gab with friends during float building, and there were times when getting together for a cookout at Halloween in somebody's backyard was something really special. Clowning around with friends at powderpuff certainly created memories, and laughing at the good joke in class always stirred a giggle. And, of course, there were friendships formed through events such as the sectional victory.

Even if PHS doesn't really have a "Quaker Club" as such, there is still a group of friends in PHS called the student body.

Relaxing during float building, seniors Pam Lilly, Hanna Lassila talk with Dave Maloney.

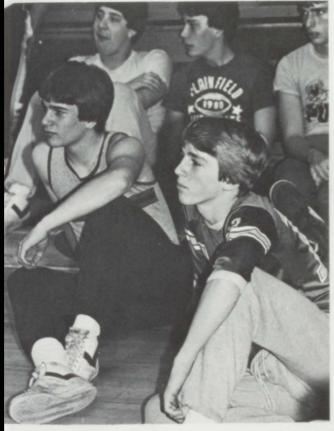

Being friendly, Ron Bailey douses fellow classmate at the junior car wash. Would you like to sit by a friend like Brian Smith at lunch? Displaying support for the sophomore team are Kolleen Schoen, Lisa Patterson, and Shawn Rogers.

In the fall play produced by Drama Club, Juli Johnson acts out her part as a teacher. During Almost Anything Goes, co-sponsored by Student Council and FCA, Debbie Daum instructs Dave Crowe in the table-setting event.

Dishing up delightful food at the Honor Society dinner is Laura Smith, the group's treasurer.

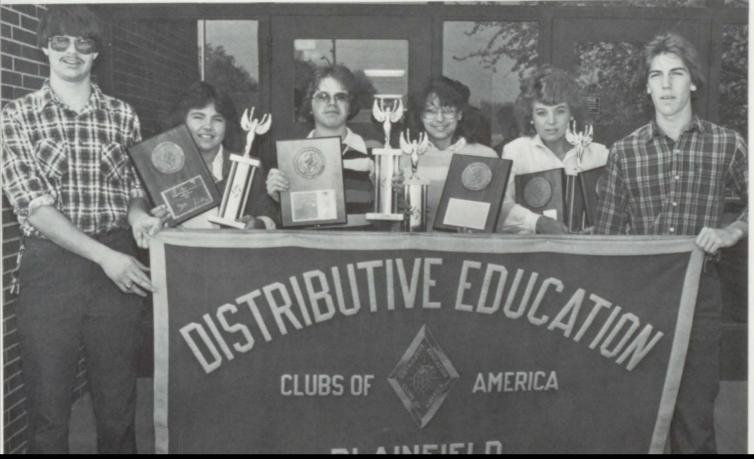

DECA award winners Mike Hatfield, Kim Patton, J.R. Mauck, Liz Madison, Jan Stremming, and Greg Burdsall hold up their awards which they won in District competition. In an attempt to provide musical entertainment, Colleen Costello and Nancy Eccles make the china sing.

Recognize Our Talents

The Honor Society, Student Council, DECA, Drama Club, Thespian Society, and the Speech and Debate Team all have something in common: their members need to be recognized.

In their own individual ways, each club provides helpful experiences for its members. The Honor Society recognizes leadership and scholastic achievement in its members: Student Council encourages leadership and service in the students selected to membership. DECA emphasizes business knowledge through actual working experiences in the communicating. The Drama Club and Thespian Society promote acting as a means of communicating. The Speech and Debate Team travel to contests in central Indiana high schools on Saturday mornings and display their talents of persuasive and objective speech. Thus, students at PHS possess many talents which are brought out and recognized in these clubs. The clubs encourage the students to stand up and demand recognition of their talents!

Publications Flourish at PHS

Deadlines, copy, layouts, cropping, grease pencils, type sheets, etc., etc., etc. These words are ever so familiar to the students involved in PHS's two publications, Silhouettes and RSVP. The year for the Silhouettes' staff started early. In fact, it started with journalism workshop at Ball State University. Here editors, photographers, and business managers alike learned the tricks of the trade. But workshops were only the start. Once the year started there was the problem of raising the funds to cover the immense cost of the special effects in the '82 Silhouettes. Staff members spent their Wednesday afternoons as well as countless Saturdays writing, designing and putting together " '82 In Plain Sight." Yes, some hardy staff members even got up early for two weeks after school was out to wrap up the loose ends.

Throughout the year, from the first issue to the last with the senior wills, the RSVP newspaper staff was busy. Once each issue of the quarterly RSVP was gathered it was shipped off to the local newspaper, The Flyer, to be printed.

And of course how could the camera club be forgotten? They spent time taking pictures for both the yearbook and newspaper. Not stopping there, they also developed and printed the photos.

Much hard work and many long hours were put in on both publications, but the time and effort paid off when the publications were finally down in print.

R.S.V.P. Editor Robin Uhls diligently works in order to finish the last edition of the school newspaper. Fall Open House is always highlighted by bake sales of exotic foods; Laura Smith and John Smith prepare German, French, and Spanish foods to sell.

Dressed in costumes, Della Rogers, Teresa Hensley, and Kathy Costin feast at the French Club Halloween party held at the Hickam's home.

As Halloween night progresses, French Club sponsor Mrs. Joan McAllister talks with Cyndy Bridwell while Debby Hickam checks on food and supplies.

Sharing conversation at the Sunshine Ideal Ladies Tea are Monique Hamby, Mrs. Jackie Carrigan, and Juli Johnson. The Tea ends a year of secret gift exchanges.

Turning around, Jeni Estes chats with Rick Ward and John Thatcher at the Spanish Club dinner at ChiChis.

Food and Fun

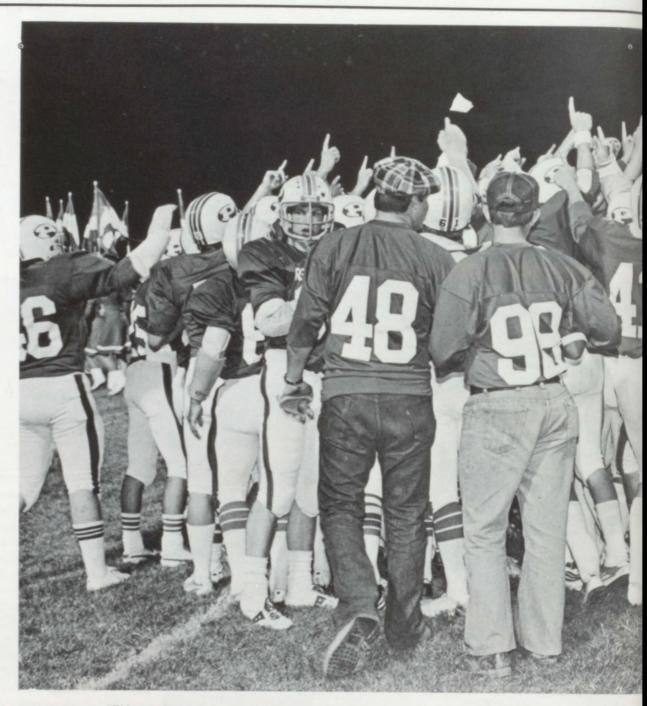

A club is formed for its members to gather and share business, talk, and fun. What better way is there than to assemble at a restaurant, cafeteria, or someone's house for a party?

The foreign language clubs shared much food and talk on their many field trips and meetings, which just happened to be at places such as ChiChis and Paramount Pizza Palace.

The Sunshine Society and Future Homemakers of America consumed their portion of food, also. SSS had their annual dinner for the ideal ladies to meet their Sunshine girls at the Elks Club. FHA was often on the other end by hosting bake sales and producing many delicious foods. Food sales at the Fall Open House and all year long by many groups from Student Council to the cheerleaders (M&Ms were always available) boosted club treasuries.

Food and fun have come to be associated with each other by many of PHS's clubs. It's plain to see: food and fun go together.

SPORTS

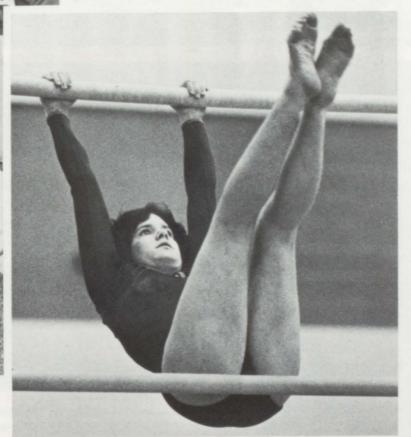

"We're number one!" chants the varsity football team as they chalk up another victory.

PHS's Winning Combination

You leaned forward, for the last time you hoped, as the clock ticked down the remaining time. When there were only a few seconds left, you began to hold your breath, thinking that it surely couldn't go on any longer. Suddenly Reno went up for a shot from under the basket, the buzzer sounded the end of the second overtime, and the scoreboard showed the Plainfield Quakers as winning the 1982 Sectional championship. With one wave of excitement you surged onto the floor with the crowd and enveloped the team and yourself with enthusiastic pride.

Not every moment in Plainfield sports is quite as exciting as this year's Sectional win, but you were all winners in your own ways. Whether you were part of the Mid-State Conference champion football team, the state-ranked undefeated girls swim team, the individual who went to state competition, or the most important sector—the fans—you never let go of your Red Pride.

You learned this year that you can't always be victorious, but that it takes more stamina and courage to keep up the spirit that is PHS when you've lost than when you've won.

Sophomore Lisa Frisbie concentrates as she competes on the uneven bars.

Warming up the football team and the crowd, the band plays energetic songs throughout the home-coming pep session.

Varsity cheerleader Colleen Costello, a cheerleader of five years, skillfully leads students, teachers, and parents through games and pep rallies.

During basketball season, pep band members keep their taste buds and vocal chords on the move between instruments and lollipops.

The varsity and reserve cheerleaders have an endless supply of energy and get the enthusiastic crowd on their feet, cheering their basketball players on to a sectional victory.

Cheerleaders and Pep Band: Crowd Energizers

Varsity and Reserve cheerleaders keep spirits soaring with cheers of encouragement and victory. Senior Debby Daum, an active member in pep band, plays during one of the season's many games.

One of the many responsibilities of playing in the band is being a member of the pep band. As participants, students played at basketball games and kept the rhythm and tempo fast and exciting. They helped "fire up" the team, cheerleaders, and crowd with pre-game songs like "Sweet Georgia Brown." Throughout the game, the notes of "CHARGE" could be heard as fans readily responded to the band's energetic chords. Cheerleaders collaborated with the pep band during basketball season and with the marching band during football season.

In the summer, way before school started, the cheerleaders were practicing and preparing to compete in cheerleading competitions. They went to camp and got back just in time to participate in the Hendricks County Fair Cheerleading Competition. The Varsity squad received first place for the second year in a row. The Reserve put on a good performance as well.

When school started, the cheerleaders were going strong, bearing with the cold to cheer the Quaker football team to a Mid-State Conference victory.

Cheering wasn't all the girls did. They also conducted a cheerleading clinic, sold candy, and decorated the gym and the players' and coaches' homes.

At the sectional games, the cheerleaders played an important role in psyching up the team for their sectional victory. The cheerleaders then led an enthusiastic crowd to regionals in Frankfort, where spirits were high and Plainfield's pride showed through. All in all, this year was an exciting one for the cheerleaders, one they will never forget.

ENTHUSIASM: The Key to Successful Football

Finishing their season with an even number of wins and losses, the performance of the varsity football team kept the spectators enthusiatic throughout the season. The team always carried hope and confidence in their hearts, even through those few cold and rainy nights. When the faithful fans were sure they were frozen, there would be a burst of energy from the players that started everyone's blood moving again and made sitting on the icy cold aluminum bleachers well worth the suffering. The onlookers could only guess at the great feeling a player must have had when he was sitting on the bench and the coach yelled out his name. However, the energy as that player ran out onto the field could be felt by the whole crowd.

The reserve team had an outstanding record this year that will carry with them onto the varsity team. The freshmen football team also gave an excellent performance for their first year in high school. Those boys who will move up to the reserve team next year and wear our school colors once more will again reflect the pride Plainfield has for all of its football teams.

After a fumble recovery by PHS the players cheer as the referees make their decision for Plainfield. Football definitely has its ups and downs, but the cheers of the loyal crowd and the "awesome" pride of the community as well as the teams make playing football a reward in itself.

Outstanding Senior Player Greg Nay is seen above speaking to the student body at the homecoming pep session. In his third and final year of football at PHS, Greg led the defensive squad in the number of tackles obtained.

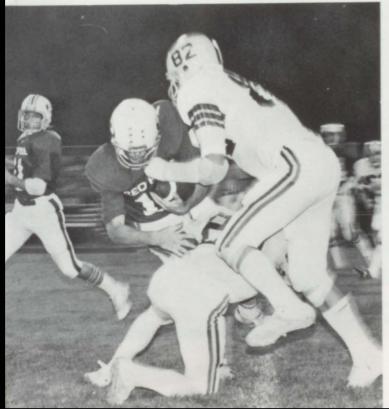

Making the turn to head down field, Mark Jent dodges his opponent as teammate Mark Meyer comes to his assistence.

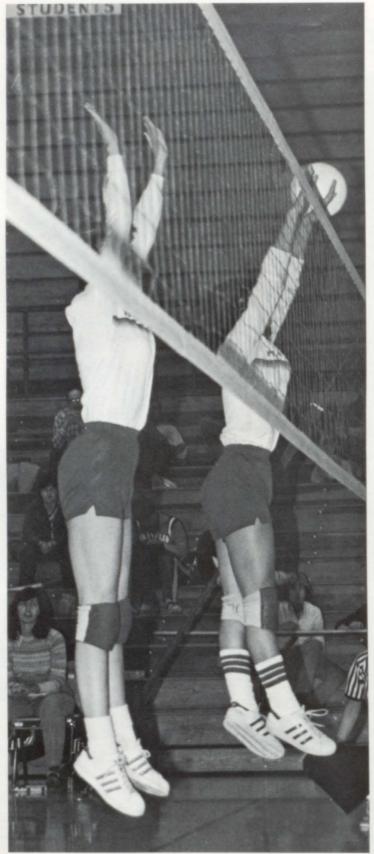

Sophomore quarterback Brent Edwards passes over his opponent's head to a receiver down field for a Plainfield score.

Full of enthusiasm, the varsity football players keep their eyes on the game.

After making an interception and gaining yardage for Plainfield, the reserve player is tackled as he heads down field.

Spectators hold their breath as the varsity team makes a double effort to block their opponent's return of the ball.

In a last minute attempt to save the ball, Tammy Asher dives underneath and successfully bumps the ball.

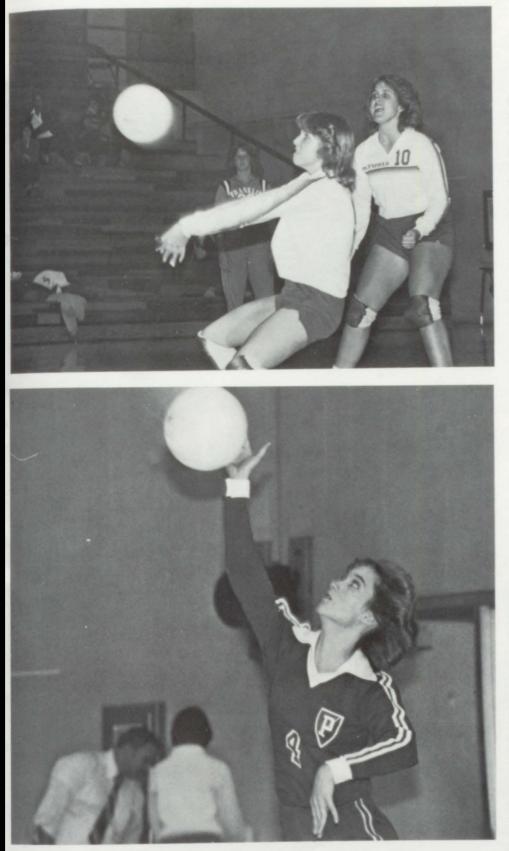

With a look of determination and a shout of encouragement from teammate Mary Cavett, Tami Toon bumps the ball to her opponents.

Being careful not to touch the net, reserve co-captain Kristi Heinrichs spikes the ball for a PHS point.

Spirit And Style Characterize Volleyball

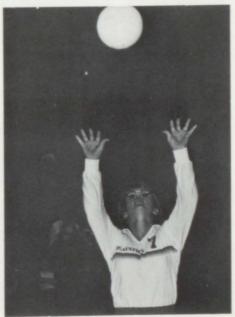

Sophomore Lisa Park spent long hours practicing fundamentals like serving so that she would be prepared for future games.

A three-year veteran of Plainfield volleyball, Debbie Heinrichs shows off her expert skill by perfectly setting the ball.

The volleyball team began to form during preseason tryouts when the girls practiced under the watchful eye of the coach. Before the teams were picked, the girls spent hours improving their basic skills of bumping, spiking, setting, and serving. The lucky girls who were selected then began a rigorous workoutmeeting every night for an hour and a half. Despite this strenuous schedule followed by Coach Massariu, the girls still considered her a great leader. Along with their overloaded practice schedule, the girls sometimes played up to three games a week. Many took homework along showing devotion for school as well as for the team.

The key word for the season was endurance. Whether they were winning or losing, excitement and energy were always in abundance. Even when a mistake was made, the team was in control and nearly always pulled on to a victory.

A big addition to the team this year was a set of new uniforms. These were well liked and gave an extra spark to team spirit. Each of the teams had its own setbacks, but they all pulled together and pulled through to end the season with impressive records.

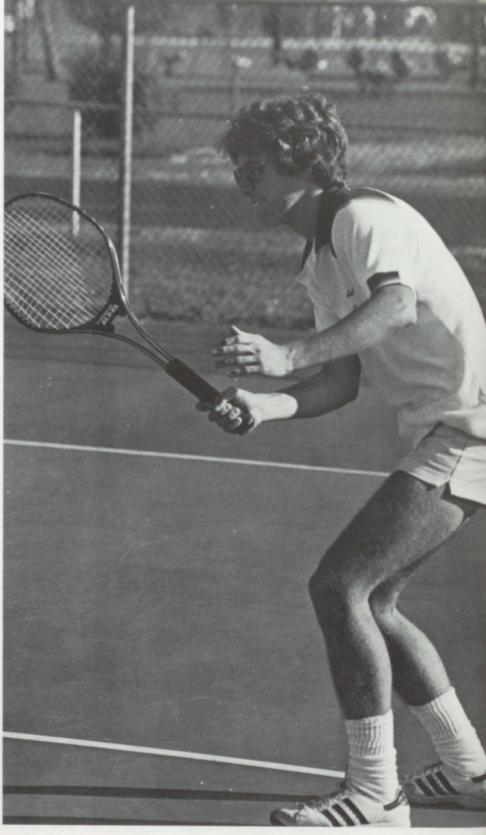

Tennis Team: Northwest Sectional Champs

In the early days of a hot and steamy August the boys' tennis team returned to the courts to ready themselves for the '81 season. Quickly acknowledging Coach Muston's directions with a crisp "Yes, sir!" the boys spent hours drilling on net practice. Even though they were interrupted by Hawk's occasional outbursts of self-disgust and the resultant exchange of words with the coach, the team's two to three hours of daily practice resulted in some winning combinations. Eggers and Fiscus made the Mid State finals in doubles and tied the school's record of 15-2. The team placed third overall in the Mid State and at Center Grove. Led by captain Gulley, who said he played better when he didn't have to wear the required shirt, etc., and Weaver, team members still found some extra time for their "Betty Lou's" (Muston's name for all girlfriends.) The season was completed with a good win-loss record and Gulley as MVP.

Although his form isn't perfect, it works well enough to give Most Valuable Player Kevin Gulley, an awesome senior year.

Team captain Mike Weaver awaits the arrival of the ball having decided that he is in the best strategic position.

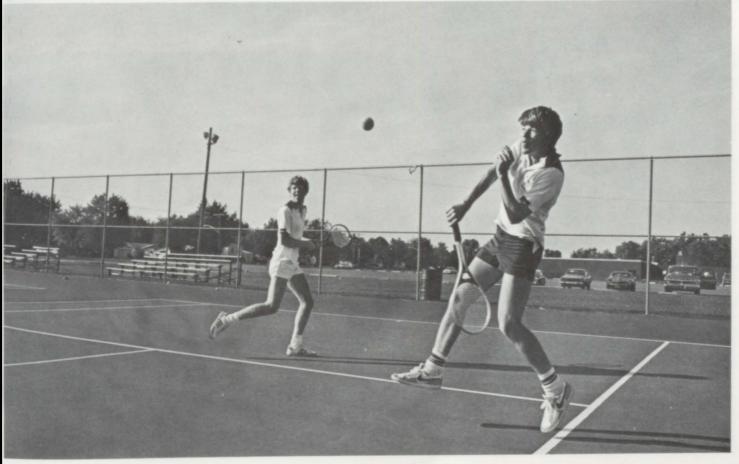

They may lack grace, but they are a great team as shown by the alert way in which Cobb runs to back his partner Clayton.

Demonstrating the correct way to hold the racket, Coach Muston actively involves himself with the team.

It takes hours of practice on the home courts for the doubles sensation of Eggers and Fiscus to perfect their winning style.

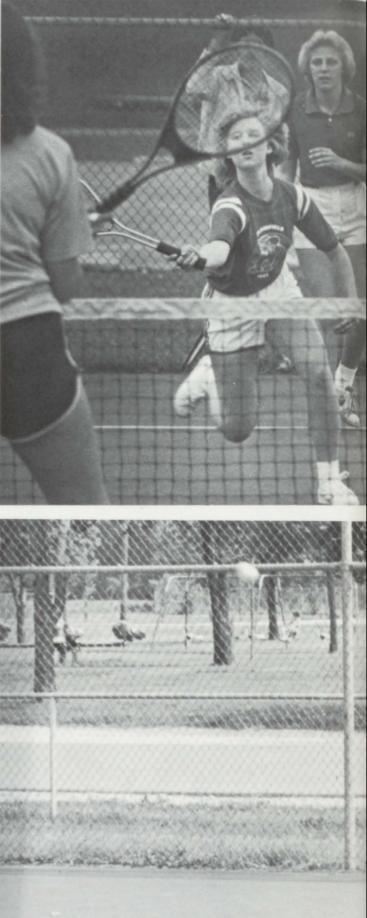

Displaying her agility, Lisa Roach shows the from that made the team victorious over its many opponents.

Running to the net to volley the ball is senior Pam Lilly whose doubles partner was Natalie Roach.

After hitting an excellent return, senior Dalene Tallent watches the ball head toward the back court.

Girls Tennis Team Agile Competition

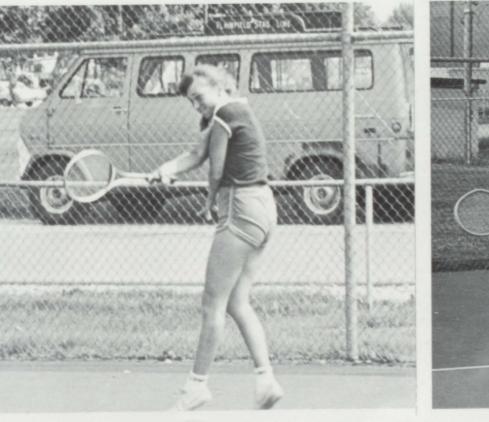

The girls' tennis team volleyed an even season and captured fourth place in Midstate competition. The number two position on varsity was filled by Norwegian exchange student Winnie Aslaksen. Her fellow seniors included Natalie Roach, Dalene Tallent, and Pam Lilly who received this year's Most Valuable Player Award. Returning varsity players will include Beth Markey, who held the number one singles spot in this year's lineup; Lisa Roach, who was the number three singles player; and Dana Peters, who occupied the number two doubles spot.

Although the team began the season with a great deal of rain and cold, not to mention the lack of player turn out, all of the members rallied together for an enthusiastic and eventful season.

Showing her singles ability, Natalie Roach returns the ball with a forehand swing.

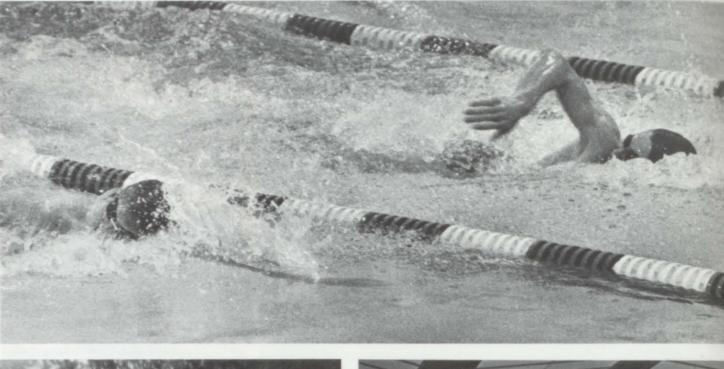

Practicing correct forehand form, Cyndy Bridwell puts in hours after school and Saturday.

Swimming laps was a necessary exercise that all members of the swim team were required to perform at the daily practices.

Exhibiting his infallible form in the front butterfly, Mike Fuller plunges onward toward his destination.

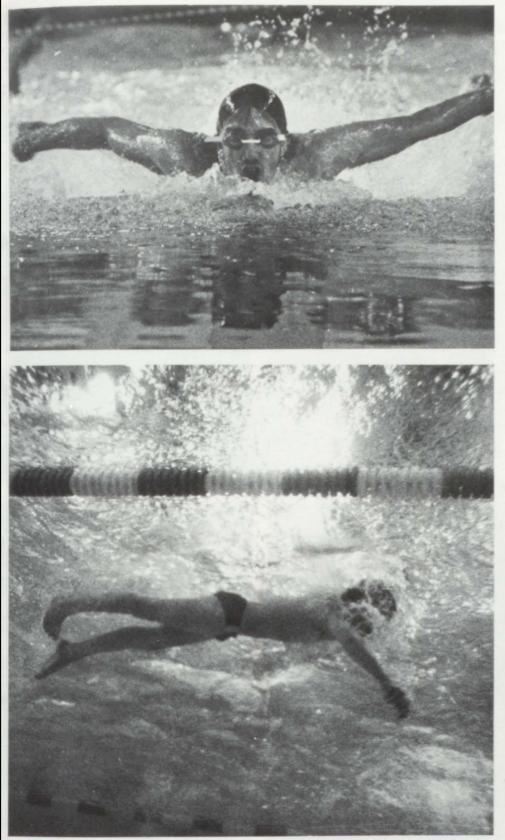

Determined to develop an exceptional style, the hurculean swimmers put in many long hours of practice that tested their own personal stamina.

Executing a perfect streamlined dive is sophomore Rick Clonce.

Boys Swim Through A Record Setting Season

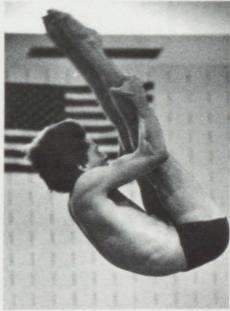

Succeeding in a victorious season was attributed to the coaching efforts and the individuality of each person participating in the group. The personal contributions of each member helped to hold the team together by giving them common hopes, fears, and dreams.

The boys' swimming team had a very successful year that was illustrated by their eleven and four record. The seniors who have participated for the past three years completed their careers with an awesome record of thirty-six wins and only nine losses.

The team showed their style by ranking high in all of their invitationals. In county, the team placed second; in sectionals, fifth; and at Beech Grove, third. The boys were led by captains Kevin Lansberry, Jared Herdey, and Neal Turner. The Mental Attitude Award was given to Herdey, and Most Valuable Player was given to Scott McLeish. Taking his Red Pride with him, Rex Murat went to State in diving competition and brought back the eighth place award. Mike Fuller was Sectional runner-up in the butterfly and new records were set by Tom Nichols, who got 1:02.7 in the 100 yard backstroke, and Rex Murat, who got the six dive record with 418.

Twelve incumbents will be returning next year, giving the team (and the school) a lot to look forward to.

After spending many long hours practicing to perfect his dives, Rex Murat was well rewarded with an eighth place in State Competition.

Undefeated Swimmers Place First In Sectionals

As a proud member of the girls' swim team, I can say that our 1981 season was an exciting one. Everyone worked hard and the whole team had a terrific attitude. The first high point was going to the county meet with an 11-0 record, and coming out with the County Title, defeating the former champs. We also set five records, breaking both the old county and pool records. Little did we know this was only the beginning of an even more exciting season which would leave us with a 15-0 record.

Throughout the remainder of the season, we managed to break every individual swimming event record and both school relay records. The medley relay record was set by Tracy Howard, Stacy Howard, Liz Tooher, and Shelley Brown. As a freshman, Stacy also obtained five other individual records: 200 freestyle, 200 individual medley, 50 and 100 yard freestyle, and the 100 yard butterfly. Tracy Howard accomplished the record in the 100 yard backstroke. Kelly Lansberry broke the 500 yard freestyle mark. We were fortunate this year in having an exchange student on our team. Liz Tooher from Australia added to the success of the team and added lots of team spirit as well as becoming the new holder ot the 100 yard breaststroke record. The 400 yard freestyle relay record is held by the team of Tracy and Stacy Howard, Kelly Lansberry and Shelley Brown.

The closest we ever came to defeat was the Zionsville Invitational where we were one of two undefeated teams. We managed to become the victors by beating Zionsville, Mr. Vernon, and Chatard.

For the remainder of the season we began to train intensely for the upcoming sectionals. An hour's morning practice was followed by a long after school practice. The many hours of practice paid off, however, when we defeated 11 other area teams and sent five members of our team to the State Finals at Ball State Univeristy. The sectional victory was only made possible because so many of the team members were able to place in the top twelve.

At State Finals Stacy Howard did exceedingly well placing eleventh in the 200 Individual Medley and ninth in the 100 yard butterfly. She also contributed her share to the 400 freestyle team of Howard, Howard, Lansberry, and Brown that placed eighth.

Having been a member of the swim team all four of my high school years, I can honestly say that this year was the best, not because of our undefeated record, but because of our team's spirit and unending enthusiasm. We had a great season, but we couldn't have done it without every girl on the team really doing her best.

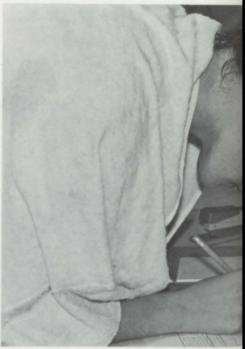

Shelley Brown, co-captain

First year member, freshman Kelly Lansberry not only supported the team through her skill, but through her encouragement as well.

An anchor of support for the 1982 team, Shelley Brown prepares for the start of another heat.

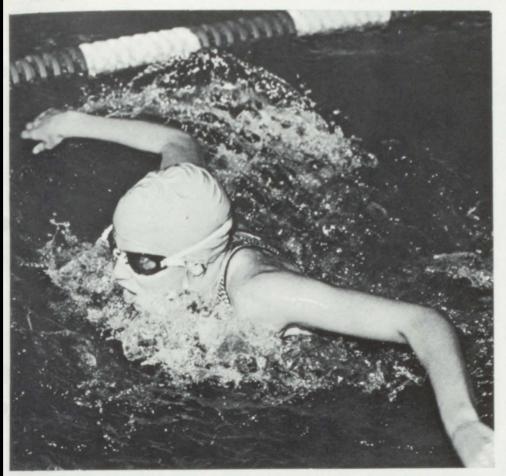

There is more to being a member of the team than just swimming. Girls also participate in keeping stats as Sheila Izor is shown here.

butterfly heat.

Is it a frog or just a sea monster? No, it's just one of the female swimmers surfacing for air in a practice extreme concentration as she executes a perfect dive.

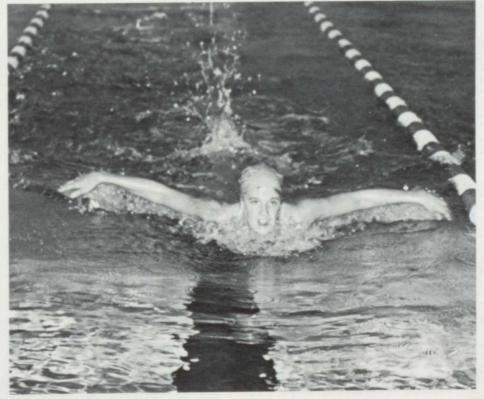

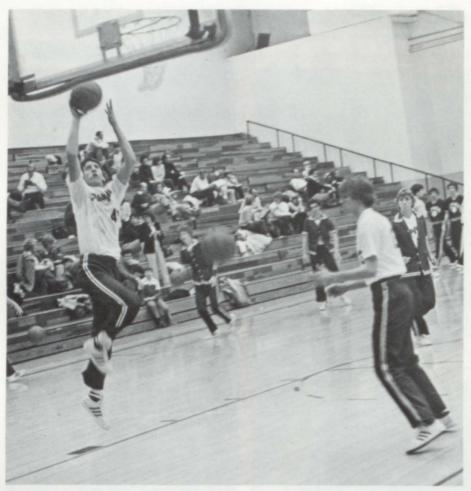

Showing us her unique style as well as a great amount of effort in the butterfly is senior cocaptain Della Rogers.

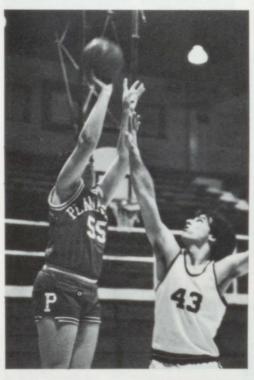

Taking their final twelve minutes before the game, the team concentrates on their warm-up to the tune of "Sweet Georgia Brown." The energy and enthusiasm of the team can be felt by the members of the crowd that are present to cheer our team on to victory.

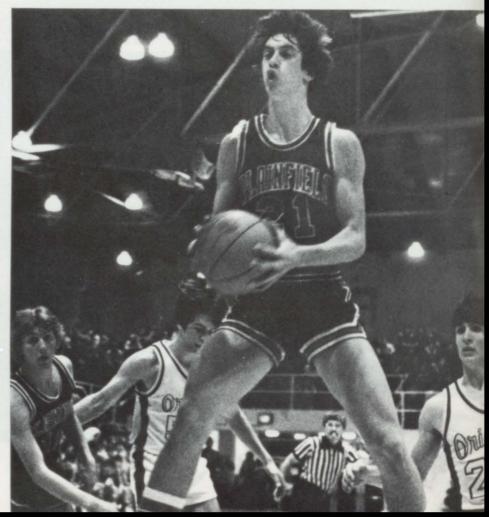

After the foul is called, Robb Thompson shoots his free throw with seven seconds left and our team leading by a narrow margin of two.

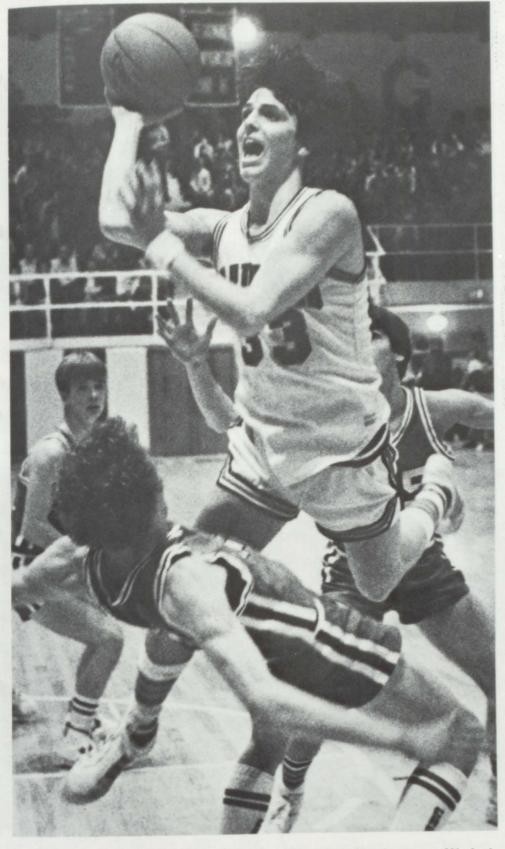

Attempting to score by shooting over his opponent's reach is freshman Keith Chesser.

Catching the ball while jumping into the air, senior Brad Reno saves the ball and keeps the play going.

Basketball: A New Coach And A Regained Title

Lunging over his competitor, Carl Bennett is willing to risk a foul for necessary team points.

Anxiously awaiting the outcome of his shot is Mike Muse, a junior on the varisty team.

The boys varsity basketball team's awesome success was due greatly to the enthusiastic efforts of the new coach, Larry Bullington. Bullington held the team together by giving added spirit and pride. The team won Sectionals against Brownsburg and came extremely close to winning over Clinton Prairie at Regionals. The players felt that Bullington was very easy to communicate with. The team was very excited to be getting a new, young coach. Brad Reno has a word of advice for reserve and freshman players: "Work hard while you can; it goes quick."

The freshman and reserve teams' coaches, Dana Greene and Jay Clapp, also gave great support to their teams with a lot of energy. The players felt Greene was very involved with them, and appreciated all of his added spirit. All the practice and hard work paid off as illustrated by very good records and an exciting year. Clapp felt the reserve team had many strong points, noting especially "their ability to play together as a team, and their very competitive attitude."

Spirit And Height Make Winning Combination

All of the girls' basketball teams worked vigorously at practices and games to achieve a winning coach-team combination. Their efforts were fruitful and made their seasons victorious. The final season records for the Quakers were: 8-11, Varsity; 9-5 Reserve; and 0-5, Freshmen.

Keeping the teams' momentum high and receiving the Mental Attitude Award was varsity player Pam Kincaid. The varsity team captains, Patsy Cox and Debbie Ferrell, led the girls through practices and games giving them an added burst of enthusiasm as well as someone to follow. Debbie was also chosen by her teammates as the Most Valuable Player.

Now that the Freshmen and Reserve teams have had necessary experience playing together as a team, they will have their remaining high school years to exercise that experience. A special thanks goes to the coaches of this year's team for their fine leadership and coaching abilities which they shared with the girls, and also to the girls who worked hard to make this a great season.

Anxiously looking around, senior Lauri Fletcher sheilds the ball, searching for a teammate to pass to.

Starting the game with a winning edge, junior Carol Tyler overpowers her opponent in the "jump ball".

Elevating herself above the floor and her opponents' reach, Toni Wilson aims skillfully for a basket.

Keeping a watchful eye for any interference, Debbie Ferrell dribbles expertly down the court.

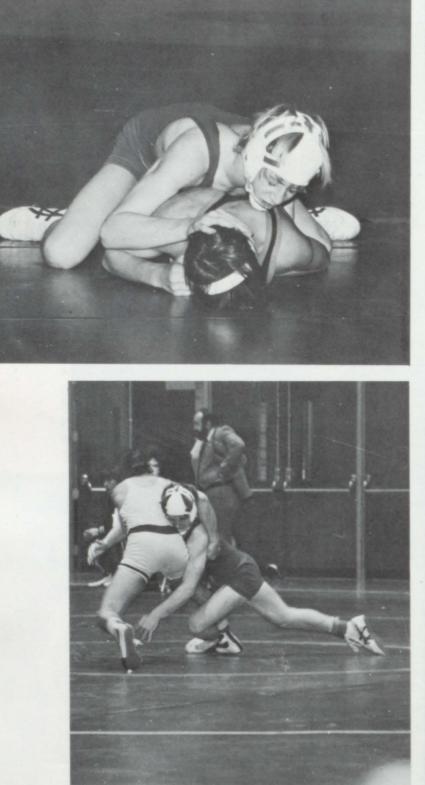

Closely guarded by her competitor, Kris Wash attempts to pass the ball. Lunging forward, Kristie Heinrichs hopes to retrieve the ball for a Quaker score over Whiteland.

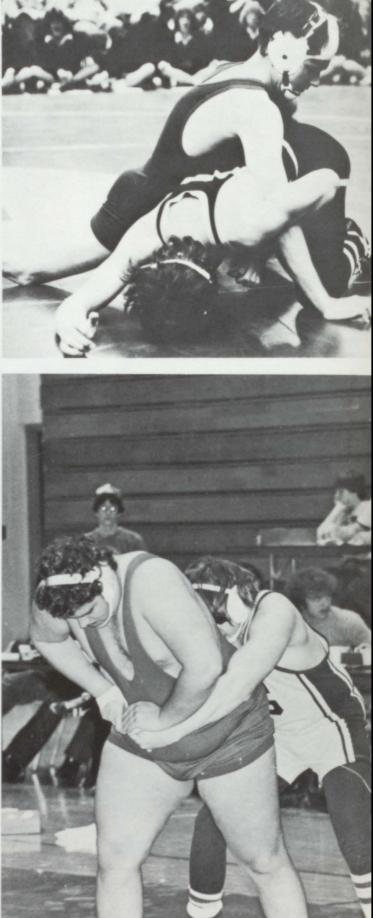

Using a half-nelson, sophomore Shawn Heald works to get his opponent turned over so that he can pin him for a win and team points.

Working his opponent, team captain Todd Nysewander attempts to get him onto his back to finish this match with a pin.

Fighting to pin his competitor, Junior McGugan, struggles to win his match.

Possessor of the greatest number of pins in a season, heavyweight David Casselman attempts to break his opponent's grip to take control and pin one more competitor.

Quaker Wrestlers Steal Coveted County Title

The 1982 Quaker wrestling team won the title of Hendricks County Champions for the second time in Plainfield's history. The team accomplished this by downing Avon (ranked twentieth in state). County Champions were Shawn Heald, Mike Smitson, Bryan Macek, and Brian Smyth. During the team's spectacular season, they defeated eighteenth-ranked Beech Grove, giving them enthusiasm, pride, and hope that encouraged them throughout the season. Captains Mike Smitson, Brian Smyth, and Todd Nysewander led the team on by claiming titles in conference competition.

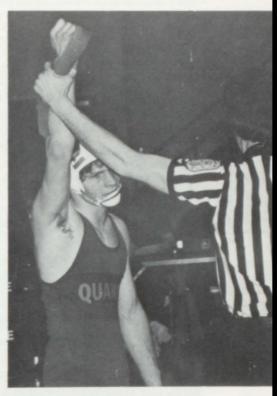

Receiving firsts at mid-state were Smyth, Heald, Smitson, and Dave Casselman. Plainfield proudly came home from sectionals with five members qualifying for regionals, (Heald, Smyth, Nysewander, Smitson, and Hughes). In regional competition, Smyth took first, and Heald took second, both qualifying for semi-state. Smyth went a step farther by taking a second and moving up to state competition at Market Square Arena, where he proudly placed in the top ten. The Mental Attitude Award was given to Tom Hawk, while the Most Valuable Player award went to Smyth. Chris Hughes had the most takedowns on the team this season, and Casselman had the most pins made by heavyweight in one season (thirteen). Smyth had the fastest pin, taking his opponent in thirteen seconds. Thanks to the coaching efforts, the team as a whole had an excellent season.

After being with the wrestling team four years, Mike Smitson has had the thrill of his hand being raised many times.

Gymnasts First at Northwest Invitational.

The 1981-82 Optional gymnastics season proved to be a good year for the Quaker gymnasts. This was the second year for Coach Mandy Farlow who brought to the team a change in ideas, stressing a possitive mental attitude and focussing on longer and harder workouts. One of the many ideas Miss Farlow emphasized was, "A team doesn't have to be big to be great."

The team really worked together this year, resulting in the team placing first at the Northwest Invitational and third in Sectionals. Lisa Frisbee and Lorene Wilk advanced on to Regionals. Lorene then went to State after receiving first on vault.

The Intermediate team also had a good year. Coached by Ann Minnich, four members of the team, Nicole Hamby, Lorene Wilk, Michele White, and Donna Wisehardt, also competed in Optional competition during the course of the season. Both teams worked together to end the season with a 6-5 Optional record and a 2-4 Intermediate record.

Coach Farlow feels that the team did exceptionally well in their competition against some of the top ten teams in the state. With the addition of a few new girls, and an improved schedule there are high hopes for an excellent season next year.

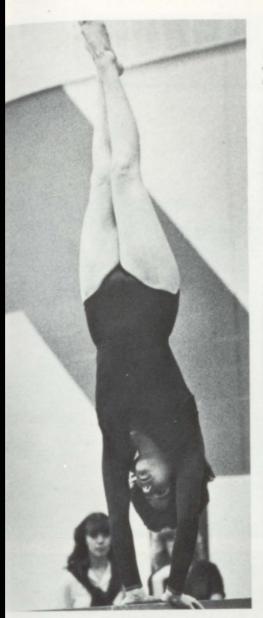

Proud of her performance, Shari Jensen grins with a sigh of relief that it's over.

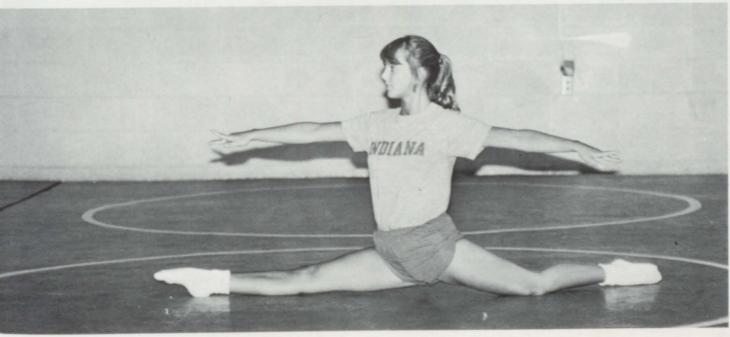

Junior Kathy Costin pays close attention to teammate Colleen Costello, who is concentrating extremely hard to get her moves perfected.

Trying to improve her floor routine, senior Lori Means practices splits.

The long hours of practice Lisa Frisbie put in paid off. She earned first place at Sectionals on the balance beam. Receiving congratulations from her opponent, Lorene Wilk accepts flowers for her successful exhibition at Regionals. She placed first in vault.

Sophomore Scott Blevins practices throwing shot-put to improve his distance for interscholastic competition.

Speeding towards the tape, Kevin Loechel finishes the last leg of the relay race victorious.

Agilely taking the hurdles in stride, junior Phil Lowery watches the next hurdle so he can be prepared to cross it.

Boys Track Team Claims Mid-State Title.

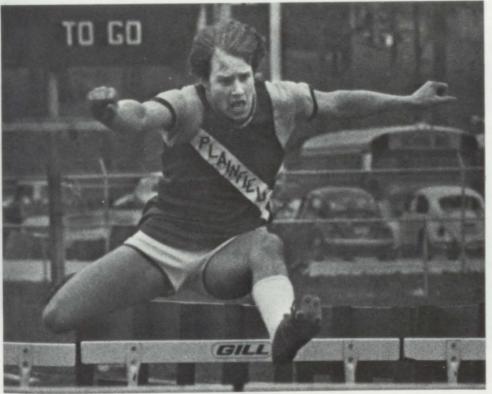

The boys track team ran through their 1982 season with enthusiasm, skill, and speed. Every member put forth extra effort, time and work in practice to end their season with a 6-5 record. As their season progressed the boys broke four school records: the 1600 and the 3200 yard runs and the 400 and the 1600 yards relays. Along with the girls, they took first place in Mid-State competition and second in County.

The varsity team lost two four-year members this year, Carl Bennett and Larry Lawson. Two other seniors took top honors as Dave Crowe was named Most Valuable Player, and Gene Margiotti was given the Mental Attitude Award. Although the team started the season slowly, Coach Teany felt that "the team improved greatly during the year. It was a very good season."

Clearing the bar in his practice high jump is senior Carl Bennett.

After making the crucial push off with the pole, Dave Crowe clears the high bar.

Girls Sweep Mid-State And County Honors

The girls Varsity Track Team got off to an exceptional start and continued their excellent track and field record throughout the spring season. Along with the boys track team, they captured first place at the Attucks Co-ed Invitational. From there, they continued down the road of success, becoming Mid-State and County champions. Advancing to Sectionals, the competition increased greatly, but the team endured and captured fourth place in the field of sixteen.

Plainfield's mark was left at meets in the form of new records and joyous cries of victory. New records were set this year in almost every event. Also, old county records were broken by Kristie Heinrichs (discus); Colleen Costello (high jump); Robin Banks (long jump); Katrina Gilbert, Lorene Wilk, Stacy Howard, and Denise Lowe (400 relay). Setting new records at Mid-State in Plainfield's name were Kristie Heinrichs (discus), and Hanna Lassila (1600 and 800).

It would not have been possible to break so many records if the girls hadn't had good teamleaders, team captains Colleen Costello and Robin Banks. Banks was named Most Valuable Player and Denise Lowe was given the Mental Attitude Award. Coaches Mandy Farlow and Jerry Carpenter both felt that the season was very successful.

Spotting the finish line senior Shelley Brown sprints to a victory.

Foreign exchange student Hanna Lassila, 1st place winner in the mile event at state level, outdistances all of her competitors.

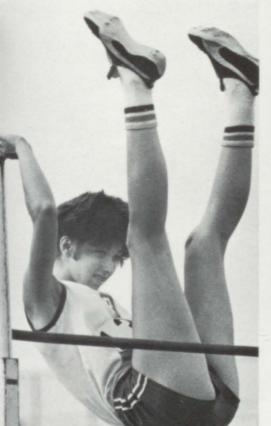

Crossing the finish line junior Katrina Gilbert sighs with relief.

Senior Robin Banks leaps to success for a victory for PHS.

With the hope of setting a new record, Kristie Heinrichs releases the disc.

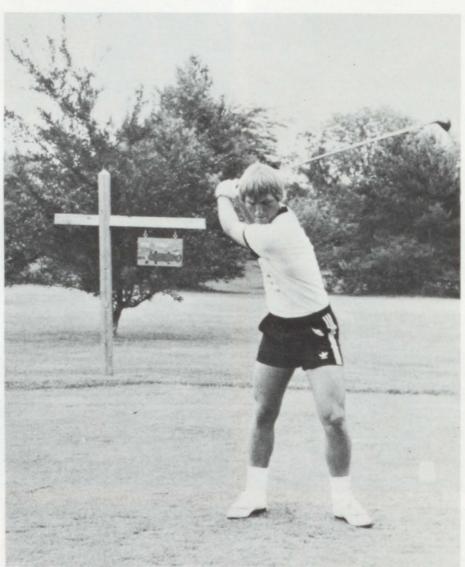

Smiling with joy, Colleen Costello sets another school record.

Hoping for a victory, Denise Lowe hands off the baton.

The Elks Club offered a relaxed atmosphere in which Bill Brocious could tee off in the spring sun.

The members of the golf team put in many hours practicing putting and other valuable strokes; Howie James is one of the five seniors that participated in games and practices.

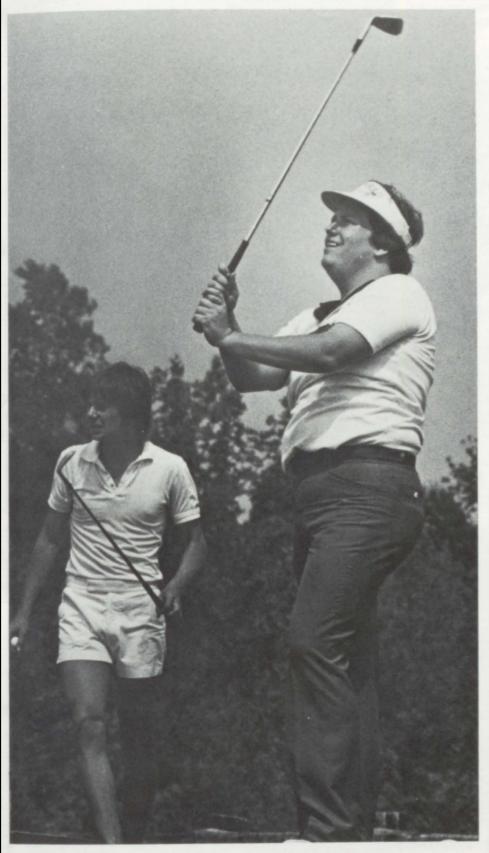

Leading other members of the P.H.S. team, Randy Chandler and Steve Foggatt are striving to pass the leader of the pack.

Golfers and Runners Prove Outstanding

Four-year member of the golf team, Jeff Miracle and his opponent watch as the ball heads toward its expected destination after an exceptional stroke.

Keeping his stride, sophomore Todd Schabel leads his opponent.

This year's golf team was led victoriously by coach Bruce Baker. They became first in county and second in sectionals. Bill Brocious was honored for having the best mental attitude, and Jeff Miracle was named Most Valuable Player for the year. Miracle was a Hendricks County and Sectional medalist. The five-member team consisted soley of seniors returning from past triumphant seasons. In the past four years, the team has had 68 wins and gone to regionals three years in a row. Coach Baker said, "I'm gla@ I worked with them (the players); they have been good golfers. It's been fun."

Baker also coached boys and girls cross country. Running cross country required much endurance and stamina. The running is long distances of steady fast-paced competition. Team members endured long hours of practice. They ran countless numbers of miles before each meet so they would be prepared for any opponent they would meet. Defeating many runners from various parts of the state, Hanna Lassila went into state competition and emerged with third place honors. She represented Plainfield's ability to conquer any odds with practice and perseverance. Many of the team members will be returning next year, ready to experience all of the sore muscles from practice and victorious meets again.

Hey Opponent, 1-2-3 strikes—You're Out

The 1982 baseball season swung into play with early morning practices for pitchers and catchers. The endurance and ability they gained through these sessions allowed them to achieve the most strike outs on one season.

The team captains, Dean Eggers, Bryan Sturgeon, and Brian Holsclaw, caught the spirit and threw the other players into action at practices and games. This enthusiasm helped the Quakers to steal high rankings in County and in Conference with first and second places respectively.

Mark Meyer was given the Mental Attitude Award, but all of the players lept equally as high spirits. It took a great deal of team effort and support to end the season with an 11-9 Varsity record. As Coach Wood said, "This has been the best group I've ever had the pleasure of working with. Their attitude was excellent."

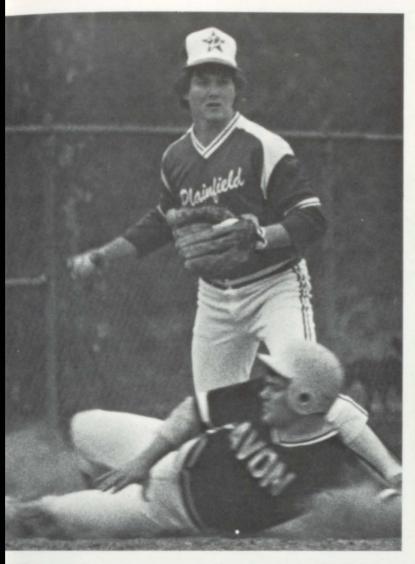

Working to better his pitch, sophomore Jeff Wade is being observed by some tough baseball critics.

Hoping to make it on base safe, sophomore Ray McGary slides closely into 3rd.

Getting one opponent out, junior Dave Goda works on a double play. Scoring another point for Plainfield, freshman Carl Archer slides safely into home.

Cutting it close, senior Bryan Sturgeon is trying to get a man out for a Plainfield win.

PEOPLE

Smiling at the end of a hectic year of games, floats, classes, tests, romances, concerts, and weekends, the Senior Class of 1982 salute themselves.

Over 1100 Of Us Spent 81-82 Here

Just the two of them-Christa Tallent and Lance Ferrell-enjoy the year's gala prom.

You walked into your first class on that first day and stared into an endless sea of faces. You found a seat and wondered if you could ever be more than one more face at PHS. Later, though, as you half-listened to the day's lecture, you began to notice the differences between the faces around you: some were fat, some skinny, some long, some short, some wide, some narrow, and some you didn't know what they were. As you realized the physical differences, you started to understand how over 1100 students could be massed together in one building nine months out of the year without one of them losing his or her identity.

That first day rolled into the first month, and as you sat with hordes of people at ball games, convocations, concerts, classes, and lunch, you became familiar with them and began to feel your own identity becoming clearer. At times when you were just another kid in the lunch line or when the teacher had to check the seating chart for your name, you began to doubt your individuality, but when you became the one to check with for the latest sport tips or the one to ask for homework help, you lost that doubt.

You see, you weren't just another face in the PHS crowd. Instead, you were an individual, and without individuals there would be no crowd of faces at all.

At the Regional pep session, "Pac-Man", alias Dave Teany, demonstrates the infamous welcoming ritual that all those visiting administrators can hope to receive.

How far will the dollar stretch and in which room will I teach tomorrow? These questions were asked frequently by all those people who make the Plainfield High School system work. It seemed as though the high school became a vicious circle in which the responsibility changed hands as quickly as children toss the hot potato. Practically every student complained to some teacher about the construction mess, while nearly every teacher complained to another teacher and to one of the administrators about the newly added feet of red tape, the constantly changing room assignments, and the inhuman stench of epoxy paint. The administrators quickly turned to the school board with their problems, namely financial—and the school board, who listened attentively, decided that with more community support ... Well, finally the problems were discussed at the dinner tables of hundreds of concerned families, only to be taken back to school in the minds and mouths of the Plainfield High School students. The successful running of Plainfield came about through the smooth cooperation of one and all.

STAFF: Keeping Things In Gear

With a smile on his face, and a club in his hand, Bill Graden awaits his seniors in their final weeks of school. At the Sectional pep session, a few industrious and rather odd-looking teachers became members of the faculty "Pac-Man" skit.

As every game is important, Dana Greene and Jerry Carpenter stress the fact that although winning isn't everything, it sure helps.

SENIORS: Class Moves Onward to New Goals

The senior class of 1982 moved on to our future as we graduated, but students of '82 experienced unique and fun-filled activities throughout the past year. Anxiously, we started our year with preparations for the final float. "Here Comes the King the Big #1" was the theme of the float, and when the float was completed, the class adjourned to the choir room to tape our theme song. We didn't win in the competition, but we won in our hearts because we strengthened the bonds of friendship. Powderpuff was the next event for which we seniors psyched ourselves up; the game was rough, we didn't know if it was football or war!

School spirit peaked among seniors as sectional time came around. We proudly displayed our letter sweaters and all the red and blue that we had. With the sectional victory under our belts, we became antsy for the warm Florida climate. Many seniors made the trek south for Spring Break "82." After returning from Florida, the next big event for us was the prom. The Eygptian Room proved to be the perfect setting in which to dance the night away. To draw the class even closer together, we prepared ourselves for the last class competition—Field Day. We triumphed on Field Day for our third and final time.

With the last major event—graduation—seniors knew that our days at Plainfield were finally numbered; with the turning of the tassels and the glitter of a few tears, it was all over.

Proudly standing in front of the senior float are Becki Flick, Betsy Buchanan, and Shelley Brown, the 1982 queen candidates.

The Class of '82 officers: Vice President Scott McLeish, Secretary-treasurer Angela Allen, and President Gene Margiotti.

The culmination of weeks of preparation: the second place float of the Class of 1982, as it awaits the beginning of the homecoming parade.

Happily displaying the spirit of '82 are Rita Kirtley and Markanna VanHorn.

SENIORS: Queen and Team Reign

Making magic marks, Monique Hamby traces a pattern for the seniors' last float; hoping their "Here Comes the King" would sweep honors, many helped build the crown. Queen candidates Shelley Brown, Betsy Buchanan, and Becki Flick wait for the announcer with escorts Kent Haggard, Brad Reno, and Bill Brocious.

JUNIORS: Class of '83 Sweeps Up Homecoming

As they returned this year, juniors took on newer responsibilities. One of the first was to come up with a float theme centering on a song title. Victoriously, juniors sent out the clowns" and took first place. Powderpuff was stupendous, as the female gridders captrued a pronounced win over senior opponents. Before the jeers and snickers of a full stadium, Brian Brocious was named Junior Prince. Over Spring Break many opted to take the SAT, diligently postponing or cancelling trips. In April those who could afford the evening out spent a night (and a bundle) dancing and dining at the Murat Temple and beyond. To highlight the end of the year were AAG and Field events. Still, by April's end the emphasis for each was the anticipation of summer vacation and expectations for their final year at PHS.

Even though fluffed flowers no longer adorn the major portion of Homecoming floats—classes have switched to float paper to cover skirts—several juniors gather at Wingler's farm to make last minute flowers. Sponsor Mrs. Jackson, Michelle Hooton, Trish Keller, Mike Hammons, and Chris Wright socialize while they work.

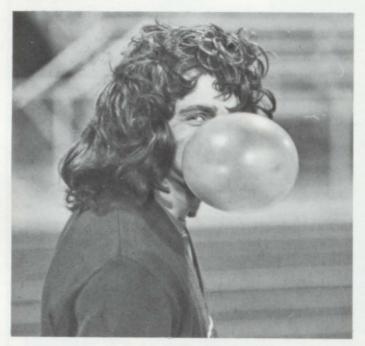

Construction worker extraordinaire, Steve Smith brought his dad's truck full of all the essential tools to build a winning float. They did!

Junior princess candidates Anne Rogers, Kim Morrison, and Jerri Snodgrass await parade.

Grinning beneath an awesome bubble, Craig Wilson (Cheerleader style) enjoys junior victory.

Sturdy coaches Dave Casselman and Mike Muse assist Carol Tyler, one of the many star players for junior team, off the field. Carol, unhurt, returned for more quarters.

Sophomore class officers—Jeff Baker, Vice President, Lisa Ragan, Secretary-Treasurer, and Tim Cohn, Presisent—worked on "Class Clash" events. Homecoming float urges Quakers on to an easy victory over Cascade; although the victory was easy, many hours went into float building.

After spending their freshman year learning the ropes of high school, sophs managed to balance their school and social lives. Heading their list was Homecoming, an event which brought out enthusiastic class members and resulted in an impressive float. Powderpuff was a tremendous victory for the sophomore offense, who racked up 20 points, while the defense held the frosh scoreless. Almost Anything Goes and Field Day offered more chances to pit sophomore brawn against other classes. Social lives took shape with the arrival of two major events: long-awaited class rings and drivers licenses. Greater involvement in clubs and extra-curricular activities, athletics, and upper level classes kept sophomores busy all year.

FRESHMEN: Class of '85 Joins High School

The freshmen really worked hard during their first year of high school. They had a great theme and spent hours assembling their float. Next, the girls put together a good but inexperienced Powderpuff team. Freshmen athletes were instrumental in the successes of swim, golf, cross country, track, volleyball, gymnastics, and baseball teams. All had the chance to buy a class ring for the first time. They also spent at least one quarter in the Writers Gallery, sweated their way through their last required year of phys. ed., and endured the grueling achievement tests for the last time. By year's end the Class of '85 were fully initiated.

Hours of hard work by all freshmen and sponsors produce first float: Flirting with Disaster.

COMMUNITY

"The Strip" (U.S. 40) sparkles against the night sky.

A Year of Support at PHS

You as the student may not realize just how much the community supported your activities at PHS this year. In turn, of course, the business expected your patronage. But if you really think about it, your patronage to Plainfield's businesses came quite naturally. In fact, there probably wasn't a Friday or Saturday night when you wouldn't find students gobbling pizza at Noble Romans or slurping Mister Misties at the DQ. Throughout the year this community support could be seen. Mr. Henry Haase, for example, spent a lot of time and money supporting the school: at homecoming the school got to use the plaza parking lot to make preparations for the parade. Mr. Haase also avidly supported the marching band. Many other people, also, supported your activities. Many thanks to all of them!) One type of support that was not seen by all students was the placement of advertisements by community businesses. Such advertisement in the yearbook was a major source of funding for this year's book.
