Which Way Do
We Go?

"The only thing constant in life is change." It's not a new idea but it seems to capture the spirit and feeling of the year. We faced a lot of the usual decisions. We chose the clubs we wanted to join and the classes we wanted to take (or drop). We decided whether we wanted to compete scholastically or athletically (or both). We decided whether or not to work part time, or we set some of the goals of our lives. In addition, we watched as students and teachers came and went, we helped administrators iron out the bugs of a new computer system, and we provided data for a committee that decided how long our school days will be in the future. It was a year of changes—and a year of growth. For all of us, it was a year to decide "Which Way Do We Go?"

Which Way
Do We Go?

Arrows point the way . . .

The brainstorming sessions are over. The theme has been decided, submitted, and prepared for publication. Now that there's a theme, the cover design must be established. "Which Way Do We Go?" That's a question the staff dealt with for a cover, ideas, problems, etc., but there was a solution. "Ways" imply arrows, arrows imply direction, and direction is what this book is all about.

Instead of having "no way" or "one way," PHS offers a number of paths to pursue. Whether student, staff, faculty, or administrator, we must evaluate what PHS and life offers us and then decide "Which Way Do We Go?"

Clockwise: Amidst an array of bright red and blue balloons, homecoming princesses Nikki Robinson, Allison Clapp, and Angie Smith, along with queen Stacey Stephenson, share their joy. Getting involved meant some extra hours for Mrs. Susie Chaille who designed this 1987 Silhouettes cover. While concentrating on her flag routine, Senior Jennifer Cassidy catches a glimpse of the photographer. Courtney Benson's concentration preceding her dive indicates the intensity required in this sport. Soccer, a non-sanctioned sport at PHS, was enjoyed by a number of our students. Shown in competition at Lovell Field are seniors Pat Costello and Brad Johnson. Mr. Sweeney won the first bet, lost the second (as shown here), but in the long run, the Hoosier supporters outlasted the Boilers.

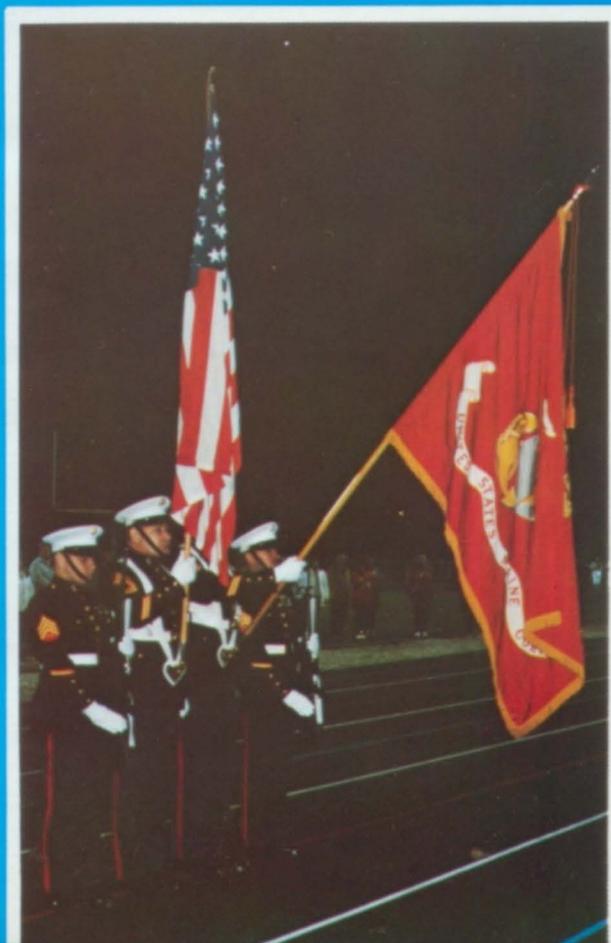

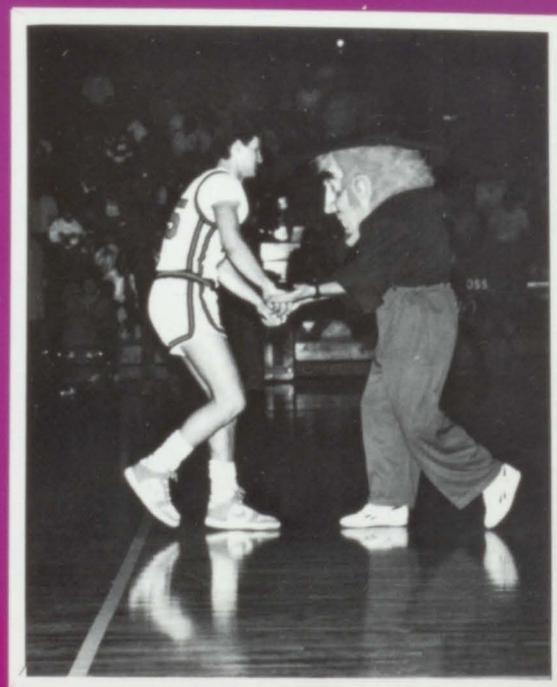

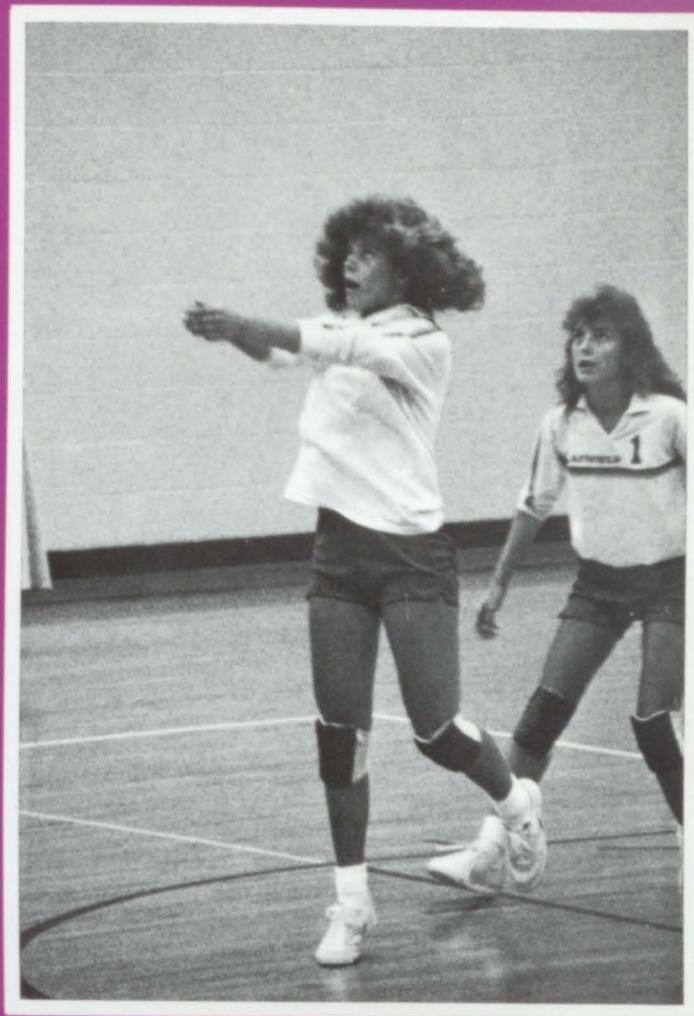

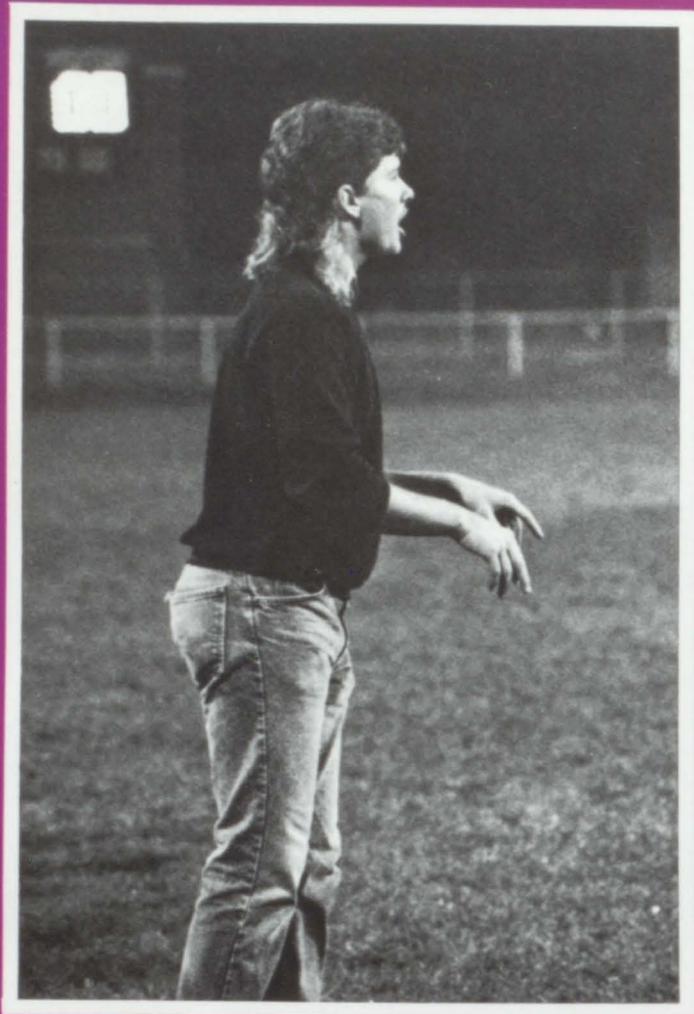

Which Way

Clockwise: As their banner displays, the Gummi Invasion has struck second period economics. Seniors John Ferguson, Mark Lincks, Tom Miles, Suzie VanTryon, and Sharen Macek package their product. Below, junior Joe Hammond writes down Michelle Popendeiker's schedule as he prepares to carry her books for the day. Michelle had purchased a lottery ticket for "slave day." Various activities took place to honor Coach Davis's final home football game; the U.S.M.C. Color Guard proudly carries the flag on this occasion. Following the sectional victory at Brownsburg, the cheerleaders display their glee. The roaring flames of the sectional bonfire are visible from great distances. Involved? This mom looks intense. Mrs. Hannah Lautenschlager, along with the other basketball moms, delight the students with their basketball prowess and their poetry.

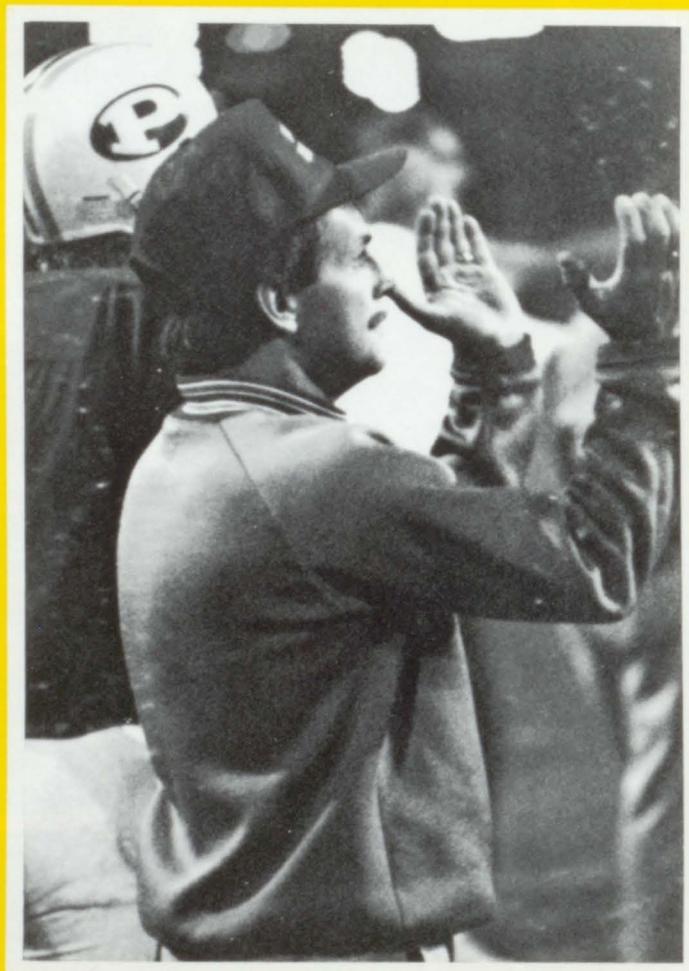

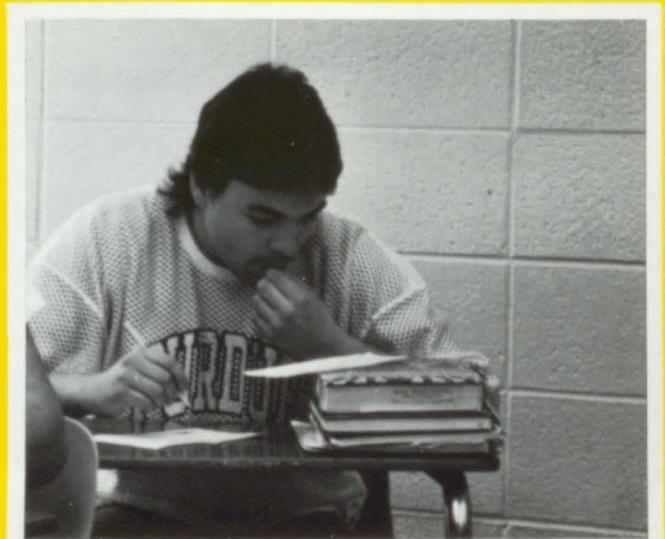

Clockwise: The bonfire is a "roaring" success with flames leaping in the sky; the coaches, team, cheerleaders, students and parents await "slave day" results. Below, Mr. Jackson enjoys some positive interaction with the press while holding the just-acquired sectional trophy. Scott Frisbie appears off the mark in this pass attempt. "The Quaker Man," alias Mike Murphy, exchanges hand slaps with starter Ralph Western. The gummi bear sales keeps the "packaging crew" busy putting a surprise inside—a gummi worm. Shouting encouragement to his Lady Quaker football team, Coach Pennington stands alone. With hair flying, soph Angie Smith has just skillfully returned the opponent's serve.

Which Way
Go?

Which Way
Do We Go?

Clockwise: Disgust and nail-biting seem to be the current emotions for Tom Holzknicht, Dustin Wittell, and Dave Sturgeon at the sectional. Mouths open with song, this choral practice runs smoothly. Gina Laban and Angie McCool find something amusing at this volleyball game—the score? Pre-parade activities for Shelley Van-Wanzele and Michelle Chaille include having pictures taken with a friend. Deana Spink, Terry Mullen, Jim Staab, and Lori Parvin relax while Mr. Milburn introduces exchange student Ute Hirschheide.

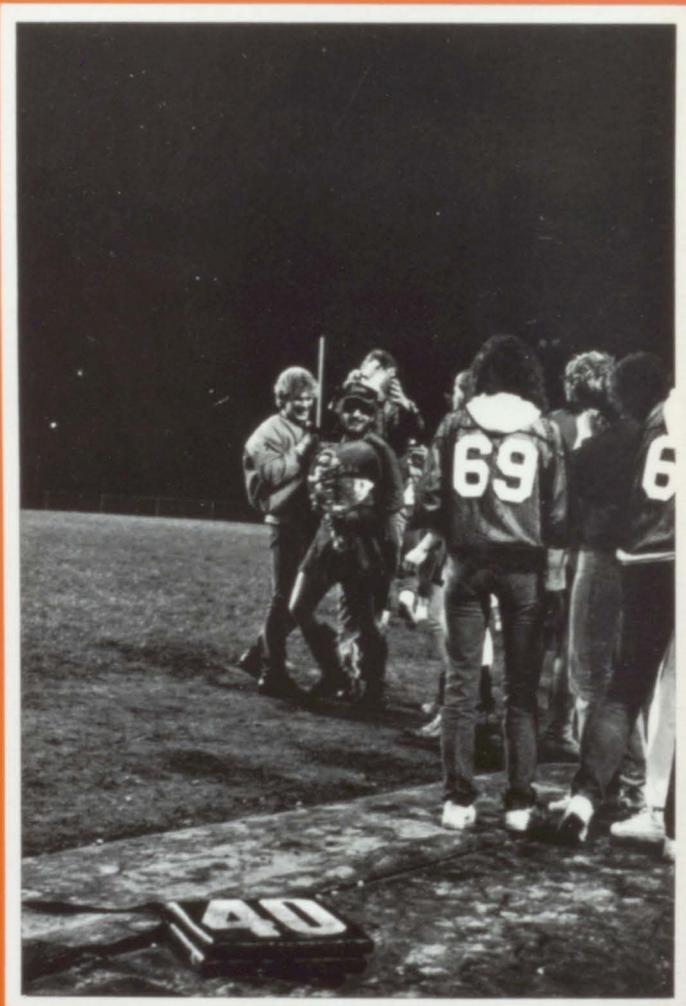

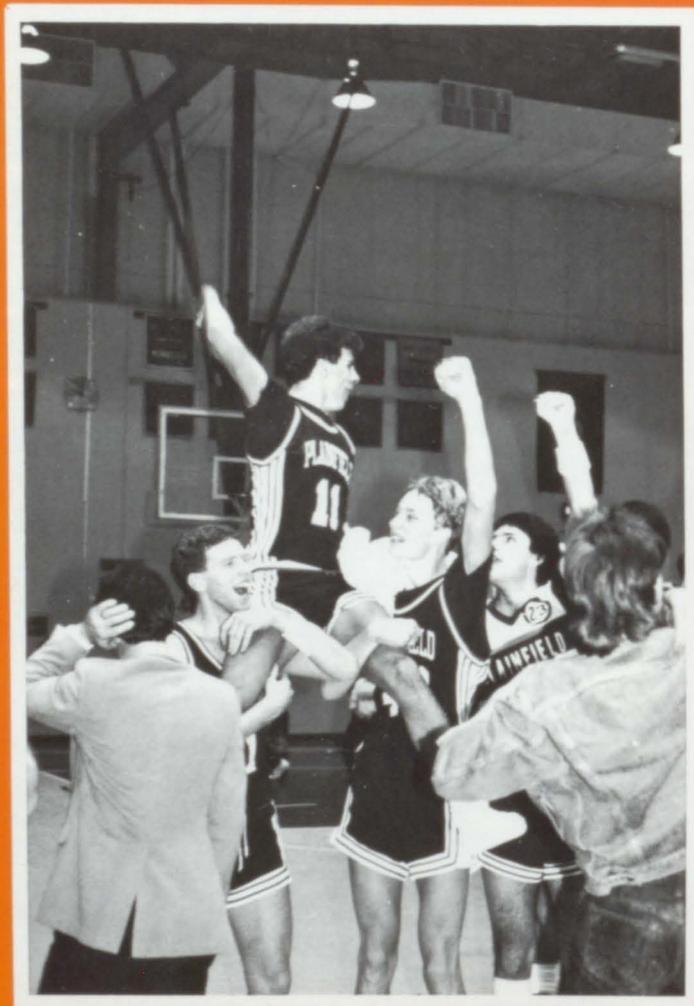

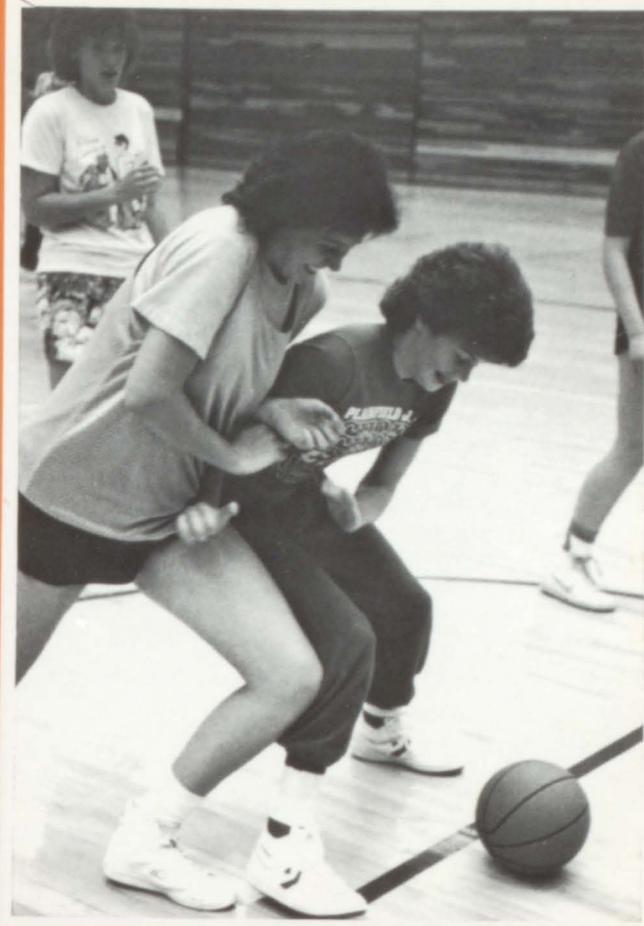

Which Way
Do We Go?

Clockwise: Monica Grossi shares some information with a fellow cheerleader. Although these two are definitely into the sport, the referees would surely frown; pushing and shoving are Beth McKinley and Buffy Heckler. "When all else fails, improvise" seems to be Adam Ozment's method of eating with no silverware. Shelley Young, Mike Risley, Robin Hooton, and Larry Boxler glance through pictures with Mrs. McAllister. The largest number of votes for powder puff king go to senior Robin Littleton, seen here with his "bouquet and crown." Transfer student Todd Grace celebrates the Quaker county championship atop the shoulders of teammates Adam Ozment and Mike Williams. The Quakers defeated Todd's former team, the Danville Warriors. Pointing to the directions on the screen, Mrs. Carrigan assists Jon Christl.

Freshmen Frustration "Low Man on the Totem Pole"

There are many apprehensions that go along with becoming a high school student. Although you are no longer thought of as "those junior high kids," there are some disadvantages. Trying to find one's classes and locker at the high school end of the building can be a real frustration. Most freshmen students have to carry a gym bag to every class.

There are also some advantages to becoming a high schooler. There is a greater variety of classes to choose from, more extra-curricular activities, the high school library and lunch schedule, varsity pep sessions and now all courses are credit toward graduation. But, the biggest advantage to becoming a freshman is being one step closer to graduating. More importantly, next year somebody else will be "low man on the totem pole."

Freshmen Fancy

"Should I Buy a Class Ring?"

Each student's ring is unique. The first choice that is made is whether or not to get gold or another metal. The student must also pick the size of the ring. Then the student must pick out the color of stone he or she wants. Some get their birthstones while others stick with the school colors of red or blue. The students can also decide if they want a smooth or cut stone, or to have sunburst or rainbow put in the stone. Pictures or initials are also a possibility for under the stone. After all these decisions, the sides of the ring must be designed. A lot of students choose to have the Red Pride Shield and the Quaker man on the sides. Other students prefer to have symbols of their sports or other extra-curricular activities placed on their rings. Finally, the designing is done, the ring is ordered, and the cost could be staggering.

Those who bought rings anxiously await the arrival of their rings. There are many reasons why students buy class rings: proof they are in high school, show school spirit, or as a remembrance in later years. When the rings are delivered, they are worn with pride. And now another reason for buying a ring comes to light, to exchange with that special guy or girl. New ornamentation is added in the form of a chain for wearing around the neck, or the appropriate amount of yarn added to fit the finger more accurately. All those decisions, and all the expense, and all the anticipation so your boyfriend or girlfriend can look at your creation. Class rings will be purchased for many years to come.

Riding the Bus

Hopping out the front door while putting on your shoes, you race to the bus stop just in time to see the bus pull away. You barely have time to notice what a nice day it is. Why is it that the bus comes early on the nice days, but on the coldest day of the year, you end up waiting for fifteen minutes because the bus wouldn't start?

The next day you get up 10 minutes earlier so you can make the bus. You arrive at the stop just as the bus does. You are the last to get on, and you have to sit with two other people. As the bus turns the corner, you slide off your 3 inch seat space, and drop an armload of books. The bus goes over a bump and the books slide away from you. Papers spill everywhere, even that juicy note from that special someone. You can't ask the kid in front of you to get it; he's asleep. The kid next to him can't hear for all the shouting, and you wouldn't be caught dead talking to the third kid in that seat, even for something this important. Oh well, you can wait until you get to school.

The remaining part of the ride is uneventful. The bus pulls up in front of the school. Everybody pushes to get off, and you lose track of your book. There it is—under that seat! You wait until everybody gets off the bus, and you bend down to pick up the books. The driver does not know you're still there and begins to pull away. The bus lurches into motion, and you bump your head on the seat in front of you. You yell to the bus driver to stop. When you finally get off the bus, you must rush to your locker to get to your first class on time. It has been another great adventure on the bus. Oh well, it's only about 8 hours until you get to ride the bus again.

The Driver's License

"Hey Dad, can I borrow the car tonight?"

"I have to get to work."

"I need to drive to the game—no one else can drive."

"Are there any errands you need done, Mom?"

"There will only be eight of us in the car ..."

"Yes Mom, I'll wear my seatbelt and lock the doors."

"We're not going anywhere, just driving around."

All familiar phrases—but only after the regimen of driver's education. Anxious and nervous, they cautiously enter class with anticipation. First, there is class to attend and written tests to take. Next comes the practical application—driving.

For some it's the first time behind the wheel (consider the poor instructor); for others they think this is a waste of their time, a mere formality since they are already expert drivers (again, pity the poor instructor). With the passage of time and, hopefully, an improvement of skills, each day students drove longer distances. Cautious driving, parallel and perpendicular parking, and general knowledge of the driving laws are tested. And finally, at the wise age of 16 years 1 month and 1 day, the magic piece of paper is yours. And so it begins, "Dad, can I borrow the car?"

Sophomore Stunts

Participation is the Key

The sophomore sidelines during powder puff appears to have more chiefs than Indians. Sophomore Kim Elmore is all arms and legs while delaying the Avon offense. Dances bring out the "crazies" for some. Sophomores Gary Parker, Christi Andrews, Darby Carmichael, Shawna Edwards, and John Hall, along with junior Jim Lautenschlager, get wild.

More athletics for the sophomores as exhibited by spiker Angie Smith. Following the sectional victory sophs Tarry Schabel and Darren Whaley take the microphone for the "moment of glory." Actually, Tarry did all the talking. To show your feelings with a heart shaped cookiegram was the fund raising idea for FHA. Shown working on the hearts are Tammy Smith and Mrs. Dotlich.

College Entrance Examinations

Many students in the junior class are planning to attend college after they graduate from Plainfield High School. In preparation for this, these students are taking college entrance exams. These tests include the SAT and the ACT. Some students even take the PSAT to help them prepare for the SAT. PHS offers a quarter length class that stresses the English section of the SAT. This is a two part test which includes math and English only. On the other hand, the ACT tests English, math, science and social studies capabilities.

Taking either of these tests seems to be a tiresome experience. One must get up early on a Saturday morning, come to school, and spend hours answering, or trying to correctly answer, some nearly impossible questions. The tests takes about four hours, four of the longest hours around.

These tests are used by colleges as a determining factor for admittance; some schools place more emphasis on these test results than others. But, if a student is planning to attend college, or even considering it, then these tests are a necessity. Besides, what's a Saturday in comparison to test taking?

"Operation Victory" the junior float, featured a large bear in traction at Quaker Hospital. Below, beaming broadly, Rob Jones accepts congratulatory "high fives" from the other contestants and their escorts.

Junior Jealousy

"Next year, when I'm a senior . . ."

One of the best things about being a junior is knowing that next year you will be a member of the senior class. Some students feel anxious about their last year of high school, but the majority can't wait to be at the head of the line. Many juniors that were surveyed said the two things they are looking forward to the most are the prestige of being a senior and graduation. Other high ranking answers were the prom and spring break '88. The lounge was also frequently mentioned. Many juniors were fired up for their sports seasons in the coming year with hopes of going to a state championship. Most all replied that they looked forward to good times as seniors. "When I'm a senior . . ."

Joe Hammond lets the crowd know what he believes the outcome of the Plainfield-Brownsburg Hoosier Dome game will be. Amy Fanning, drum major, studies the band's maneuvers soberly.

Graduation becomes more realistic when Herff Jones reps arrive to collect money and take orders. It's not long now!

Spring Break

The hotel reservations were made far in advance. Buying clothes and needed accessories began right after Christmas. These things were packed and ready to go by February. All these carefully made plans for Spring Break '87. Seniors all across America had been making these plans for spring break, but at PHS, there is only one place to go. It has been a tradition for Plainfield seniors to bask in the Florida sun. Freshman students know that their senior spring break will be spent in Florida. The hot spots include Daytona Beach, Fort Lauderdale, St. Pete and Panama City. Students devise an excuse to get out of school one or two days early. They drive straight through and spend the next week on the beach. PHS's students arrive home on Saturday or Sunday and sleep through to Monday. These returnees return to the halls of PHS sporting Florida t-shirts and deep tans. They have pictures to show and stories that are beyond belief. This tradition is sure to live on at PHS for many years to come.

College

Many seniors have no definite plans when they start their last year of high school. These students eagerly await the mail each day to see what college wants them to grace their campus. As the school year progresses, they begin the hard task of filling out applications to the schools they hope to attend. Many PHS seniors take college days to visit some of the campuses of their choice. They anxiously await acceptance letters from all the colleges they applied to. After they have been accepted, they decide on one college. Seniors begin to fill out scholarship forms so they can bring the cost of college down. Parents of these students have the hard task of filling out the treacherous financial aid forms. Future college students begin to shop for things they will need in the coming year. By the time graduation rolls around, almost every senior knows what his or her plans are for the future. Although the senior year is very fun, it is also very hectic. The long process of choosing a college is one seniors endure, but in the end, it is well worth the effort.

Memories

When the class of 1987 was asked what they would miss the most about the class, the resounding answer was being with their friends. This included talking with them, seeing them, and just having good times with them. Parties were also a big item for the class of 1987. Many seniors said that they would miss these get-togethers with their friends on Friday and Saturday nights. Another outstanding number said that they would miss "The Con" and his daily sport fact to start their classes. Other responses included attending games and playing on the athletic teams. Some students said they would miss their classes. A few seniors said they would miss the class clowns and one person said that he would miss the local gossip. Others said the opposite sex would be what they missed most. A few dedicated students said they felt that they would miss the whole class of '87 and everything about it. No matter which part of the senior class the members miss the most, the memories were great and will endure forever.

AIDES— Helpers Extra- ordinaire!

"Mrs. Jones, I need this typed for my next hour class!"

"Mrs. Hamby, how about some aspirin?"

"Forty copies, please, front and back, Mrs. Hydell."

"But Mrs. Groover, I KNOW I signed up for the VCR today."

"Help, Mrs. Lairmore, my computer just messed up!"

"Please, Mrs. Cobb! If I'm late again, I'll be in after—school detention."

"... about those transcripts, Mrs. Danielson ..."

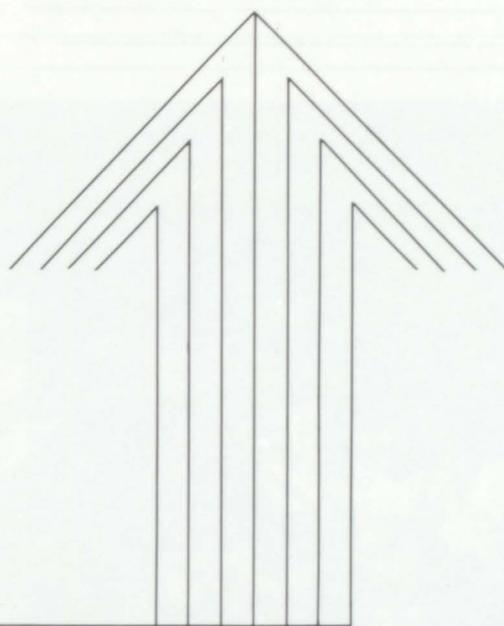

We as students (and teachers) may not always like the responses, but when you think about it, where would we be without this dependable work force? Our "support group" keeps the building operational and functional. Passes, computers, xerox copies, phone messages, lost books, change . . . and the list goes on and on and on and on.

Student Life

One Friday night, the hot spot for Quaker fans was the Hoosier Dome cheering the team to a victory.

Wild-n-crazy Mr. Conley demonstrates "his stuff" at one of many dances held at school this year.

Sharing the spotlight at the Sweetheart Dance are senior Brian Weida and sophomore Christy Wallace.

Friday & Saturday

Weekends—Outa' Sight!

The hats and mask are just part of the fun at the Youth Forum's Halloween Dance held at the Plainfield Elks Club. Mary Dees and Travis Shadwick share a romantic moment.

The night life in Plainfield hasn't changed much through the years. Movies, pizza, and football/basketball games are all a big part of the activities for many PHS students.

Football and basketball games are the customary Friday night spots for students to let out their steam from the previous week. Various clubs and organizations sponsored numerous dances this year. Then, many students go to their favorite pizza spot to "chug" a gallon of coke and to "chow down" an order of breadsticks.

The recent opening of Union Station has provided numerous nights of enjoyment. There you can have your picture taken with a cardboard lifesize President Reagan or show your singing abilities by cutting a tape. Oiver's is also a popular night spot for the under 21 teen who likes to dance, or just meet people. Movies are also a big weekend activity. The Rocky Horror Picture Show is a very popular midnight pasttime. But if that particular movie isn't your "Top Gun," there are many others from which to choose.

Cheering the crowd to support the seniors in their fourth victory are Brad Whicker and Rob Littleton. The junior squad huddles around Mr. Conley for the rules of the game.

Freshmen and sophomore players square off as the next play begins.

Powder Puff

“Femmes,” Football Flags

Freshmen cheerleaders share the spotlight with the junior cheerleaders. Included are Alan McKamey, Mickie Welsh, Tom Foodrill, Josh Kendall, Steve Cobb, Mark Sample, Chuck Winkle, and Bobby Bowling.

October—cold, crisp, football weather. But for girls? This Monday night found girls from each class donning their sweats, jerseys, and “flags” to compete in the annual powder puff football game. This fund raiser is sponsored by the junior and senior classes with proceeds going to offset prom expenses.

All aspects of the game are recreated. The gentlemen in the striped shirts sometimes find it difficult to keep straight faces, but the action is intense—on and off the field. Not only do the players provide entertainment, but the coaches, cheerleaders, and color commentators contribute as well.

The first game pitted the novice freshmen against the victorious sophomores. Victor the Bear helped cheer the senior girls to their fourth victory, this time defeating the class of '88.

Rhonda Ginn, Suzette Reed, and Jennifer Zuber have fun working the drive-thru at the newly opened Wendy's.

Brad Whicker peers through the exhaust pipe jungle at Guarantee Auto.

"Have it your way at Burger King" is the motto of Burger King worker Terry Mullen.

Darren Henderson sweeps the customers up with "cost cutter prices."

At Plainfield, approximately half of the high school seniors surveyed had jobs, as did many underclassmen. Thanks to the newly opened Wendy's and Burger King, new jobs were available. Most of the students worked at fast-food restaurants and the grocery stores because that was where the job openings were in Plainfield. But a number of students had "different" jobs. Some worked, for example, at clothing and shoe stores, hardware stores, and as receptionists at beauty parlors. Plainfield High School students worked at their jobs for a number of reasons. For instance, some saved their money for college. Others bought clothes and "extras" with their money. The students, though, all agreed that they were learning valuable skills in working with other employees and the public.

The Kroger grocery cart round-up is part of the sacking job as demonstrated by Steve Gee.

Part Time Jobs

"They work hard for their money."

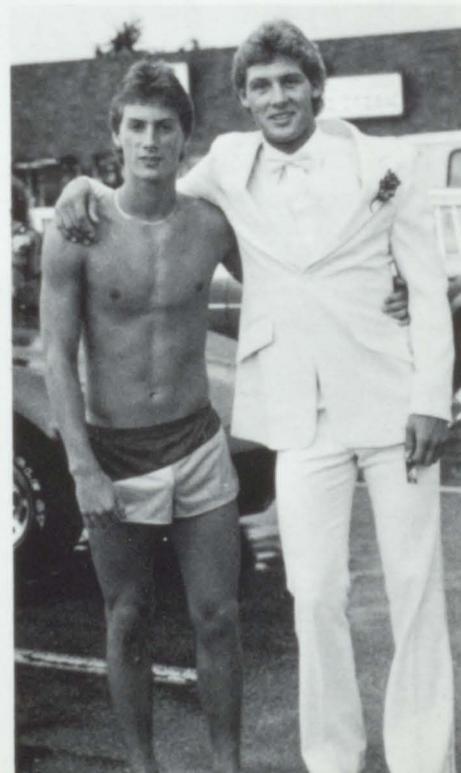

Gina Spikes displays the latest in stylish clothes at Clothes Out Junction; at left Allison Lich of Inkslinger assists a customer who "cares enough to send the very best."

There was a pregame downpour but even a good soaking couldn't dampen the spirits of the fighting Quakers.

Various parade attire is modeled by juniors Mark Satterfield and Ralph Western. Below, the winning senior float is displayed at Plainfield Plaza preceding the parade.

Newly crowned homecoming queen Stacey Stephenson, along with escort David Griffin, smile for cheering fans as well as cameras.

Atop the fire truck throwing footballs to parade watchers are cheerleaders Rhonda Dunn, Shawna Edwards, Kelly Legg, and Shannon Davis.

Homecoming 1986

Rain, Floats, Royalty, Victory!

The downpour began during float line-up at the plaza. As candidates and escorts scrambled for cover, sponsors buried the floats in yards of plastic. Just when the "soap opera" theme parade appeared doomed, the rain abruptly halted.

Float honors were awarded to the seniors with "A Quaker Victory as the Cubs Turn," while the runner-up junior float was "Quaker Hospital." Other float entries included the sophomores, "Send the Cubs to Another World" and freshmen's "Victory is the Quakers' Guiding Light."

Clapp. Other candidates included freshmen Lisa Cangany and Jenny Taylor, sophomores Lori Jackson and Christy Wallace, juniors Kristin Doss and Mary Ann Wubbolding, and seniors Terrie Heinrichs and Suzie Van-Tryon.

The return of the rain during the fourth quarter didn't dampen the Quaker victory over the Franklin Cubs. The evening concluded with a dance in the cafeteria sponsored by SADD with pizza and cokes donated by Domino's. Yearbook distribution at the dance provided an opportunity for students to share some memories.

Doing their part to complete the senior float are Mark Lincks and Kary Bonham.

Plainfield High School had style too. Even though we were not fortunate enough to be located in New York or California, we still had fads and fashions. A particular fad that was a hit with the seniors was Victor the Bear. Victor came from the winning senior float. He was the symbol of the seniors. But as usual with any fad, Victor died out when the float was torn down. Another fad was the yellow warning signs that said "Baby on Board," and this fad inspired the "Who cares Who's on Board" sign. From this, other signs came about such as "Ex-wife in Trunk," "Beam Me Up Scottie," etc . . . What else was hot? Well for one thing, the Cosby Show was a must watch situation. Speaking of television, most people felt that they had to have the newest item to add to their viewing pleasure, a VCR. New products were developed. Jolt, a cola with twice the caffeine and the same amount of sugar, was invented. Anyway, what were chic Quakers wearing? Starting with the feet, black Reeboks were the "in thing" for guys and girls. Low boots were worn and some people layered socks over jeans. Speaking of jeans, country-Western style was in. Guys wore 501 Levis and torn-up jeans. Girls wore black, grey, and faded jeans, along with overalls. Suspenders were worn, but not to keep one's pants up. They were worn hanging loose and dangling. Big was in. People wore big jean jackets and coats, loose shirts, long sweaters, and gigantic purses. Coca-Cola developed clothes for both men and women that were very popular at Plainfield High School. The "in" colors were bright blues, bright green, black and anything metallic. To top off the wardrobes, girls wore banana clips, big satin bows, and low ponytails. Finally, it is about time Swatches were mentioned. It was becoming popular to wear several of them at one time. In some areas people even tried to wear them on their ankles. Anyway, enough of this "chic talk". But we will leave everyone with this message for the years to come. Seventeen magazine says, "Don't party too hard, don't drive too fast, don't worry too much, and if you can't say something chic, don't say anything at all."

While browsing at Union Station, senior Julie Spielman examines a popular item, a sweatshirt.

Spuds Mackenzie, the original party animal who appears in Bud Light commercials, is a popular new fad.

Designer items top the list

Putting together fashionable outfits for customers is just one of Connie Howard's tasks while working a clothing store.

Designer clothes advertising the designer are right in style. The "most fashionable students" (as picked in a school survey) Tracey Stagner and Rashid Kourany stand by some hot items from this year. They include Alf, Jake's Cola, Quaker boxer shorts, black Reeboks, bows, banana clips, overalls, Top Gun, and the rock group Bon Jovi.

Staff members portrayed by Tracy Cadwell, Kary Bonham, Deana Spink, and Jon Cooper discuss one of many school problems. Faculty members Miss Barrett (Kina Pithoud) and (Steve Sudler) make plans for classroom discipline.

Attracting the attention of two teachers is Joe Ferome (Todd Brownwell), the school delinquent.

To the students who watched it and especially for those who participated, "Up the Down Staircase" hopefully helped us all appreciate the efforts of some of our teachers and sympathize with them a little. To the teachers, maybe it served as an inspiration not to give up on kids and a reminder of the feelings of first year teachers.

The theme of the play is about ambition, or as the dialogue says, "aiming higher than one's capacity." This is communicated through a young new English teacher (Kina Pithoud) whose reason for teaching is "to make a permanent difference in the life of a child." After much frustration, she ends up getting through to most of them, even the school rebel (Todd Brownwell), her most difficult battle of all. As for the other staff members, she is discouraged by some, encouraged by others, and even falls in love with one of them.

Anytime a group of people work hard together for a common goal, something special is bound to happen. This was no exception. There were many hours put in, and they were hours of hard work, but at the same time, great fun. Everyone who worked on this project received at least a taste of the magic of theatre and had the opportunity to make new friends with a shared experience.

Disregarding the planned classroom activity, Miss Barrett's students carry on their own conversations.

"There's nothing to do" is a frequent phrase heard among teens. In a yearbook sponsored poll, the results proved students find many things to keep them busy. Jobs and school occupied the most time, but leisure time was spent in a variety of ways. Television, movies, and music were frequently mentioned pasttimes, as were talking on the phone, being with friends, sports, and travel.

One of the favorite activities for the class of 90 included building models, reading, sports, and guy-watching. The class of 89 enjoyed activities like cruising, being with friends, sleeping, and talking on the phone. Some of the responses from the class of 88 were dancing, hunting, working on cars, sports, and by far the biggest response was "partying." The class of 87 also considered parties as one of their favorite activities. Also included was working on cars, listening to music, photography, and dating.

Whether students are active in school activities or not, they have pasttimes and hobbies to help them relax. Most seem to stay busy despite the many complaints that "there's nothing to do in Plainfield."

Tresa McClain shares the latest news with a friend over the phone.

Although at this time a school sponsored soccer team has been vetoed, many PHS'ers, including Brad Johnson, play locally on an Optimist sponsored team.

Japanese and Greasers Mix Well

Danny (Brad Duffer) tells his version of the vacation romance with Sandy.

This year instead of the annual musical the choral department sponsored a variety show. This production included "The Mikado," "Grease," "High School Classmates," and "If Men Played Cards As Women Do."

In "The Midado" Steve Cobb portrayed the honorable Mikado. Jon Cooper was his son Nanki-poo. Yum-Yum, Nicole Crager, was Nanki-poo's true love, and Julie Kennedy played Katisha who was engaged to Nanki-poo. Gordon Peel enacted Koko who was to be married to Yum-Yum. This comedy, set in Japan, involves the exchanging of mates by Nanki-poo and Koko. In the end Nanki-poo and Yum-Yum are united as are Koko and Katisha.

Two short one-act plays followed. They were presented by the acting class and involved acting class students. The first of the plays, "High School Classmates," first appeared on the Carol Burnett Show and involves the reacquaintance of two former classmates. On Friday these parts were played by Sarah Hampton and Julie Kennedy; the roles went to Kristin Doss and Melissa Loy on Saturday. The other one act play, "If Men Played Cards As Women Do," involved Russ Ridenour, Chuck Porter, Gordon Peel and Steve Cobb getting together for cards but getting distracted by gossip, culinary delights and interior design.

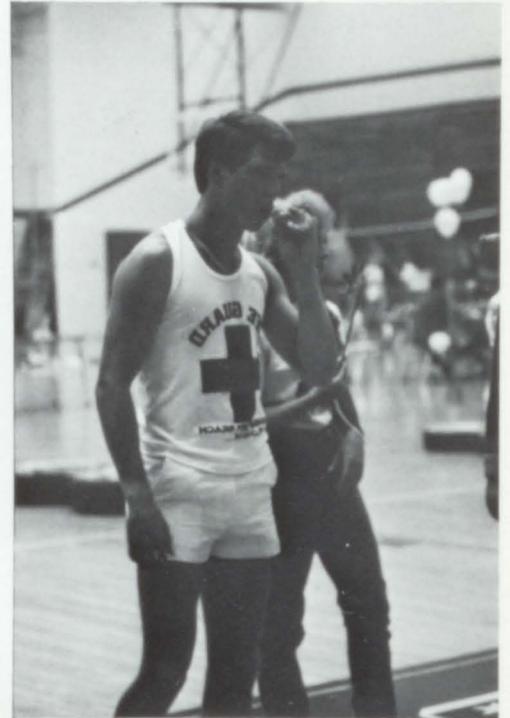

The last segment featured four tunes from "Grease." This presentation featured Brad Duffer as Danny, Kristin Doss as Sandy, Jenny Kincaid as Marty, and Steve Cobb as Kenickie. Each of these principal characters was spotlighted in a song but the crowd pleaser seemed to be "Greased Lightning."

Mr. Robert Neal, Mr. Peter Sims, and Mrs. Angela Schneider shared the various responsibilities of music, set design, and costumes and make-up. Mr. Richard T. Williams was responsible for the choreography. Dianne Rudy and Mrs. David Spicer assisted Mr. Sims with the music. Funds were raised to offset the cost of the production by candy sales.

On May 1, 1987, there was a romantic feeling in the air at PHS. This was the night of the annual Jr-Sr Prom. The excitement started early in April with the ticket sales. Not only were the tickets a big deal, but the girls shopped for the perfect dress and their dates ordered tuxes to match. Flowers were selected and dinner reservations made.

Then came May 1st. Many people hurried to the attendance office for early dismissals, excused or not. Then came nerves while waiting or picking up dates. Of course there had to be a picture session for the moms and dads. Once the picture hassle was completed, it was on to dinner. For many, travel was first class. For Pete Lavy and his date, the limo ride was his prize in a SADD raffle. Many of the popular restaurants were the Eagle's Nest, King Cole, the Water Front, and the Velvet Turtle. Now it was on to the Columbia Club, some arriving in carriages. Upon reaching "Midnight Masquerade," couples had the opportunity to have their picture taken, dance to the music of First Impression, or sit and visit. Many walked around to see how everyone looked and compare dinner notes. Around 11:30 everyone took their napkins and booklets and headed to the door to receive their favor, a stemmed glass.

Everyone went from tuxes and formals to jeans and t-shirts. The post prom was fun for everyone. People went from booth to booth trying their luck at all the games. Some joined in ping pong and volleyball; others tried ring toss, darts, or the obstacle course. All visited with friends and ate before heading for home and a few hours' rest.

Getting their second wind, the couples split and went their separate ways on Saturday. Some packed picnic lunches and headed to Eagle Creek, Turkey Run or Brown County. Once there, they hiked, ate, rode horses or just had a good time. Others chose Kings Island and the new Vortex as the place for them. Either way, it was a fun way to end a busy but unforgettable weekend.

Graduation 1987

Selecting the right tassel is part of the preparation by Janiene Eccles, Marci Ferree, Mike Fields, and Mike Bilyj; Mr. Shew does the measuring to assure a cap that fits.

Early in the year, seniors were measured for their caps and gowns. The countdown for graduation had begun. Announcements and namecards were ordered. Seniors began collecting things for their memory books. The week before graduation was filled with practice, exams, and anticipation. The final stages of the countdown had begun. There was only the ceremony to go through.

The air was full of excitement on graduation night. Half an hour before the ceremony, girls were in the restroom adjusting their caps while the boys were "calmly" waiting. Each senior felt the excitement as he or she entered the gym to the tune of Pomp and Circumstance. This night was one of both joy and sadness for the class of 1987. Dianne Rudy, the salutatorian, took the seniors down memory lane by recounting their high school careers. Valedictorian Scott Ritchie spoke about what the future holds. A special memorable moment was John Ferguson's father accepting his son's diploma as a result of John's serious illness. After senior class president Kary Bonham told the class to turn their tassels, caps flew through the air. The one hour ceremony concluded twelve years of togetherness.

Vacations

Vacations—a time to relax and get away from it all. And get away is exactly what PHS'ers did. The short vacations, fall vacation, Thanksgiving, and even President's Day, found students doing a variety of activities. Some used the few extra days to get in some extra hours at work. Others spent the time with their families and still others just relaxed, spent time with their friends, or got outdoors for a little exercise. A very few might even have used some time to catch up on some assignments. Then there were the long vacations. The two weeks at Christmas were spent shopping, wrapping the presents, and enjoying some time with family and friends. For some this meant some travel, but the real travel came with spring break. It seemed everyone counted down the days to this magic nine day break. Some spent time in Plainfield, but many escaped to exotic lands: Florida, Russia, Austria, Holland, and others.

And then summer vacation arrived . . .

Cheerleaders

Got Spirit? What?

The cheerleaders had a very busy year. The activities of the cheerleaders includes more than just cheering at basketball and football games. The cheerleaders are responsible for making the banners that decorate the halls before game night. The cheerleaders also planned the pep sessions. The cheerleaders arouse school spirit by planning spirit week: clash day, backwards day, and the customary red and blue day. Before important games, the job includes encouraging players by decorating the fronts of lockers and houses. The cheerleaders also hold workshops for girls who would like to try out for cheerleading. On the day of try outs, the senior cheerleaders serve as judges along with Student Council members and teachers.

As tradition would have it, the homecoming parade featured the girls on the fire truck throwing little footballs to the parade observers. Basketballs were thrown during halftime of home basketball games. The girls also supported other teams.

New projects this year included a lottery which had the winners gaining the use of a cheerleader to carry their books for a day. The girls also sold picture buttons as a fund raiser for cheerleading camp. This year the girls attended Eastern Illinois. Summer also meant Hendricks County Fair competition where the reserve cheerleaders placed third.

Next year the girls will be looking forward to a new sponsor, but the guidance of Miss Masariu will be greatly missed. The cheerleaders were an essential part of the victorious seasons of the Quaker teams.

The reserve cheerleaders put together a towering pyramid as senior Monica Grossi intently takes in the court action.

A tangle of legs and arms is all that is visible in this match between Brad Duffer and a Brownsburg wrestler.

It was a good wrestling season, not great, but good. The varsity concluded its season with a 10-7 record with respectable finishes in tourney competition. The reserves established themselves in third position in the Mid-State Conference while the varsity placed second in the county, fifth in Mid-State competition, and third in the sectionals.

Individual honors went to Brad Duffer as the mental attitude winner and the most valuable player. A trio of grapplers, Brad Duffer, Brad Hawk, and John Taylor, were recognized for the most pins; Craig Hughes was honored for the most takedowns; and earning four year awards were Brad Duffer and Craig Hughes. The captains for this year's team were Brad Duffer and David McClain.

There were only three senior members on the team. With five juniors and four sophomores and a large group of freshmen who contributed to the team, the next season promises to be a great one.

"We had a good season overall with a dual meet record of 9-5."

Girls' Swimming

Winning season again!

The varsity girls' swim team had a successful season this year with a 9-5 season. The pool was in good shape this year so there were no complications of traveling to other facilities. The team placed fourth in Mid-State, third in county and fourth in the sectionals. Sophomore JJ Williams went on to state and placed tenth in the hundred yard breast stroke.

The team captains were Jennifer Hickam and JJ Williams. Julie Wright received the mental attitude award and Jennifer Hickam was voted MVP. Senior Dacia Herdey received the four year award.

The boys' varsity swim team experienced a decent season. The team ended their season with a record of 7-8. This year's team captains were Brian Teany and Terry Robbins. At the awards night banquet five dedicated seniors received their four year awards. Those seniors who participated in swimming all through high school were Terry Robbins, Pete Lavy, Jeff McClain, Jeff Kraning, and Brian Teany. Terry Robbins received the mental attitude award and Rusty Hughes was voted the most valuable swimmer. The team placed fifth in the Mid-State and sixth in the sectionals.

Susan Sfreddo's long jump form ends with great results. High jumper Lindsey Mayo gracefully eases his body over the bar.

The varsity track teams started training in the winter for their long schedules. The boys were led by seniors Brad Duffer who received the mental attitude award and Lindsey Mayo who was the MVP. With a 39 member boys' track team, the record included 11 wins, 1 loss and 1 tie, along with a county championship. The Quakers also placed second in the annual Quaker Classic, a meet which only freshmen and sophomores can compete in. This allowed the underclassmen to experience competition on their level.

Although the boys and girls are not on the same team, they had three meets together which meant some late nights on the track. The girls' record was 4-5 and included a second in the county and a fifth place in Mid-State competition. The girls finished with a strong four wins for their last four meets. Honors went to Susan Sfreddo as the MVP, and the mental attitude award winner was Karen McGhee.

Coach Dones, freshmen coach, lends a hand with good advice and an encouraging word before sending his players back on the floor.

Senior Susan Sfreddo, in an attempt to save the point, dives for the ball as other teammates await the results of her effort.

The varsity team didn't have the best record but the girls played with a lot of heart. They were defeated in the first round of the sectionals, but team spirit ran high throughout the long season. The final season tally found them at 11-14 overall. Awards presentations went to Shawwna Edwards for the most valuable player and Julie Moore was the mental attitude award recipient.

The reserve and freshmen teams looked good, leaving hope for a bright future on the volleyball courts next year. The reserves were winners of the Plainfield tourney and completed a 14-5 season while the freshmen gained valuable experience finishing with a 15-2 season.

Football

Teams Fare Well Despite Setbacks

The Quaker defense goes after the passing quarterback and the potential score.

The Hoosier Dome—for the second consecutive year, the season opened with the Quakers clasing with Brownsburg in Indy. But this time the Quakers pulled out a 30-20 win. Following this victory, hope for the remainder of the season rose but was quickly diminished when starting senior quarterback Tim VanWanzeele fell to a broken collarbone. Substitute quarterbacks sophomore Tarry Schabel and junior Jim Lauthenschlager, along with the rest of the team, adjusted well, allowing the Quakers an impressive season record of 6-3. The final home game included various tributes to retiring Coach Davis for 17 years of service to PHS gridmen.

With hopes for a second Hoosier Dome appearance this season riding on a sectional win, the team suffered a tough 15-6 loss to Mooresville. The winning season concluded with the MVP honors going to Adam Ozment for offensive play and Brad Duffer on defense. The Mid-State Conference team included seven PHS seniors.

The reserve season record also upheld a great football tradition at PHS. Their 7-0 season featured major point spreads as 34-0 and 33-0 against Franklin and Avon. The Greensood Woodmen were the team's greatest competition resulting in a 25-21 victory.

The freshmen grid players fell short of the expectations held by Coach Meunier. His team concluded with an overall 2-5.

Girls' Tennis

Popularity catches on!

With the bad weather this spring, the girls' tennis team did not have much time to practice. The team did not do as well as they had anticipated. They ended with a 4-13 record. According to Coach Theobald, tennis is becoming very popular with girls, and many girls tried out for the team. The girls started the season with three matches a week. By May the girls were participating in tournaments almost every weekend. The team placed third in the county tourney and concluded with a sixth place finish in Mid-State Conference play. This year's MVP was Jodi Peters.

Marc Hamm concentrates on perfecting his forehand. Sharen Macek practices returning the ball to the opponent.

Jennifer Hickam volleys against her competition.

— Coach Muston

Boys' Tennis

Inexperience equals learning situation for all team members

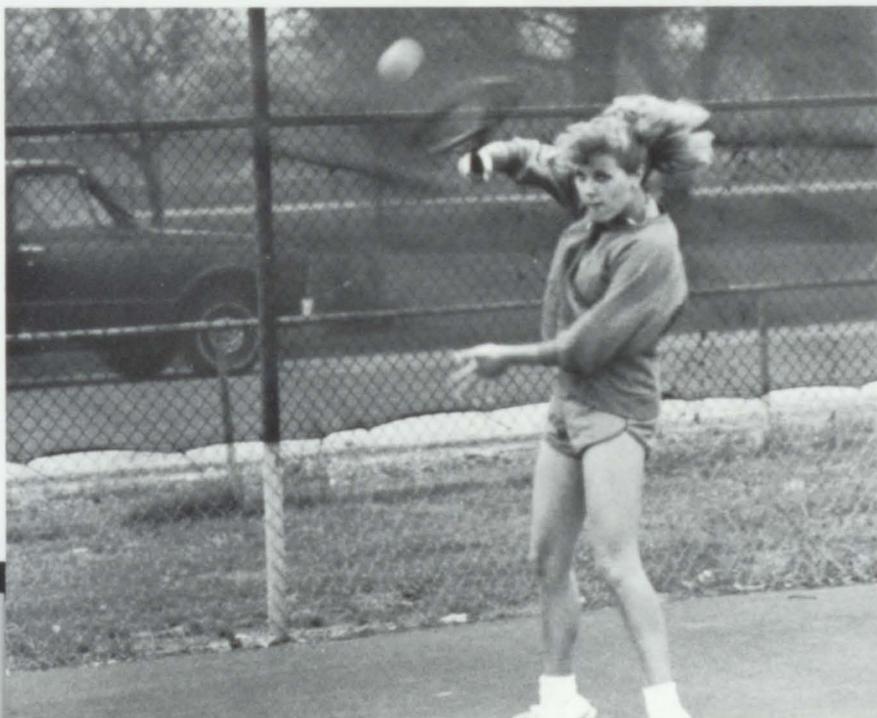

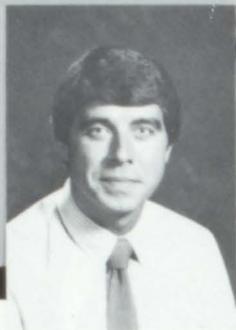

This year's boys' tennis team hoped for a better season. Although their 2-14 was less than spectacular, the team enjoyed the season. They were fairly young with five freshmen playing on the team and no seniors. Marc Hamm received the MVP honors, while Rashid Kourany was awarded the best mental attitude. The group placed second in the county but only finished seventh in the Mid-State Conference.

Jodi Peters follows through after she returns the ball, demonstrating her MVP status.

Rashid Kourany reacts after lobbing the ball. With hair flying and an awkward stance, senior Stacy McFarling slams the ball.

"This was as fine a group of young men that I've coached. They handled everything very well. This team was expected to win and they did."

Basketball—Boys & Girls

Mixed Records for Various Teams

The boys' varsity basketball team was expected to be hot this year, and they were. Finishing their season with a 20-6 record, the boys also earned titles in both the county and sectionals. The Quaker boys defeated Cascade, Avon, and Danville to clinch their second county title under Coach Bullington. Later in the season, the Quakers once again burned up the courts in Brownsburg, overpowering host Brownsburg, Avon, and in an exciting final game, Mooresville. The boys then headed to Frankfort with hopes of continuing their regional success of last year. They roasted the Hot Dogs in the first game, but lost a heartbreaking second game to McCutcheon.

Ralph Western was the recipient of the mental attitude plaque as well as the rebound award; co-captain Tim VanWanzeele received the four year award; ex-Warrior Todd Grace was awarded the plaques for free throws and MVP.

The reserve team also had an exceptional season finishing 13-7 while the freshmen concluded with a disappointing 3-13.

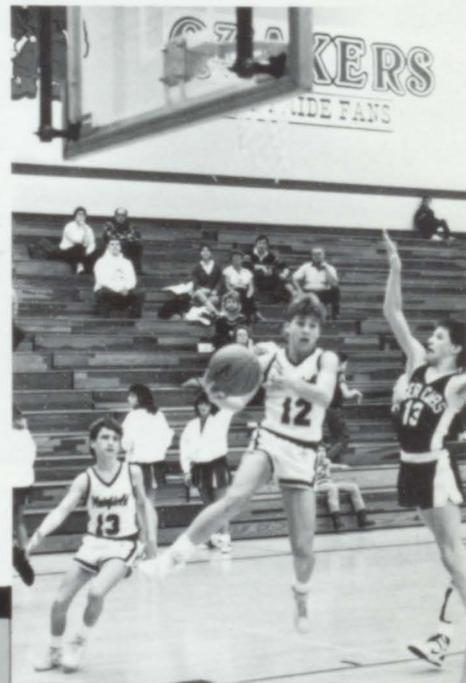

Ralph Western leaps to increase the score by two. Reserve players Josh Kendall and Rashid Kourany await a Hornet rebound. Freshman Brad Foster checks the opposition on the way to the basket.

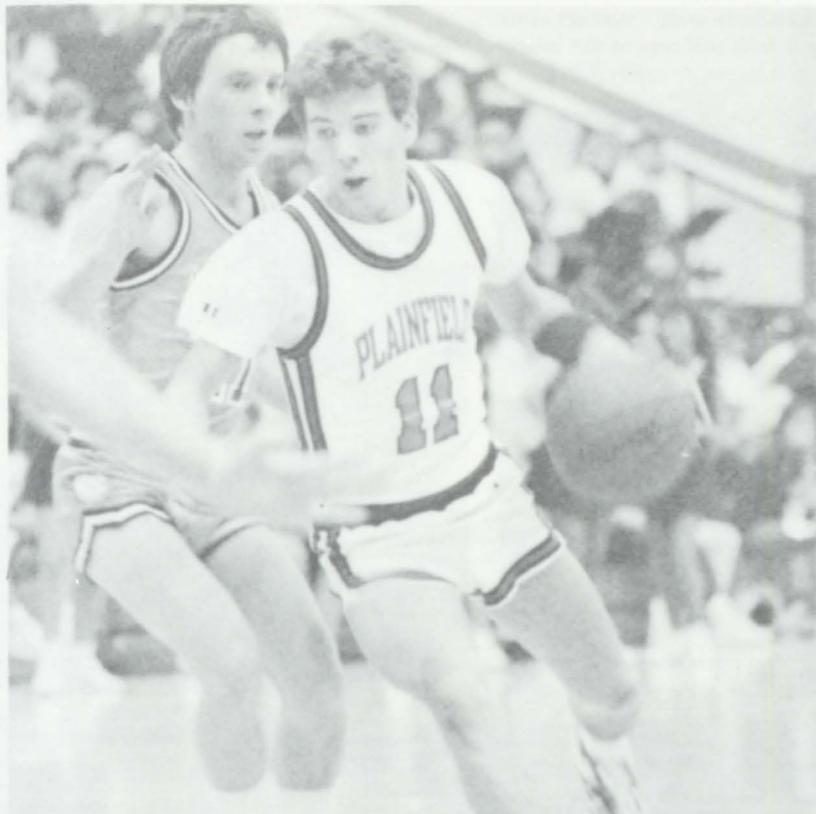

The girls' basketball season records left something to be desired. The varsity season concluded at 6-13. The first three games of the season were played at Avon during the county tourney with two victories. The Lady Quakers defeated Tri-West Thursday night by a score of 47-35 and on Saturday morning beat Danville 49-45. In Saturday night's championship game, Cascade played well to take a 49-38 victory.

Rebounding was a problem for the Quakers in addition to young, inexperienced players. Injuries and illness also plagued the season. Despite a less than outstanding season, captain honors went to Dena Welsh and Terrie Heinrichs. Terrie was also recognized as the Lady Quaker with the most assists while Suzie Van-Tryon received MVP attention. Junior Tonya Smith made her presence known with the most rebounds and an all conference position.

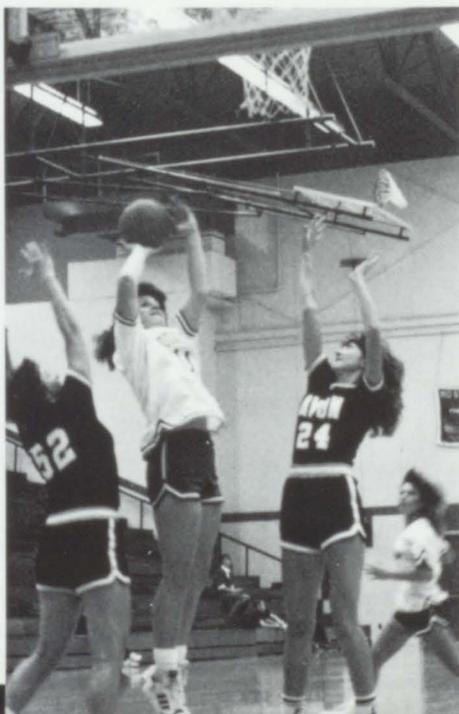

The reserve team, featuring numerous freshmen as a result of the cancellation of their season, came close to breaking even with a 6-7 record.

"Close . . . but no cigar."

Driving inside for the perfect vantage point, senior Todd Grace works around his defender. Freshman Michelle Chaille follows her fast break with a shot attempt as teammates Buffy Heckler and Beth McMartin await the results.

Leading rebounder Tonya Smith takes a jump shot over two Avon defenders. Playing quick hands defense are Tim VanWanzele and Mark Satterfield. Terrie Heinrichs struggles against two Avon defenders to clear the 10-second line.

"I see a lot of improvement, especially in the younger girls, who have really helped to put together a total team effort."

— Coach Rink

Gymnastics

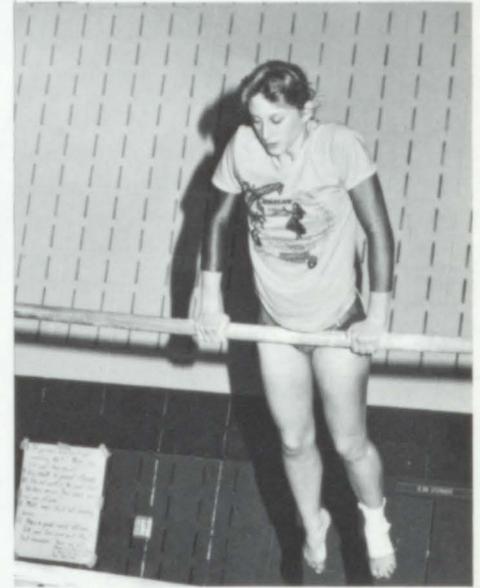

Balance is the key

This year's gymnastics team had a season of learning. The team had a few problems with injuries. Their season ended with a record of 6-10. The girls placed sixth in their sectional competition. Toward the end of the season, the team had learned what they needed to do to win. This year's captains were seniors Monica Grossi and Susie Richter. The recipient of the mental attitude award was Monica Grossi; Susie Richter received a four year award for her dedication to the team. The most valuable player was Debi Edmondson. There are high hopes among team members for fewer injuries and a better record next year.

Lori Long concentrates on every movement as she prepares to do a front walkover on the balance beam.

The parallel bars require a great deal of strength as demonstrated by junior Carolyn Klueg.

Debi Edmondson, the spotter, has an important job to perform for Mirien Fillmore.

Lori LaRoche and Monica Grossi nurse their injuries with ice bags on the sidelines.

"We had an unusual season in that as a team we did not play as well as we should have in many of our dual meets, but we did better than I had anticipated in the conference, county, and sectionals."

— Coach Baker

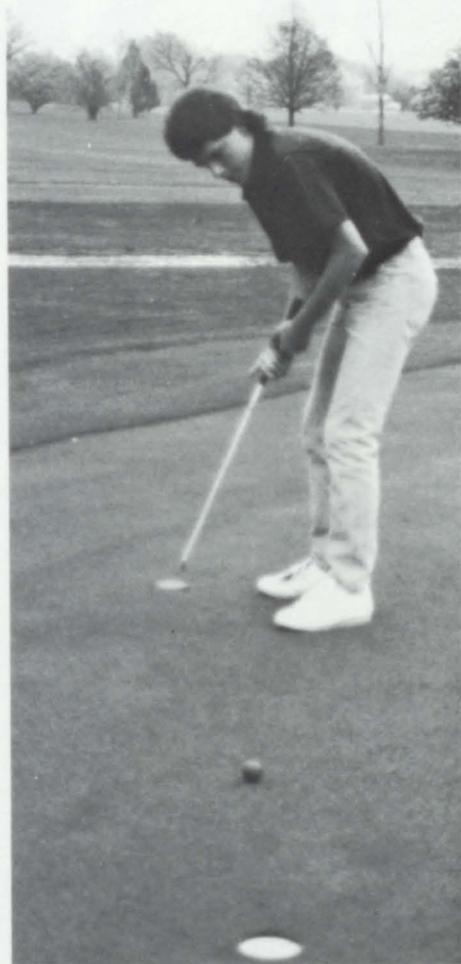

Golf

Bogey, Par Birdie, Eagle!

The golf team experienced an unusual season this year. They ended their season with a record of 4-10. At the Mid-State Conference meet the team placed fifth out of eight. Third place out of six was the county tourney showing, with a seventh out of fourteen teams in the sectional.

Awards for the year were presented to Brad St. John and Jerry Williams. Jerry, a junior, received the team award for most valuable player and the putting award. He was also selected as a member of the all conference team as well as the all tourney team at the county tourney. Senior Brad St. John was awarded the mental attitude award winner.

Perfecting his chipping game is Brad St. John.

Cross Country Across the Miles

The varsity boys' cross country team ended the season with an 8-7 record and the girls finished 2-5.

The boys team finished second in county, sixth in Mid-State, and seventh in sectionals. Senior Pat Costello received the four year award, junior Rusty Hughes received the mental attitude award, and junior Steve Viehe was honored as the most valuable player.

For the girls, the tourney results included fourth in county, fourth in Mid-State, and eleventh in sectionals. The most valuable player was junior Amy Floyd and sophomore Liane Hesson received the Mental Attitude Award.

One of the Hesson twins shows her endurance as she strives to pass her opponent.

Seemingly the only runner on the course, Eric Schafhauser concentrates on his stride.

The beginning of a cross country meet always looks like chaos, but with so many teams running in competition, this looks especially hectic.

Senior Brian Weida appears to have an advantage over his nearest Avon competitor.

Baseball

An American Tradition

The Quakers ended their season 20-10 including a long awaited sectional victory. Leading the Quakers throughout the season was Steve Crowe, who was named to the all senior regional outfielder team. Mike Fields, David Sturgeon, and Todd Grace all received honorable mention for the regional team, and Darby Carmichael and Chuck Martin also had strong performances throughout the season.

The Quakers became sectional champs by soundly defeating Eminence 14-3, and then Decatur Central 7-1. Plainfield was able to advance to the championship game of regionals by defeating Edgewood 1-0 in extra innings; then, they were defeated by Center Grove 5-0 in a no hitter. The mental attitude winner was Mike Fields and MVP honors went to Chuck Martin.

The reserve team showed a great deal of promise after losing their first two games to end the season 8-4.

Focusing on home plate after rounding third base, junior Jim Lautenschlager contemplates sliding in.

With the bat and ball a blur, junior Mark Satterfield takes a mighty swing in an attempt to get a hit.

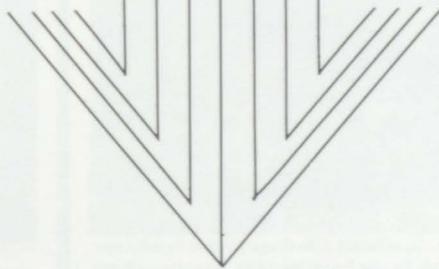

Senior Chuck Martin grimaces with the effort of the wind up just before releasing his fast ball.

Magazine covers tell stories. Local, national, and international events covered politics, religion, celebration, health, and numerous other topics.

Clockwise: The grandest of all celebrations was the July 4th, 1986 celebration of the 100th birthday of the statue of Liberty, rededicated with tall ships and a grandiose fireworks display. One major health concern is the rapid increase in the number of reported AIDS cases; so little is known about this disease and its victims that public reaction leans toward fear. A second major health problem in America is drugs and the continual misuse of illegal substances, recently heightened by cocaine and crack addiction. Jim and Tammy Bakker, Jerry Falwell, and Jimmy Swaggart do battle for the leadership of the PTL (Praise the Lord) television ministry involving scandal and millions of dollars.

National & International Newsmakers

Clockwise: The Democratic presidential bid by John Hart is destroyed when he is romantically linked with aspiring actress Donna Rice. In the British social event of the year, Prince Andrew took Sarah Ferguson to be his wife, thus bestowing Fergie with the title Duchess of York. Tax Reform breakthrough and spy scandal investigations merit news media attention. Women hired to have children for others fight for the right to keep the children they bear, and the Titantic, the ill fated luxury passenger liner sunk when it struck a glacier in 1912, is explored. The USS Stark is attacked by an Iraqi pilot in the Persian Gulf, killing 37 sailors and wounding 21 others. The Iran-Contra affair, an illegal U.S. arms deal with Iran, results in Congressional hearings, the firing of White House aide Oliver North, CIA investigations, and a flaw in President Reagan's credibility.

Clockwise: The Miami Vice craze, Don Johnson ("Hearbeat,") and Phillip Michael Thomas, continue to heat up Friday night television and fashion. "Ishtar," "Platoon," and "Secret of My Success" are just three of many hot movies this season. Continuing to make headlines with her music, Madonna's marriage to actor Sean Penn also caught the public eye. Award winning "Moonlighting," a TV hit, featured recently married Cybil Shepherd and Bruce Willis ("Return of Bruno," "Blind Date.") Genesis, whose album had more top 10 hits than any album ever including "Invisible Touch" and "In Too Deep" packed MSA. Cheers Sam (Ted Danson) and Diane (Hoosier Shelley Long) concluded their relationship. Whitney Houston's career explodes with two Indy appearances and songs like "The Greatest Love of All."

Television and theaters, sports and spending, cassettes and concerts, VCR's and videos provide pleasure. Celebrities are the key.

Clockwise: Sports news included the America's Cup in sailing, and NBA championship for the Laker's, a Mets' World Series, for the Giants, a Super Bowl, and a NCAA championship for the author of "A Season on the Brink" and his team, Bobby Knight and his Indiana Hoosiers. Sylvester Stallone makes millions with "Rocky" and "Rambo" movies and now "Cobra" and "Over the Top." "Pretty in Pink" and "The Breakfast Club" are among Molly Ringwald's credits. After David Lee Roth split with Van Halen, his career continued with hits like "Yankee Rose," "Goin' Crazy," and a remake of the Beach Boys hit, "California Girls." Death for entertainment greats Liberace, Cary Grant, Fred Astaire and Jackie Gleason sadden Hollywood. Heart's following grows with such singles as "Alone" and "Never."

ENTERTAINMENT COMES IN A VARIETY OF WAYS

Celebrities are in the spotlight every moment of every day. They enrich the lives of the public; entertainment is the name of their game.

Clockwise: Television superstars Bruce Willis and Cybil Shepherd star in "Moonlighting"; Max Headroom is the computer creation best know for his "catch the wave" promotion for Coca Cola but now has a weekly TV show. Ted Danson maintains a bar on "Cheers." Vanna White, the beautiful hostess of the "Wheel of Fortune," writes "Vanna Speaks," an autobiography of her rise to stardom. Bruce Springsteen released his ten year five record set; he is especially well know for his donations and songs to help the working class people. "Comic Relief," an HBO special to provide relief to the homeless, is one of the Whoopi Goldberg's accomplishments, along with the movies "Jumping Jack Flash," "The Color Purple," and "Burglar." Movies such as "Back to teh Future" and the "Secret of My Success" and TV's "Family Ties" seem well suited to the popular Michael J. Fox.

Clockwise: Princes's popularity began with "Purple Rain" and continues with the album and title song "Sign of the Times" and the movie he directs and stars in, "Under the Cherry Moon." After her concert at the state fair, Amy Grant, the popular gospel rock singer whose duet with Peter Cetera ("Next Time I Fall in Love") reached number one, becomes a popular performer. Rob Lowe's movie credits include "Oxford Blues" and "About Last Night"; he frequently appears as the companion of Princess Stephanie of Monaco. Van Halen, without David Lee Roth, performs "Best of Both Worlds." "That Was Then, This is Now" indicates the return of the Monkees, a 60's rock group. "Beverly Hills Cop" was so successful for Eddie Murphy, the release of "Beverly Hills Cop II" is a great success and discussion exists for a third movie. The Afterburner Tour of ZZ Top features hits like "Legs" and "Velcro Fly." "Kryie" is the pop single carrying Mr. Mister to the top of the charts.

MOVIES, MUSIC, TELEVISION, SPORTS ...

Clockwise: Monument Circle, the center of the city and the usual scene of the world's largest Christmas tree, is immersed in scaffolding for major cleaning and renovation. Internationally renowned is the Indianapolis 500 Mile Race; the month of May is dedicated to parties, the parade, and the race itself, which found Al Unser in Victory Lane this year. The Hyatt Regency reflects the state capitol in its windows; it is one of many downtown spots for activities including variety shops, the poinsettia tree at Christmas, and the Eagle's Nest Restaurant, a favorite dining place for prom goers high atop the building. Prom goers next year will be visiting the Convention Center, a location for a variety of activities from concerts to car shows; the Hoosier Dome is directly behind. The meeting place of the state legislature has been visited by PHS students on various occasions such as a visit to the governor's office, or to see the legislature in action, or to serve as a page; the sightseers find it a beautiful monument.

INDIANAPOLIS

HYATT REGENCY INDIANAPOLIS

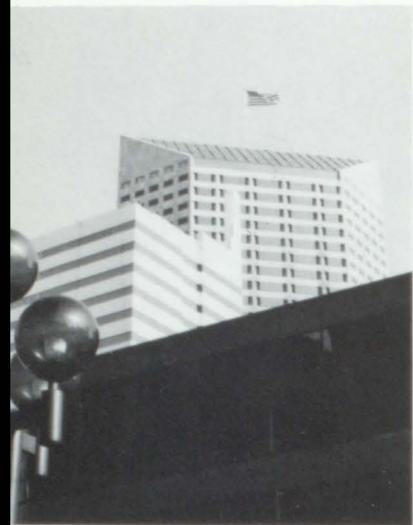

Sightseeing is great in Indy, but the activities are the best.

Clockwise: A new hot spot in Indy is Oliver's, an under 21 dance club located in Speedway and on the south side; the club allows a fun place to go and meet teens from other schools. The skyline itself features recent growth; the crane indicates present and future expansion. Dining out is a popular pastime for many people but high schoolers find themselves welcome for Mexican when they visit the popular Chi-Chi's either on U.S. 31 South or 38th Street. A ride around the track and race cars from the early 1900's are just two of the features of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Museum; the Borg-Warner Trophy which is presented to the Indy winners is also on display along with numerous photographs and memorabilia.

Skyline shows growth

Sightseeing, Restaurants & Entertainment

Clockwise: Featuring the tallest building in the city, the crane represents further building plans including a new tallest building, the Bank One Building. AP's field trip to see "Oh Mr. Faulkner, Do You Write?" takes them to the IRT downtown. This Market Street view of the capitol shows the beauty of the downtown area. Probably the highlight of downtown activities for teenagers is the recently renovated Union Station; shopping, games, pictures with celebrities, and especially eating in the food court are just a few of the many things to do, not to mention the entertainment (including PHS musical groups) and people-watching. Carriage rides, a recent addition to Indy night life, complete a romantic prom evening or top off a sightseeing trip in the snow at Christmas. By far the most popular teen activity is shopping malls; Lafayette Square is one popular spot, as is Greenwood mall.

Makes Indy a Great Neighbor

Clockwise: The flags, flowers, and steps mark the entrance of the Hoosier Dome. The Dome's bubble shaped top, supported by air, provides the roof for the Indianapolis Colts games, car shows, concerts and even Mud Bogging and Car Crushers. Shopping and food are the features in the Claypool Courts along with the Embassy Suites; Michel's Baquette in the lower level has been the scene of French Club dinners, while the exclusive upstairs Velvet Turtle opens its doors to pre-prom diners. The Columbia Club serves as the host to two PHS proms. Market Square Arena, the round home of the Indianapolis Pacers, supports rock music as the location of many Indy concerts. Italian food lovers love the Olive Garden with its delicious family style salad and garlic bread sticks. The Indy Zoo, scheduled to open in 1988 provides both an activity and jobs for PHS'ers.

The Many Faces of Coach Davis

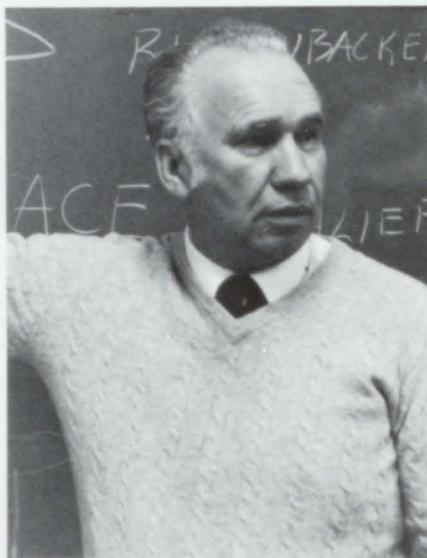

Mr. Kermit Davis has been a history teacher and coach for 36 years and has compiled a coaching record of 218 wins, 101 losses and six ties. He has coached teams to two undefeated seasons, 1971 and 1983, and won two consecutive cluster championships.

Coach Davis was reared in Dayton, Ohio, where he lettered in football, basketball and track at Dayton-Stivers High School, a national football and basketball power.

In his senior year Davis was named to the Ohio All State Football Team and was selected the most valuable player in the city of Dayton.

Immediately after graduation, Davis served with the Third Marine Division in Guam and Iwo Jima where he was awarded the purple heart. With return to civilian life as a student and football player at the University of Dayton, Davis majored in history and physical education. Recalled for the Korean War, Davis coached the Marine High School football team at Camp LeJeune.

His coaching career continued at Staunton, Miami Central and Brookville, Ohio. During this time, he authored two books, Drills for High School Football and Motivation and Morale Builders for Football which were used as university texts and sold nationally.

After receiving the Master's Degree from Xavier University in 1970, Davis moved to Plainfield with his wife Jean and sons Kelley and Kyle. He began teaching U.S. History and coaching football.

In 36 years, Davis has taught over 5,000 students and coached over 2,000 athletes. He received the "200 Game Winner" award from the Indiana Football Coaches Association in 1984. In his 17 years at Plainfield High School, he has had only one losing season.

Many activities were held to honor Coach Davis during the school year. On the day of Coach Davis's last home game, a breakfast was sponsored by the Student Council. Pre-game ceremonies that night included a USMC color guard, presentations from the team members, and further acknowledgments from his fellow coaches and the school. Post-game activities featured a reception in the cafeteria which was well attended by community, staff, players and former players honoring Coach Davis and his greatly appreciated dedication to the school.

Football team jackets were a popular item this year and the coach didn't get one, until his team captains made the presentation at the breakfast; presenting the jacket are Tommy Holzknicht, Adam Ozment and Brad Duffer while Coaches Conley, Greene, Teany, and Muston look on. From the sidelines, the Coach adjusts his glasses to check on an unbelievable call. The Coach and his family, wife Jean and sons Kyle and Kelley, hold just a few of the momentos presented in the pregame ceremonies. As Mr. Conley speaks, the other coaches await, with varying degrees of anticipation, a presentation to Kermit. The grim faces of former assistant principal Mike King and Coach Davis at the breakfast.

Dianne Rudy is recognized for her salutatorian status; Scott Ritchie achieved the honor of valedictorian. Receiving various types of recognition for the science fair are Amy Fanning, Dianne Rudy, Cristy McColly and in the back Eric Bennett, Brian Teany, Kary Bonham, Sherry Bailey.

RECOGNITION FOR ACHIEVEMENTS

Students and teachers are being recognized for achievements. The list of accomplishments for PHS teens is immense. There are sport and academic scholarships, grants and student loans, and always the non-monetary awards and privileges such as being a boys' or girls' state appointee or certificates for attendance or good SAT scores. The many and various honors received by the faculty and students of PHS are applauded by all.

The governor's office requested that two outstanding students be selected to participate in a day in government and luncheon with himself and other state officials. Several of those attending included State Senator Morris Mills, Kary Bonham, Allison Lich, Mr. Jackson, Lt. Gov. John Mutz.

142—Which Way Do We Go?

Boys' and Girls' State

PHS sends a few of our top junior students to Girls' and Boys' State during the summer.

Jeff Ferrell, Mark Satterfield, Troy White, and Jim Wilson will represent PHS for Boys' State. Rusty Hughes will serve as the alternate.

Attending Girls' State are Melissa Loy, Suzette Reed, and Jennifer Zuber. The alternates for these girls are Chris Gummer, Robin Hooton, and Mary Ann Wubbolding.

Both conferences are held in June at Indiana State University; the Boys' State conference is June 6-13 while the Girls' State conference is June 14-20.

The purpose of the meetings is to learn more about government. Other top students from all over Indiana also attend; longtime friendships are frequently established during a stay at one of the state conferences.

Those students chosen were selected by class ranking. The American Legion chose the boys and the American Legion Auxiliary chose the girls. The clubs read several transcripts from many students and after serious amounts of time and thought, they selected these students.

Trip to United Nations is Prize for Students

Sophomores Mirien Fillmore and Eric Schafhauser won the Odd Fellow's Lodge and the Rebekah's speech contest held on Sunday, March 8.

Each year the lodge sponsors this contest, the United Pilgrimage. It is offered to any sophomore or junior who wants to participate. The speech can be no longer than 150 words, and it must be tied to the United Nations.

Mirien's winning theme was describing the good points of the U.N. and how people usually only point out the bad points because it is easier to criticize than to praise. Eric's winning theme was a description of ways for youth in the United States to help the U.N. progress.

The winners of the contest are awarded a two week trip. They travel to several places over the two week period including Williamsburg, Gettysburg, Philadelphia, New York, Niagara Falls, Washington D.C., and the U.N. where they see some of the U.N. officials.

Distinguished Student = Free Food

The Distinguished Student Award is a program that went into effect this year. This award is designed to "catch people doing good in the halls, in class, and in the lunch room," according to Miss Hunt. The whole idea of this program is to give good students some recognition.

When a teacher sees someone doing something good, then the teacher will give the student a special slip of paper. The student is to fill out the required information and turn it in to the main office.

At the end of each week, ten students' slips will be drawn at random and those ten students will receive coupons for free food from a fast food restaurant.

The idea originated from a public relations conference Miss Hunt attended in December. The idea of a Distinguished Student Award comes from a similar program at a Wayne Township school.

Indy—Sports Capital of the World

Pan American Games—August 1987

The Pan American Games will take place in Indianapolis in August, 1987. The city is consumed with Pan Am fever as billboards appear everywhere, goodwill ambassador Amigo the Parrot makes many personal appearances (here seen at the Indy 500, but also Plainfield elementaries and Marsh), and ticket and memorabilia sales spots spring up. Students and teachers at PHS will be participating, some as guides, translators, assistants in specific sports, and even in the gala opening put together by the Walt Disney Corporation, and the grand finale. The cry went out for volunteers and PHS will be represented in this international sports extravaganza.

Foreign Language Clubs

Activities: food, culture, Pan Am games . . .

The French, Spanish, and German clubs have had many activities this year. The foreign language clubs went out to eat at restaurants and tasted food from sauerkraut to fried ice cream! But that is not all the clubs did; they also went to Union Station at Halloween discovering the haunted house and at Christmas time, buying gifts. Other times the French and Spanish students went to see some plays at Warren High School such as the French play Cyrano de Bergerac and a program of Spanish music and dance. Some Spanish students took in the mini Pan Am games and won three of their events. They also participated in the model O.A.S. (Organization of American States). One of the last events enjoyed was a trip to Kings Island for Spanish Club and their guests.

Using the chalkboard to illustrate a point, Mrs. Mike-sell instructs her class.

Various studying techniques are demonstrated in French class by Larry Boxler and Scott Ritchie.

Mrs. McAllister's relaxed teaching style is just one of many reasons students enjoy studying language.

Funny Foreign Friends

Our lives were enriched; hopefully, they felt the same.

Our Time at PHS

We laughed and laughed at Mr. Teany's jokes.

And we had a great time in the lounge drinking Cokes.

The lockers gave us a really hard time.

Oh my gosh! I'm not standing in front of mine!

We always ran from hall to hall

But we never knew where we were at all.

Mr. Conley read us the sport fact very fast

And how come we always were in the cafeteria line last?

We learned how to eat American junk food
And we ate at every fast food place in the neighborhood.

The three of us liked being exchange students very much.

We hope to always keep in touch.

Because all the time we had together

We will remember forever!

English and Social Studies

CHAP, PREP, Sociology, World History, Psychology, ELS, Writer's Gallery, Etc.

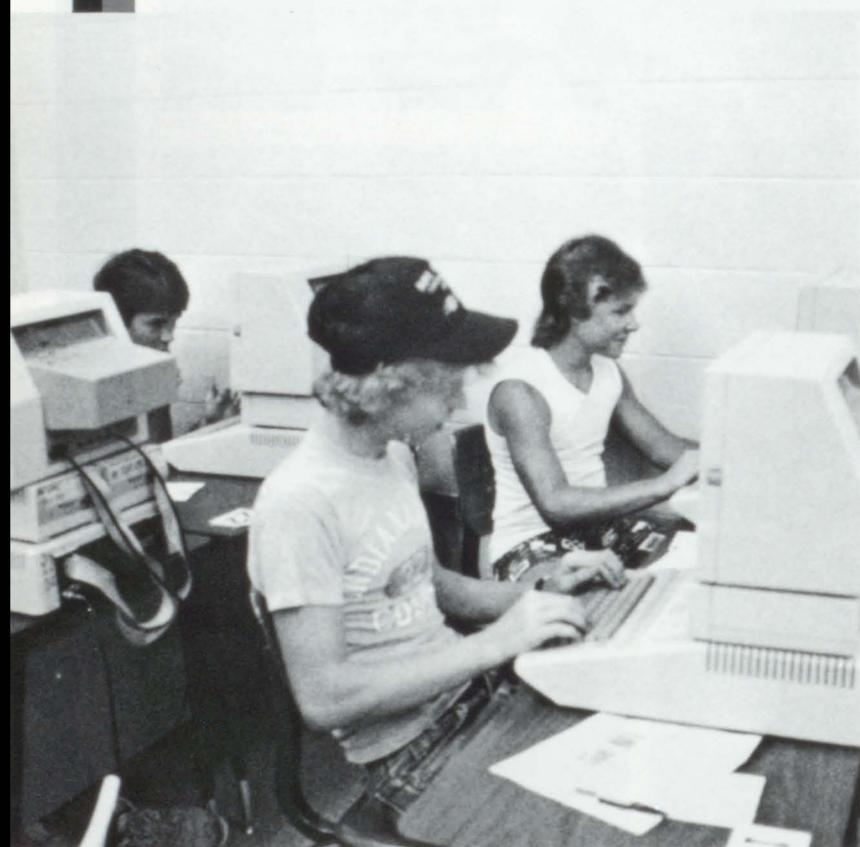

A psychology field trip found PHS students delivering clothing gifts at LaRue Carter Hospital in Indianapolis.

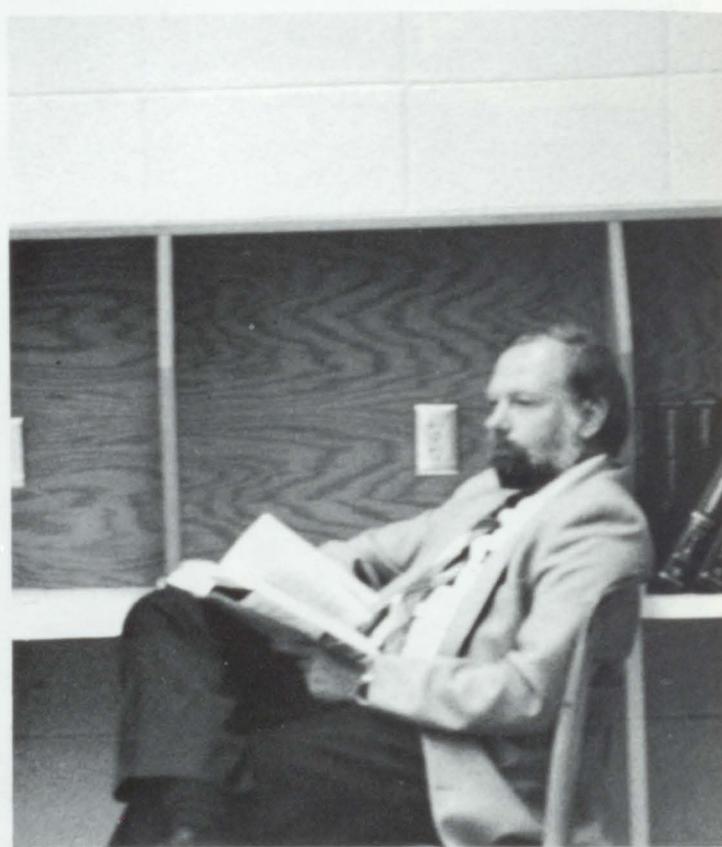

The social studies department again offered many choices. Two new classes were conducted for the first time: thinking skills and current problems. In addition, the standbys of U.S., Indiana, and world history were presented along with European history, sociology and psychology. Seniors completed their required government and econ classes.

Field trips were popular activities in the social studies department. One such trip featured a visit to LaRue Carter where students viewed a brain scan used before, during, and after shock.

Econ projects this year involved the packaging and sale of gummi bears and sunglasses.

The computer lab was a familiar location to students of writing classes. The new Zenith computers along with the new WordPerfect program meant additional instruction time.

Nonchalantly overseeing his CHAP students, Mr. Sweeney glances up to survey the activity.

The English Department spent time preparing to meet the new state requirements of four years of English for every student. Beside these plans, the routine included themes, term papers, short stories, novels, plays, vocab, spelling, etc. . . . The freshmen dealt with the dreaded writer's gallery, speech, fiction and ELS, while sophs chose CHAP or the two quarters of American lit with basic comp and expository writing. Two quarters of British lit occupy the juniors along with PREP and advanced comp. AP or senior English were the senior selections.

CHAP (Cultural History of the American People) combines the study of literature and history. Besides the normal classroom activities, the two CHAP groups enjoyed a Waffle House breakfast, a day in New Harmony, and an end of the year party.

Stickers on spring break sunglasses occupy Mr. Theobald's econ class.

Students discuss the sights they saw at I.U. Beckey Antibus concentrates on her pottery assignment

The art department consist of many classes. These classes such as; metalsmithing, commercial design, painting and drawing, and crafts, allow a big variety for the students. The department also gives the chance of seeing the work of up and coming artist. During the year many artists come to display their work and give demonstrations. Also, they gave the kids a chance to visit Indiana University and tour the art facilities and classes offered there. This years art club's gift to the basketball team during sectionals will not be forgotten, the Max Headrom picture. Finally, at the end of the year the students got a chance to show off their talent. This took place in an art show in the front hall and the art showcases around the school.

During open house, parents and students alike check the art displays in Mrs. Steck's room.

Some of the art students mingle in front of the statue at I.U. during a field trip.

Drama

Lights, camera, action . . .

Drama, the world of fine arts. The officers for this year's club were Robin Hughes—pres., Sarah Hampton—vice, Julie Kennedy—treasurer, Tracy Cadwell—secretary, and Jennifer O'Conner—historian. The main projects of the year was helping with the fall production and the spring variety show. The groups participation stemmed from building sets, doing makeup, and selling tickets, to acting on stage. They also got together for a party during the Christmas season. A small portion of the group did two short plays for a local ladies' club. The group hopes that in years to come they will grow to be a bigger group and acquire more members in the International Thespian Society, a nationwide acting organization.

Working diligently on the Up The Down Staircase set is Cindy Cox.

Pantomime is an art form that drama students must perfect. Dwayne Smotherman, Sarah Hampton, Jennifer Rice, Tracy Cadwell, James Swinney, and Cindy Hiland appear to be moving in slow motion.

Science and Computers

Programming, Graphics, Experiments and Dissection

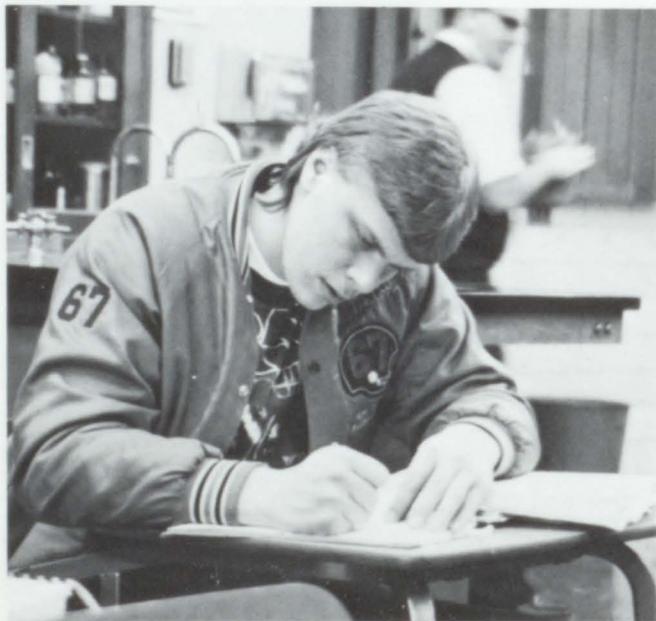

This year many students chose to fill their schedules with science and computer classes. In the science department they chose courses like biology 1-2 for freshmen, biology 3-4 for sophomores, chemistry for the juniors, and the seniors chose the advanced classes. These classes allowed a variety from dissecting grasshoppers and pigs to doing scientific experiments. Some of the science students chose to take science research and complete their own projects for the science fair.

Computers were a part of the math, business, and English programs. The math classes held the courses of computer programming and graphics. The big computer class for the business department was word processing. Computer use was also an important part of all writing classes in the English department.

Adam Ozment and Kary Bonham discuss the results of a chemical test in advanced chemistry.

Sherry Bailey and Amy Sukay work with ease on the computers.

Math and Business

Equations, Proofs, Words per Minute and Jobs

For students of the math department, triangle, formula, equation, and theorem were familiar. The department offered many of the usual courses. The students made their way through the classes of algebra, general math, geometry, calculus, and trig, plus all the other courses offered to them. Though the students needed only two years of math, they still kept the classes filled.

For the students with more of a business yearning, the front hall becomes familiar. The business department allowed the students to choose from the courses ranging from general business, typing, and shorthand, to those of accounting and distributive education. Those students who chose the DE course were allowed the privilege of leaving school early to join the business world. The department also gave their students the chance to get involved outside of class. They could do this by joining DECA or OEA.

Becky Swallow and Chris Gummer increase their efficiency with timed writings.

Plainfield students gather at a DECA conference.

Mr. Brodie explains the basics of algebra.

Student Council

Parade, Dance, Breakfast, and Welfare

This year's Student Council kept themselves busy. Their first event was the planning of homecoming. The group also sponsored many dances. These dances were a homecoming dance, one in December, a Valentine's dance, and a spring break dance/recreation night. At the end of the football season, they sponsored a breakfast for retiring football coach, Kermit Davis. During the Christmas season, the group collected money during the lunch periods. This money was used to help out a needy family. The money went toward providing food for a hearty Christmas dinner and for new kitchen utensils, clothing and toys for the children. The final event of their year was the election of next year's members. Those members of Student Council who are juniors helped with the graduation ceremony.

Retiring Coach Davis, seen here with Mrs. Davis and the team captains and coaches, was honored by the Student Council at a fall breakfast.

One of several Student Council dances is the scene of a good time for sophomore Chastidy Good.

Initiation, Union Station, Service

Descending the steps of the haunted train at Union Station are Mrs. Bowman and Christy Chitwood.

The new initiates are addressed by Allison Lich.

Honor Society is a club for students able to meet set requirements. Only students with an overall 3.46 grade point average are eligible. Those students in this category are then evaluated in terms of their character, leadership, and service. This year's group consisted of 45 juniors and seniors.

In October the senior members of the group took a trip to Union Station. They had an evening full of fun and fright. The students shopped, played games, and took a trip through the haunted train. The seniors also planned the juniors' initiation ceremony. The officers, President Scott Ritchie, Vice-President Larry Boxler, and Secretary-Treasurer Allison Lich, presented speeches during the program. Mrs. Bowman, sponsor, initiated the new members into the group. The evening ended with conversation and refreshments.

Punch preparation was the task assigned to Dianne Rudy and Julie Spielman.

Christy Chitwood prepares to serve the refreshments to the new initiates, members, faculty, and parents.

Recording the Memories

After a lot of laughter, sweat, problems, headaches, and maybe some craziness, the newspapers and yearbook were finally published. Both staffs had a year long job of meeting deadlines, but those deadlines always seemed to sneak up on the staffs.

For the newspaper staff a mad rush to stay on schedule included weekend meetings, coming in early and leaving late, and lots of last minute changes. They write, photograph, print, and distribute nine newspapers a year with the help of the graphic arts department.

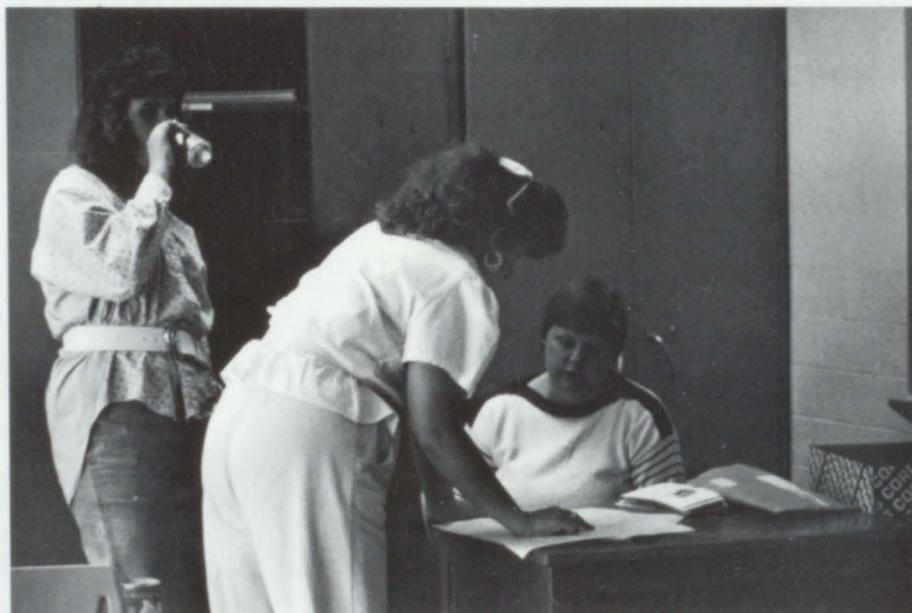

The yearbook staff has year long deadlines to meet as well. The year starts smoothly with one meeting per week, but when the school year came to an end and the book needed to be finalized, meetings came almost nightly. For both staffs, problems arose such as someone who missed their copy deadline, or no pictures had been taken of a sport that had completed its season for the year.

After the last issue of the paper had been delivered and the yearbook was completed the end of June, both staffs were able to reflect on jobs well done.

With refreshment at her side, Julie Boulware attempts the basketball layout.

Drawing layouts and trying to get the copy in the appropriate space is Tammy James.

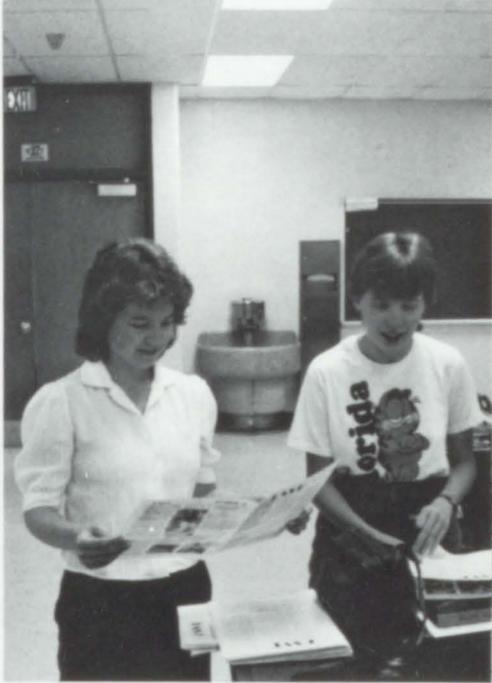

As Ann Heffleman looks on, Julie Spielman consults with Mrs. Long on a specific problem.

Choirs

Public Performances Popular

1986-87 was a busy year for the Plainfield choral department. Belles et Beaux opened the year with a performance in the annual Quaker Day Parade and received first place in their division. In early October, Belles et Beaux and Men's Ensemble performed for the Indiana School Board Association and the Indiana Secondary School Administrators at the Convention Center, receiving high praise from board members and administrators around the state. Belles et Beaux also performed at the Indiana Swing Choir Showcase in Zionsville on November 8.

As always, the choirs had many performances during the Christmas season. The Madrigals performed for the Rotary Club, the Bridgeport Brass, and at a Madrigal dinner at an Indianapolis church. Concert Choir, Chamber Choir, and Belles et Beaux performed at Union Station during December. The choirs usually perform on the Circle during the Christmas season, but due to the renovation of the Soldiers and Sailors Monument, that wasn't possible this year. The choral department ended the Christmas season with the Christmas concert at school.

Belles et Beaux were busy with contests the first part of '87, attending the Beech Grove Swing Choir Invitational on January 24 and the Watseka Show Choir Invitational in Watseka, Illinois on February 21. The majority of students in the choral department attended District Solo and Ensemble Contest at Lebanon on February 7 with over 90% of the participants receiving first place medals. Solos and ensembles who received a first place rating in Division I advanced to the State Solo and Ensemble Contest at Southport High School on February 28.

Spring performances included Organizational Contest for Concert and Chamber Choirs on April 11 as well as the annual spring choral concert held on May 6. The Sensation '87 performance by Belles et Beaux ended the choral department's busy and successful year.

All eyes are on the director, Mr. Sims, as the chamber choir entertains Christmas shoppers at Union Station.

Junior Julie Brandenburg and senior Todd Brownewell put all they've got into the choreography.

Facial expressions vary in this performance as demonstrated by juniors Robin Hooton, Steve Cobb, and Julie Kennedy.

Julie Kennedy, Todd Fishel, Christy Chitwood, and Tammy James are front and center for this selection.

Senior Gordon Peel and junior Jennifer Hickam vocalize a solemn tune.

Final instructions to the pianist occupy Mr. Sims as the choir prepares to perform.

The alto section rehearses their part of a selection during class.

Cookie-grams, adopt-a-grandparent, Ronald McDonald House . . .

Helping the people in the community is a goal of Future Homemakers of America (FHA). Another purpose of the club is to give teens who are not into sports or academic programs a chance to get involved with others and have a good time.

Future Homemakers of America gives people the wrong impression that the club is only for girls, and they only participate in "corny" projects. This year is just the second year for the club at PHS, so new ideas are welcome and used.

FHA visited the Ronald McDonald house early this year. They offered refreshments to the parents of the kids there. They also received a tour of the facilities. The club also has an adopt-a-grandparent program at Autumn Care Nursing Home; the whole club paid them a visit at Thanksgiving time. An in school program they have is cookie-grams at Valentine's time.

Jennifer O'Conner is seen with a child from Riley Hospital while on an FHA field trip.

Posing for a picture, Ambara Abdi, Angie Plew, Janice Coltharp and Jaime Gillum lend support to this infant.

A profitable fun raiser for the FHA is the cookie-gram program sponsored by FHA. At right, Kelly McDaniel and Mrs. Obert check on an accurate count while Donna Goda writes the cards to accompany the cookies. Above, Melissa Ryan and Tammy Smith work on the messages.

Vocational

Shop, Home Ec., Ben Davis

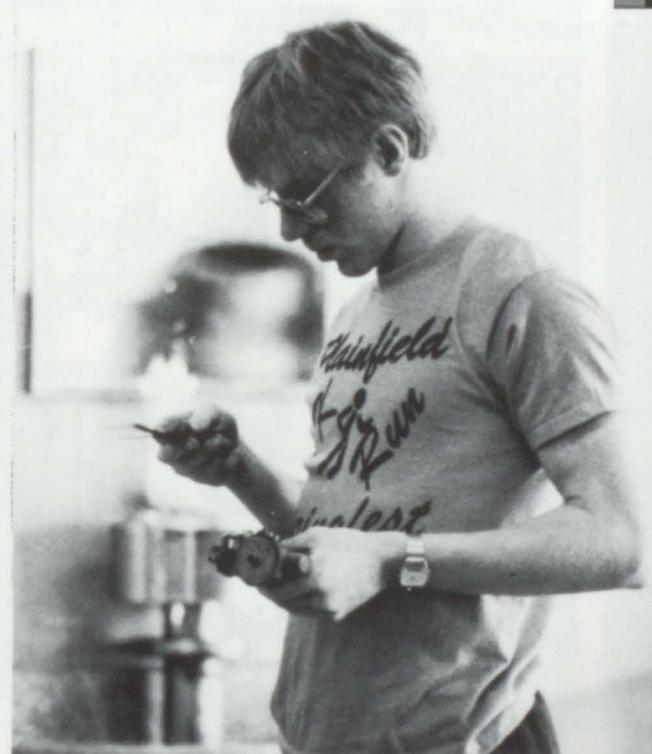

The vocational department at PHS offers a large variety for its students. The home ec department has classes spanning from traditional cooking and sewing to child care and interior decorating. Even the guys get into the act with single survival classes. The shop department also has many choices. These range from wood-working to auto mechanics. This year the department has a new member to its family, photography.

There is an opportunity for those who really enjoy vocations to travel to Ben Davis. In this program they may take classes in areas such as: computer programming, with languages other than basic, cosmology, and a foods department specializing in cafeteria and chef's school.

Concentrating on the next step before putting pencil to paper is Scott Viehe in architectural drawing.

The child development class gains practical experience with children through a play school run and taught by members of the class. Tracy Cadwell assists a participant of the program which is open to area three and four year olds.

To examine the parts to find the difficulty is the first step to repair. Here Ron Deken scrutinizes the parts to be worked on.

Marching Band and Guard

Red Pride Spirit and All That Jazz

Ann Heffelman and Dianne Rudy pose for the camera.

The theme was jazz and the Plainfield Red Pride Marching Band serenaded the crowd, as in "Moonlight Serenade," this season. The band kept jazz alive in the 80's, also with "Wind Machine", "Maleguena", and "Bones for Basie". The band was young this year with over half of the members freshmen. But the few seniors that the band had led the marchers through the season. Although the band did not make it to the Hoosier Dome for state finals, the members felt that they had a learning experience. The highlight of the year, according to band members, was the trip to Akron, Ohio. The band participated in a Marching Bands of America contest. In Ohio, the band and flag corps slept in an elementary school on the hard concrete floors. The marching band could not wait until the next year. Although the seniors would be sorely missed, the band will have high hopes for the coming year!

Trying to jazz up the show are Larry Heckathorn, Richard Slayten, and Dan Janik, saxophone players.

Denise Boles reviews the routine one last time prior to the performance.

The bus trips home require a little craziness as demonstrated by Julie Green, Amy Fanning, Allison Lich, and Connie Thomas. The trumpet section, Brian Livingston, Dean Richardson, and Scott Frisbie, performs at halftime. Drum majors Amy Fanning, Kary Bonham, and Lori Ping did a fine job this season.

Mandy VanHorn concentrates on double flag technique. At right, backing each other up are the color guard members. Below, Shelley Powell impersonates, in the Christmas spirit, a reindeer.

Winter Guard

"Sunrises and Sunsets"

Julie Schroer and Niki Badour relax after competition. Leah Massingale receives assistance constructing background props for color guard performances.

Guard members practice with their homemade flags. Striving for a perfect performance, flag corps members twirl their flags.

The Red Pride Winter Guard's theme this year was sunrises and sunsets in the forest. The guard members pretended to be fairies in control of the forest. They were dressed in hot pink and white costumes with little mini-skirts. The show was very colorful with turquoise, purple, orange, red, and blue flags. The guard members received the sixteenth spot at preliminaries and barely missed getting into state finals by one point. According to the members of winter guard, the trip to Chicago was one of their most enjoyable experiences. The captain of the guard was Debbie Newlin and the rifle members were Becky Antibus, Denise Boles, Kim Bonham, Jennifer Cassidy, Debbie Newlin, Julie Schroer, Janet Schwartz, and Shannon Tharp. It was an honor to be a rifle member because it took a lot of practice time and skill to become proficient at it. While the guard will not be as big next year as the last, the guard members will be just as good.

Courses

Casual Classroom Conduct

Senior Missie McKinley preps for a French exam.

Jeff McClain and Jamey Boyd are just two of the industrious econ students working on the spring break sunglasses project.

Whatever the concoction, Adam Ozment seems intent on his creation in the lab.

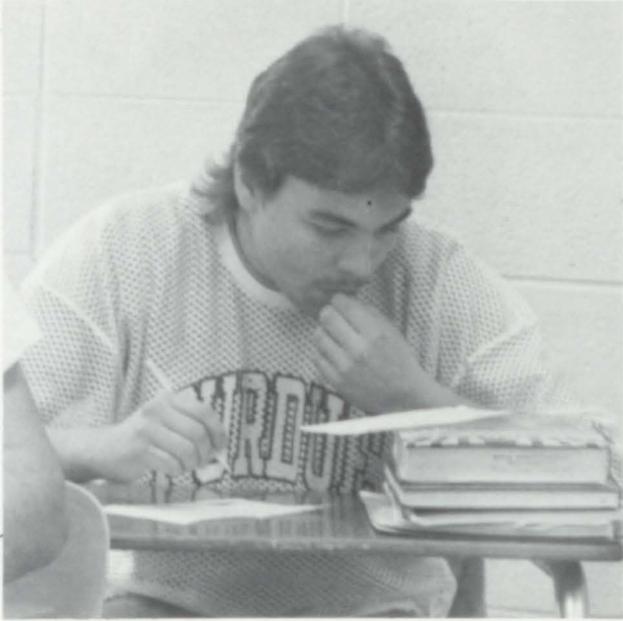

Elaborating on his subject through hand motions, Mr. Milburn makes a point.

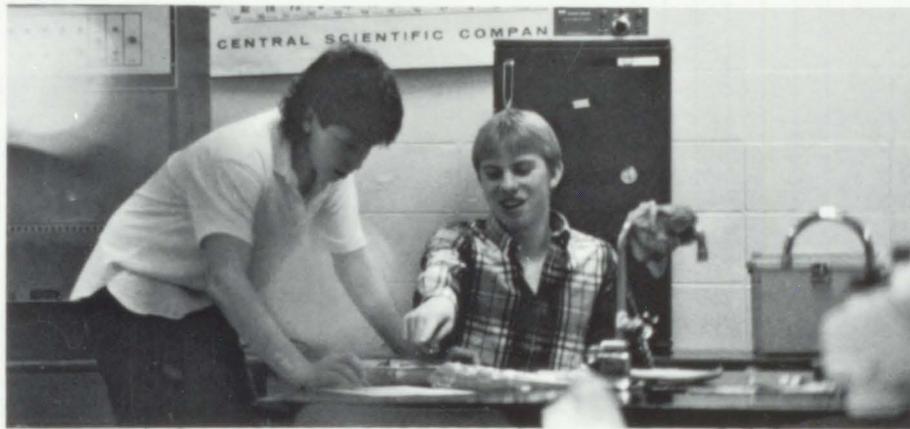

Another sports fact, lunch menu, or maybe even some government has Mr. Conley entertaining his class.

If you hold your mouth just so, the physics problem will surely get easier, or so Todd Murray seems to believe.

To get a break from chemistry, Karen McGhee and Terrie Heinrichs are attentive to the person behind the camera.

Above, Joe Hummel and Eric Schafhauser discuss and analyze their pig dissection. The overhead projector proves a useful tool for geometry instruction in Mrs. Taylor's class.

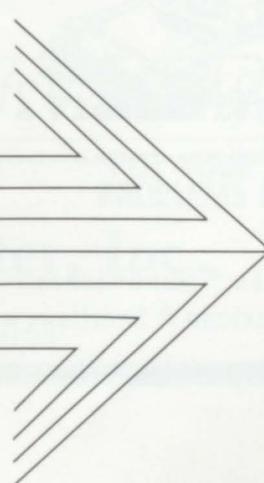

Above, the expressions of Jim Wilson and Ron Deken indicate their sorrow over parting with the chemistry text but in actuality, new science texts have been adopted for next year. Because she's usually the one taking the pictures, Lori Parvin is not frequently photographed.

Year in Retrospect

Clockwise: Practicing for "Perfection," freshman Shelley VanWanzeele tries out family Christmas gifts. Junior David Puterbaugh enjoys a light moment at the conclusion of class. Allison Lich doesn't seem to be taking fellow senior Debbi Reemer's mood very seriously during an Honor Society trip to Union Station. Julie Kennedy's role in The Mikado demands an irate expression as a result of unexpected events. Poised atop the bar, sophomore Debi Edmondson pauses for a moment just before the competition begins.

Clockwise: Christmas season finds Chris McFarling on a family outing to find the right tree for trimming. Florida wasn't what was anticipated over spring break as shown by Mrs. Kellogg's Panama City wardrobe. Post prom brings out the best attire in all as Ben Wolfe sports Hawaiian, Martian, Indy, Quaker, and athlete all at once. Although traditionally considered a male domain, Judith Kelly shows that a female's place may not be just in the home. To keep track of what books are where when is one many tasks assigned to library employee junior Sabrina Bryant.

Adviser's Message

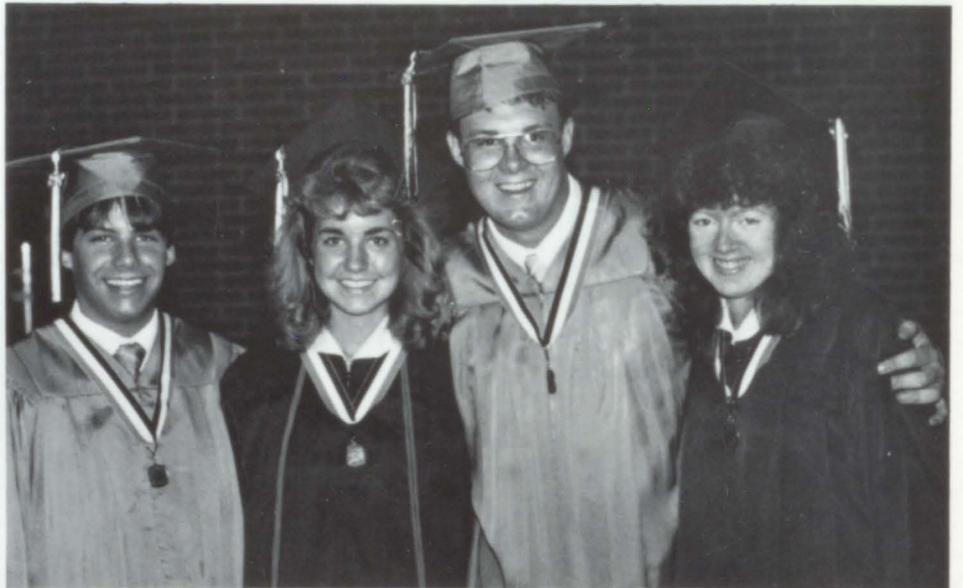

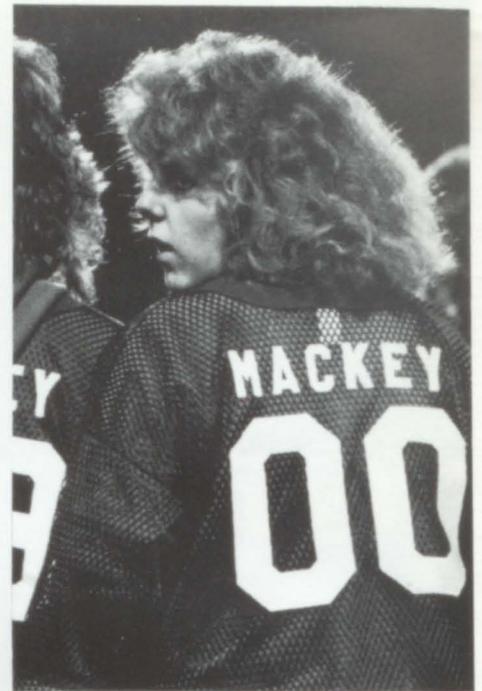

To say this was the toughest of my three yearbooks is vastly understating the difficulties encountered in the production of this book. "Which Way Do We Go?" started out as a yearbook theme implying many decisions are made by students - sports, jobs, music, academics, clubs, dates ... Personally, it was a question of what to do at the end of the school year with half of the yearbook complete, a very small but busy staff with summer jobs and vacations. I offer a very special thanks especially to those non-staff members who worked into Luly to complete "Which Way Do We Go?" These include Michelle Chaille, Jamie Goss, Jennifer Lane, Kim McMains, Shelley VanWanzele, Miss Robbie Hunt, and Mrs. Carol Kellogg.

Additional thanks are extended to the staff and editors as well as the students, parents, teachers, Lifetsuch School Pictures, Fantasy Photography, and especially Lori Parvin, for the many photographs needed to produce this book. Cover design credit goes to Mrs. Susan Chaille. The extensive assistance of Mrs. Marcia Overfield, Herff Jones representative, provided invaluable especially in the preparation of the sixty-one pages featuring color.

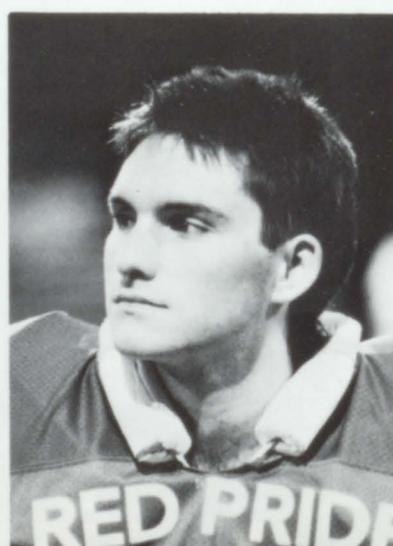

It's July - - - time to think about next year's yearbook - staff, theme, ads, color, cover, editor, photographers, pictures, etc.

"Which Way Do We Go?"

Sincerely,
Mrs. Connie Long
Yearbook Adviser

Seniors Look to Future

Senior's Message

The year has passed so quickly and it seems like just yesterday we were all in the same place, looking at each other and wondering how we got here. It's hard to believe that we are now seniors, the ones who were once the newcomers. We have grown so much in so many ways, and it's all thanks to the people who have supported us along the way. We are proud of what we have accomplished and excited for the future. We will miss the days of our high school life, but we know that the memories will stay with us forever. We are grateful for the love and support of our families and friends, and we know that they will always be there for us. We are looking forward to the next chapter of our lives and the adventures that await us. We are seniors, and we are proud to be here.

We have learned so much from our teachers and friends, and we are grateful for the experiences that have shaped us. We have grown as individuals and as a community, and we are proud of the progress we have made. We are excited to see what the future holds for us and for our school. We are seniors, and we are proud to be here.

We are seniors, and we are proud to be here. We are looking forward to the future and the adventures that await us. We are grateful for the love and support of our families and friends, and we know that they will always be there for us. We are seniors, and we are proud to be here.

Senior's Thoughts

As I look back on my high school years, I realize that the most important thing I learned was to be a team player. I was part of several sports teams, and I learned that success often comes from working together. I also learned to be resilient. There were many challenges, but I always found a way to overcome them. I am grateful for the friends I made and the memories I created. I look forward to the future with a sense of optimism and hope.

My favorite memory is from my senior year. We had a school-wide event, and everyone participated. It was a great day, and I will never forget it. I also enjoyed my time in the classroom. I learned a lot from my teachers and classmates. I am proud of the accomplishments I achieved and the challenges I overcame. I am excited to see what the future holds for me.

I want to thank my family and friends for their support and encouragement. I am grateful for the love and care that I have received. I am excited to start my new journey and to see what I can achieve. I am confident that I will succeed and that I will make a positive impact on the world.

Seniors Look to Future

As the school year comes to a close, seniors are looking forward to the future. Many are planning to attend college, while others are entering the workforce. They are excited to see what new challenges and opportunities await them. They are confident that they will succeed and that they will make a positive impact on the world.

Seniors are also reflecting on their high school years. They are grateful for the friends they made and the memories they created. They are proud of the accomplishments they achieved and the challenges they overcame. They are excited to start their new journey and to see what they can achieve.

Colophon

Volume 31 of the Plainfield High School Silhouettes was printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks, Montgomery, Alabama. Marcia Overfield served as our representative, and Debbie Kennedy was our customer service advisor.

The laminated cover was designed by Susan E. Chaille. Newbury type was used on the cover with mixed process colors used for the arrows. The endsheets were designed to continue the theme and color scheme of "Which Way Do We Go?" Bordeaux Special 80 pound paper was used along with Colortext paper for the endsheet and mini-mag sections. The body type, set in 10 pt., and the captions, set in 8 pt., are in Souvenir Light. Various other type styles were chosen from the Herff Jones Deluxe Type Book.

The color senior portraits were taken by Ken Whittington of Fantasy Photography. Other photos were contributed by student photographers, faculty members, Lifetouch National School Studios, and Fantasy Photography.

Six hundred yearbooks were printed and shipped in the late summer of 1987 at the original cost of $17.00 per book.
